TREATY FOR LIMITATION OF NAVIES TAKES FORM

Under Leadership of Morrow, Committee of Jurists in London Hopes to Have It Ready for Signature Before Easter.

ALL AGREEMENTS IN SINGLE PACT

U. S. Advisers Not Enthusiastic Over Scrapping of Battleships, but Are Hopeful Congress Will Provide "Orderly Building."

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1930, by the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, April 12.—With Ambassador Morrow at the helm, the committee of jurists framing a naval treaty, went full steam ahead today in an effort to get the document ready for signature before Easter. Morrow has been one of the main driving forces throughout the conference and particularly during the last few days. His aim was to have a rough draft of the treaty in such a shape by tonight that copies of all or parts of it could be handed to the principal delegates for examination tomorrow.

Whether or not the treaty can be signed next Thursday, as American delegates earnestly hope, depends largely on the time that will be required for final approval of the draft by the governments concerned. Delay may be occasioned if the Japanese have to send the treaty home and wait for formal approval.

Hope for Windup April 22.

If the concluding plenary session is not possible Thursday, postponement over Good Friday and Easter Monday appears inevitable. The American delegates, in that event, hope for the windup Tuesday, April 22, which would permit them to use reservations already made on the Leviathan. The Leviathan is scheduled to sail that day, but on request would be held back a day or so to accommodate the American official party.

The plan to wrap up all conference agreements within a single treaty continues unchanged.

Next to the last plenary session will be held Monday to receive final reports of this committee of the whole, which finished its work today.

From the point of view of the American naval officers, who have been advising our delegates on technical problems, the treaty is not all that could be desired. It is no secret, for example, that most of them would have liked to see the United States come off with 21 eight-inch gun cruisers instead of 18. They are resigned to the accelerated scrapping of battleships, but are not enthusiastic over it.

At Variance With U. S. Policy.

Every step in this direction is seen by Navy men and correctly seen as a step toward possible complete abolition of capital ships. This prospect is wholly out of line with the long-established policy of our general board.

But despite what they consider defects in the treaty, American naval experts derive a considerable degree of satisfaction from it. They are pleased that the uncertainty over the future of the Navy has been lessened and they are immensely hopeful that Congress, now that definite limitation has been established in all categories for each of the three principal naval Powers, will provide funds for an "orderly building" program over a term of years.

Ships to be Scrapped Under Definite Conference Program.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 12.—The committee assigned to the work of drafting the naval agreement labored at their task all through today and into the night. They were aided by special treaty experts under Sir Maurice Hankey, Secretary-General of the conference.

The experts waited outside the committee's room in St. James's Palace ready at a moment's notice to furnish advice on the precise wording of any doubtful clause.

Among the reports considered by the first committee today were

TRAIN SEIZED BY SHERIFF IN FLORIDA FOR TAXES

3 Atlantic Coast Line Locomotives and Other Stock Taken on Claim of $40,000.

By the Associated Press.

SEBRING, Fla., April 12.—Atlantic Coast Line passenger train No. 191, running between Haines City and Lake Placid, was seized here late today by Sheriff Oscar Wolff in an attachment order issued by State Comptroller Ernest Amos against the railroad for delinquent taxes. There were no passengers aboard. There was no interference with the mail.

Three other locomotives of the railroad, the only engines in Highlands County, also were seized, with miscellaneous freight cars, motor cars and other equipment.

Earlier in the day Sheriff had seized the Coast Line right-of-way and track.

County Attorney J. M. Lee and Sheriffs announced they were ready to hold for sale to the highest bidder for taxes all trains as they arrive. The back taxes, the County Attorney said, amounted to approximately $40,000, delinquent since last April 1.

PARTIAL ECLIPSE OF MOON VISIBLE HERE LAST NIGHT

Phenomenon Started at 11:21 P. M. and Lasted Two Hours, 15 Minutes.

A full moon riding high in the southeastern sky underwent a partial eclipse last night, beginning at 11:21 o'clock. The eclipse remained clearly visible for two hours and 15 minutes to St. Louis. At two minutes before midnight, the shadow of the earth reached its greatest extent, covering about a ninth of the moon's surface.

Shortly before 11 o'clock the penumbra, barely discernible shadow surrounding the umbra, or true shadow of the earth, began to dim the moon's brilliance at its lower right edge. At 11:21 the black umbra became visible, retreating after midnight, and disappearing at 1:36 a. m. today. The penumbra disappeared about half an hour later.

The phenomenon was visible in all sections of North America, wherever skies were clear. Astronomers, by timing the hazy penumbra, obtained data which they hope will enable them to compute some of the unknown weights of atmosphere in upper regions that help cause storms and wnd.

Zeppelin Home After Cruise.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany April 12.—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin landed safely late today after a nine-hour cruise during which she passed over Zurich, Lausanne, Berne, Interlaken and Basel.

The city Board of Equalization yesterday decided to increase the personal property assessments of 14 St. Louis banks and trust companies by a total of $35,293,000. The banks and trust companies are expected to resist the increase by court proceedings. About $950,000 taxes, for city, State and schools, is involved.

The question at issue is whether the banks and trust companies can obtain exemption, through the device of "inside" holding companies, from taxation on Government securities. The securities, non-taxable if held by another corporation, are taxable if included in the capital and surplus of a bank. Banks, however, are not taxed on the stock of corporations held by them. Therefore, the banks organize the "inside" holding concerns, turn over the Government securities to them, and the banks escape taxation on the stock of the holding companies, while the latter are not taxed on the securities. This arrangement was sanctioned in the so-called Orr case, taken to the State Supreme Court by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. in 1923.

Board to Take Matter to Court.

In its sessions of the past four weeks, the Board of Equalization has considered the situation resulting from the decision in the Orr case, and has decided to take the matter to court again, in the hope of a reversal. Charles J. Dolan, special counsel for the Board of Equalization, represented the board in hearings attended by bank officials.

"We find," the Board of Equalization says in its final report, issued yesterday, "that 14 banks and trust companies have withheld from assessment personal property amounting to $35,293,000. They take the position that the Supreme Court of Missouri has authorized the deductions which they have claimed, and that they are proceeding in accordance with the law.

Says It Works Injustice.

"The system, however, works an injustice against the remaining 42 banks that have not claimed such deductions but which have returned their capital and surplus for taxation at the full amount. Five of these banks have filed a protest against alleged discrimination resulting from the action of the aforesaid 14 banks. These five banks, all of them national banks, have protested against any assessment of their property in excess of 25 per cent of their capital, surplus and undivided profits, on the ground that other banks and trust companies coming into competition with them in St. Louis have returned their property at 25 per cent or less of their capital, surplus and undivided profits.

"We are unable to accede to the demand of the aforesaid national banks without nullifying the provisions of the statutes of Missouri relating to the taxation of all banks. In order to equalize the assessments of bank property in the City of St. Louis, the only course that we can consistently take is to increase the assessments of the 14 banks and trust companies so as to tax all alike on the full amount of their capital, surplus and undivided profits, less real estate separately taxed, and less personal property amounting to about $14,000,000, separately assessed.

Interprets Orr Decision.

"Our attention has been directed by counsel for the banks claiming the said deductions to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of State ex rel. Orr vs. Buder. Nevertheless, we are reluctant to believe that the law sanctions a system of taxation that results in one bank being assessed on the full amount of its capital, surplus and undivided profits, while another bank is assessed at only 25 per cent of such amount. We take the position that the decision referred to dealt with an isolated instance, and was never intended to sanction the wholesale nullification of the statutes of Missouri governing the taxation of banks which has resulted from the manner in which the said decision has been construed by the trust companies.

"Some of the largest banks among those claiming the deductions have manifested a desire to enter into a reasonable adjustment based on an increased assessment, but it has not been found practicable by us to make the proposed adjustments in such a way as to avoid discrimination against banks not claiming the deductions."

Accordingly, the board has increased the assessments of the

19 ARMY PLANES RISE 30,000 FEET FOR WORLD MARK

Record for Combat Formation Flying Set at Sacramento (Cal.) Field.

By the Associated Press.

MATHER FIELD, Sacramento, Cal., April 12.—A new world's altitude record of 30,000 feet for combat formation flying was set today by 19 airplanes of the Ninty-fifth Pursuit Squadron, flying in connection with the United States Army's air maneuvers.

Led by Capt. H. M. Elmendorf, the planes took off at 9 a. m. from Mather Field and returned exactly two hours later with the new record. The old record was 17,000 feet. The various ships reached altitudes varying from 27,500 to 30,000 feet. At first Elmendorf thought he had reached 33,000 feet, but a recheck of his altimeter disclosed it was 30,000 feet.

Elmendorf reported on landing that when he reached 30,600 feet, the tube leading from the oxygen tank supplying him with air slipped from his mouth and he was forced to dive downward fouf miles to keep from losing consciousness. Extremely low temperatures were encountered at the higher altitudes but fur-lined clothing weighing 50 pounds kept the men from freezing.

The value of altitude flying, Gen. W. E. Gillmore, commanding the maneuvers, said, lies in greater safety from anti-aircraft fire and more efficiency in attacking land and sea objectives.

DORAN ORDERS CLOSER WATCH ON DIVERSION OF ALCOHOL

Expresses Fear Bootleggers' Use of Methanol May be "Disastrous to Drinkers."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Prohibition enforcement officers throughout the nation were ordered today by Prohibition Commissioner Doran to put forth greater efforts to prevent diversion of industrial alcohol to bootleg channels.

Doran said that "only a certain amount of routine inspection with respect to doctors and druggists is necessary."

Substantial quantities of synthetic menthanol were coming into the market, the commissioner said, and there was some danger involved in the increased use of this material for solvent purposes.

The use of mixed methanol and denatured alcohol, under the general designation of denatured alcohol was attended with danger, he said, as criminal operators might put on the market illicit beverages of large methanol content with "attendant disastrous results to drinkers."

SPRINGFIELD (MO.) MAYOR INDICTED ON LIQUOR CHARGE

T. H. Gideon, Deputy Sheriff, and Many Others Accused of Dry Law Conspiracy.

HE GIVES BOND; WILL NOT RESIGN

Chief of Police, Now in Federal Prison, and Former Assistant Linked With Case.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 12.—Thomas H. Gideon, Mayor of Springfield, tonight was under $2500 bond to await trial in Federal Court on an indictment charging conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

Indicted with him in a report returned by a grand jury today were five previously convicted prohibition law violators and a Greene County Deputy Sheriff.

Gideon's indictment came 48 hours after his Chief of Police, G. C. Pike, had boarded a train for Leavenworth Penitentiary to serve a sentence of a year and a day on his plea of guilty to a charge of accepting bootleggers' bribes.

Ralph Thomas, alleged bootlegger; Bruce Stokes, a fugitive from justice; Tom Fuzzell, who last year served a sentence for operating a bar next door to the police station; Carl George and William Bailey, reputed bootleggers, and still operators, and Lee Witherspoon, a Deputy Sheriff, were indicted with Gideon. Witherspoon was dismissed from office immediately after his indictment this afternoon.

Others Linked With Charges.

Named in the indictment as conspirators, but not indicted, are: Guy Rogers, whose garage here was found to be a whisky cache; Cecil Foster, owner of a huge still found last fall in a residence close to a downtown church; John Yancey, who testified he paid bribes to Pike; Jess Smith, political associate of the Mayor, who yesterday pleaded guilty of transporting liquor; H. L. Tefft, former Assistant Chief of Police, who has sworn that he carried bribes from Tom Fuzzell to Pike; Leslie (Skeeter) Kell, vaudeville actor, and Pike himself.

Gideon, after giving bond, said: "All I have to say is that I will not plead guilty." He had expressed bitterness at Pike, whom he had taken into office with him two years ago, for admitting his guilt. Gideon indicated he had no intention of resigning.

The indictments came as a climax to more than a year of investigation by Federal grand juries into charges of official corruption in Springfield. Giedon's name was brought into the trial last fall, at which time Pike was tried and convicted of illegally transporting liquor. Pike was free under bond pending appeal when he suddenly pleaded guilty this week of taking Yancey's bribes.

Details of Charges.

In the indictment, Gideon, Pike and Jess Smith are charged, among other things, with transporting liquor from Springfield to Eureka Springs, Ark., Pike's former home, where a whisky party was said to have been held.

The indictment, covering 19 pages, is a blanket charge of accepting money and whisky to aid prohibition violators from escaping detection. Specifically it charges Gideon with being in collusion with Cecil Foster and others. The indictment cited a long series of alleged money exchanges, gifts of liquor, protection for liquor makers and sellers and tips to speakeasies when raids were contemplated.

Gideon's administration has been marked by dissension among his appointees, resignations of some and indictments of others. His captain of police, Charles H. Reed, still in office, is under indictment as an embezzler of Park Board funds.

Gideon, Member of Old Ozark Family in Politics Since Civil War.

T. H. Gideon, member of a pioneer Ozark family that has been active in public affairs and in the Republican party since the Civil War, is the third mayor of Springfield since commission form of government was adopted 14 years ago. An uncle, the late Judge James J. Gideon, was the first mayor under the present system.

'CASEY' LAMBERT AND FRIEND LEAP 1500 FEET TO SAFETY FROM PLANE OUT OF CONTROL

Flyers Who Jumped Safely and Wreck of $18,000 Plane

GOING 190 MILES AN HOUR WHEN AILERONS BREAK

MACHINE WRECKED IN AN ORCHARD

Both Men Land Safely Near Sappington After Parachute Jump, the First Either Had Made in Imminent Danger.

Stafford Lambert, wealthy young nephew of Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, and Herbert Condie Jr., son of a glass manufacturer, were saved from death by their parachutes when they leaped from a disabled airplane at an altitude of 1500 feet near Sappington, on Gravois road, at 4:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Neither was hurt.

Lambert was driving a Lockheed-Sirius low-winged monoplane, valued at $18,895, similar to one now used by Col. Lindbergh. The plane, which was traveling 190 miles an hour when the ailerons, which stabilize an airplane, broke, and crashed in an orchard about 100 yards north of Gravois road and a mile east of Sunset Hill Country Club was completely wrecked. Lambert and Condie reached the ground about 40 yards apart, near the road, and walked to Grand View Farm, the home of Adolphus Busch, stepfather of Lambert, with whom he lives.

The airplane had been brought to Lambert-St. Louis Flying Field from the Detroit air show by a demonstrator, Herbert Fahy. Lambert, a Lieutenant in the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service, National Guard, took it up while considering the purchase of the machine for $18,895. Condie, a private in the air unit and a student pilot, went along in the rear cockpit for the ride.

Lambert's Story of Escape.

"We had been flying around over St. Louis County for quite a while when I decided to fly over Grand View Farm," related Lambert, who is known to his acquaintances as "Casey." "I flew rather low over the farm and was starting to gain altitude, at about 190 miles an hour, when I noticed the ailerons, or wing flaps, were fluttering and working against each other.

"Knowing we would have to jump, I nosed the ship upward. We were about 1500 feet up when the ailerons began to break off and I realized that I couldn't control the ship any more.

"I turned around and yelled to Condie to jump. I had to yell three times before he climbed over. Then I went over the side. We both were wearing National Guard parachutes because we were testing a new ship and did not know what it would do.

"Condie pulled the ring of his parachute as soon as he crossed the side and I let myself fall about 600 feet before I pulled the ring. We hit the ground simultaneously and I bumped my head against a corn crib on the farm next to the orchard."

Plane Wrecked in Orchard.

The performance of the new red monoplane had attracted many spectators, some of whom told of seeing parts of the ship break off from the wings as the two men leaped. The ship did not plunge immediately but seemed to edge off gradually, nosing down as it neared the ground. In the orchard, it broke off an apple tree and plowed a furrow three feet deep in the ground. Souvenir hunters found thousands of loose parts scattered about the spot.

Except for experimental jumps, it was the first time that either of the young men had used a parachute and their experience automatically made them members of the mythical "Caterpillar Club," composed of aviators who have es-

DEATH PENALTY FOR ONE SLAYER, LIFE FOR ANOTHER

David A. Miller Convicted of Killing Miss Pauline Duebbert on Her Farm, Aug. 22 Last.

David A. Miller, itinerant woodcutter, was given the death penalty last night by a jury that found him guilty of the murder of Miss Pauline Duebert on her farm near Femme Osage, Aug. 22 last.

Shortly after the jury had returned its verdict, Circuit Judge Woolfolk, at St. Charles, sentenced Miller's companion, Norman E. Tanner to life imprisonment in the penitentiary. Tanner pleaded guilty Thursday and testified yesterday as a witness for the State.

Miller's case was given to the jury at 6:15 p. m. It announced its verdict at 9 o'clock, after two hours' deliberation following a 45-minute dinner.

In pronouncing sentence upon Tanner, Judge Woolfolk informed him that he would not be a party towards obtaining a parole for him in the future. Following his testimony yesterday afternoon, in which he described the attack on Miss Duebbert and her cousin, August Meier, admitting shooting Meier and stating that Miller shot Miss Duebbert, Prosecuting Attorney Bloebaum requested the Judge to show him some degree of clemency.

A trail of discarded garments, strewn along a woods road overlooking the orchard, where the shooting occurred, furnished the first clew which led to the apprehension of the two woodcutters.

Tanner signed a confession shortly after his arrest, about two weeks after the murder, but Miller refused to sign a formal confession and denied his guilt throughout the trial.

The men were indicted jointly and were brought to trial last January, but the illness of a juror resulted in a mistrial. Tanner then obtained a severance.

OLD OFFICERS OF MOON MOTOR CO. ARE VOTED OUT

Their Successors, All Easterners, Are Elected by New Era Interests at Special Directors' Meeting.

The New Era interests in the Moon Motor Car Co. held a special directors' meeting at the plant, 4400 North Main street, yesterday, and ousted the old officers, selecting their successors immediately.

New officers were chosen as follows: W. J. Muller, president; Helm Walker, vice president; J. E. Roberts, second vice president; F. E. Welch, treasurer, and R. P. Kolwitz, secretary. All are Easterners. Muller and Welch are New York capitalists, associated with the New Era Motors, Inc., which recently acquired Moon stock in exchange for New Era assets, including rights to manufacture the Ruxton front-wheel drive automobile.

Muller, called the "father of the Ruxton car," is vice president in charge of designing for the New Era Co. and designed the Ruxton. Under his administration, it is anticipated production of the Ruxton will be pushed.

Dispute Over Control.

However, the old officers of the Moon firm have not indicated willingness to abdicate. They could not be reached for a statement, but have indicated previously they would retain possession of the plant, leaving it to the other side to sue for control.

S. Mayner Wallace of St. Louis, counsel for the Muller-Welch interests, said the old officers and directors did not appear at yesterday's meeting. Wallace said his clients controlled 229,400 shares of the total of 350,000 Moon shares outstanding.

The Moon company had seven directors until two weeks ago when the New Era interests called a special stockholders' meeting—not recognized as valid by the old

CONFEREES PUT COTTON GOODS AND TOBACCO RATES UP

Complete 11 Schedules and Smoot Thinks Remaining Four Will Be Disposed of This Week.

EXPECTS TO FINISH WITH BILL BY MAY 1

Administration Clauses Still to Be Acted On—Decision Deferred on Only Six Duties So Far.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Higher protection from foreign competition for American producers of wrapper tobacco, cotton textiles and certain raw and processed commodities of flax, hemp and jute is provided under agreements reached today by the Senate and House conferees on the tariff bill.

High spots in the day's work were the compromise by which present duties of $2.10 and $2.75 a pound, respectively, on unstemmed and stemmed wrapper tobacco, were increased by 17½ cents a pound, and the acceptance of the Senate's additional levy of 10 cents a pound on all goods, except rags, made from long staple cotton. The House bill had provided an increase of 40 cents a pound on tobacco. The Senate had restored the present rates. The cotton goods rate increase was to compensate manufacturers using long staple cotton, which was taken from the free list by the Senate and made dutiable at 7 cents a pound.

Work Moving Briskly.

Work on three rate schedules was completed today, bringing the total up to 11 since the tariff adjusters began their task a week and a half ago.

With only four rate sections awaiting adjustment, Senator Smoot (Rep.), Utah, head of the Senate conference group, predicted that all duty differences would be composed by the middle of next week. Then the task of conciliating the differences over administrative clauses will be started in the hope that the entire bill may be completed before May 1.

Only six rates have been passed over thus far by the conferees so that the entire House might vote upon them. They affect sugar, cement, lumber, shingles, silver and casein.

Besides agreeing to the long staple cotton goods rate increase, the conferees today accepted the following Senate duties in the cotton schedule, compared with present rates:

Sewing thread, one-half of one cent a hundred yards, now the same; tire and cord fabric, 25 per cent, now the same; blankets and blanket cloth, 30 per cent but not less than 14¼ cents a pound, now 25 per cent; shirts not knot or crocheted, 45 per cent, now 35 per cent; "hit and miss" rag rugs, 75 per cent, now 35 per cent, based on the American selling price; rags, including wiping rags, 3 cents a pound, now dutiable at various lower rates; rope used as belting for textile machinery, 40 per cent, now 30 per cent.

Other Rates Agreed On.

Another Senate amendment approved provides a minimum rate of 55 one hundredths of a cent per average number per pound on plain cotton cloth, containing yarns the average number of which exceeds No. 90.

House cotton rates approved, as compared with existing levies were:

Tapestries and other jacquard figured upholstery cloths, 55 per cent, now 45 per cent; warp-knit gloves, 60 per cent, now 50 per cent.

The duty on cotton chenille rugs was increased from 35 to 40 per cent by another compromise.

These Senate rates in the flax, hemp and jute schedule were accepted: Hemp and hemp tow, 2 cents a pound, now 1 cent; hackled hemp, 3½ cents a pound, now 2 cents; jute twist, twine and cordage composed of two or more yarns or rovings twisted together, the size of the single yarn or roving of which is coarser than 5 pound, 9 cents a pound, now 11 cents.

Threads, twines and cords, composed of two or more yarns of flax, hemp or ramie, twisted together, 40 per cent, now 30 per cent; gill nettings, webs, seines and other fishnets of flax, hemp or ramie, not specially provided for, 45 per cent, now dutiable at lower rates.

Artists' Canvas Duty Increased.

Woven fabrics for artists' canvas, 45 per cent, now 40 per cent; linen handkerchiefs with hand-rolled or hand-made hems, 50 per cent and 1 cent each, now 45 per cent; inland lineoleum, 42 per cent, now 35 per cent.

A House provision accepted would provide a rate of 55 per cent on woven fabrics of flax, hemp or ramie weighing not less than 4 and not over 12 ounces a square yard and exceeding 12 but not exceeding 24 inches. The present duty is the same but it is based on goods not less than 4½ ounces and not more than 36 inches.

J. E. Bristow's Party Was Resting After Meal When Bandits Appeared and Ordered Him to Go With Them.

This is the second installment of the story of J. E. Bristow of San Angelo, Tex., who was held 30 days by Mexican outlaws. In his first article he told of his trip into a Mexican wilderness to examine a mine. The story was told by Bristow to Merle Blakely of the Oklahoma City Times. Blakely accompanied Bristow's son, Obie Bristow, and another American, when they went into Mexico to pay the ransom.

MAZATLAN, Sinaloa, Mexico, April 12.—Some day I'll get the laugh on these Nayarit outlaws.

For 30 days I was their prisoner and I went through hell, but some day this mine I set out to develop will be worth a million. It cost $1500 in cash and a world of mental torture to get my freedom, but I haven't given up.

I admit that I don't relish another trip into the wilderness, but I think I can direct my operations by remote control—from San Angelo, Nogales or Oklahoma City. At any rate, that mine in the Caracol Mountains will be developed.

I was the victim of treachery when I set out to open the mine and the peons didn't seem to realize that opening of the mine would mean employment and higher living conditions. I was taken prisoner and I went through everything but death, but I still have confidence in that mine.

Has Notice Nailed on Mine.

Yesterday I paid my tolls to the Government to insure that the mine would not revert to other hands, and I paid the taxes. In addition to that I sent out a band to nail the notice on the mine and complete the building of monuments so I can prove my claim.

I left off my story at the time I had sent out six native peons to build those monuments, and their building was rudely interrupted.

We had arrived at the mine after a gruelling trip from Tepic on mule back and after eating a mess of beans and coarse bread we had spread out our blankets and had gone to sleep.

Suspicious of Associate.

On the morning of March 8 we got up up and got down to business. The peons went ahead with their task of building the monuments and I started out to walk around the mine territory. With me was Charles Fields, the naturalized Mexican, who, I am sure, betrayed me into the hands of the outlaws.

I felt a little worried. I was one American in a foreign wilderness and I didn't have anyone I could depend on. Already I had lost confidence in Fields. I was suspicious of the conferences he had had with strange Mexicans.

It is hard for an American to realize the utter desolation of this country. We were three days from civilization. There were no railroads, no telegraph, no mails and I had neglected to bring along a radio. I was among a sinister group of foreigners who had no interest except their own. I knew they would betray me in a minute.

I spent the day chipping off specimens of the rock formations in the mine and trying to figure out how we could dynamite the Santiago River so I could float barges down the San Blas. Lack of transportation had kept this abandoned mine from being a paying proposition.

Outlaws Appear.

When we had cooked our grub and finished our meal we were all lying down. Suddenly I saw two people sneaking through the brush. They were looking square at us, but I didn't see any weapons. Meanwihle all the men in the party had gone to sleep. I got up and walked toward the two men. After I approached a few steps, I saw that there weren't two, there were six. They started coming up the hill. I sensed that they were bandits but I thought I could buy them off.

In a few minutes the leader came within 100 yards of me. He had a gun in his hand and yelled something at me. At first I thought of my rifle. Then I remembered it was in the tent. I figured it would be better to wait and see what happened.

All of them drew their guns and approached. They all got in a half circle about me and then Fields walked up.

I stood there with my hands up. There was nothing else to do. This half moon of guns and knives surrounded me. There was one ugly man in the group and he called Fields aside. The others watched me. They were native peons with their ragged breeches rolled up to their knees. All of them wore sombreros, except two, who looked like boys.

They kept their guns and knives on me and moved around in a sneaky way. I wondered what was going to happen. Then Fields and the ugly outlaw and one other approached me. Fields walked up to me while the ugly fellow kept a gun poked in my ribs. Fields said they wanted me to get on a mule and go to the top of the hill. Then he explained that the men were bandits and wanted me to pay them money.

I asked them how much and Fields said 1000 pesos (about $500). I told them I didn't have it and offered them the 40 pesos I had in my pocket. They wouldn't take it.

Took His Papers.

The ugly-looking outlaw, whose name was Flores, got vicious. He went off into a huddle with Fields and came back. They insisted I get on the mule and go up to the top of the hill and go at once. It was getting dusk and I didn't look forward to the trip, but there wasn't anything else to do.

While I mounted the burro, they took my satchel, with my papers in it, collected all the grub I had left and we all started off for the hill top.

It wasn't long before we came into a clearing on a sandy mountain. Right on the top, sitting with his bare legs crossed, was Cruz Delgade, with his funny mustache, funny face and two teeth gone from the front of his mouth. He was the same man I had seen at Santa Maria, when my suspicions first began to grow sharp.

Recalls Warnings.

He is intelligent for his kind and has more sense than any half dozen of his followers. They took me before him and at least five minutes passed before anything was said. By that time, the moon was shining. He beckoned Fields, and Fields went to him. I looked around. There were these ugly, leering faces in every direction.

Her I was on a sandy mountain top. Around me were strange faces—dark faces, with dark eyes and glistening teeth. Ragged, desperate men who would stop at nothing. I had been warned about the dangers of this trip into the mountains by my friends back in the states and by the reputable people in the Mexican city at Tepic. But all that didn't do any good in the plight I was in.

Later I grew to like some of these outlaws. In fact, I grew to like all of them, but Flores, the lieutenant. But on that night of March 9, many things spun through my mind. I had been betrayed and I was in the hands of a group that has the reputation of being relentless and bloodthirsty.

Some of the bandits kicked out pack mules away. Then they approached the place where all of us were grouped. The leader of the bandits, Cruz Delgade looked straight at me. He motioned for me to come forward. I did. Delgade was sitting there like an Oriental potentate without his splendor. I walked up before him.

—In his next installment Bristow will tell about the price being set on his head.

NEGROES OPPOSED TO PARKER FOR SUPREME COURT

From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The objection of Negro voters in the Northern and Middle Western states to the confirmation of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina, as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, has become extremely serious. Senators from Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and other states, in which there are many Negroes, who normally vote the Republican ticket, are being deluged with telegrams of protest.

So great has the pressure become, with its implied threat in connection with the coming congressional elections, that several Mid-Western Senators within the last few days have visited the White House and urged President Hoover to withdraw Parker's name. Republican leaders in the Senate admit that the situation is threatening.

Vice President Curtis, it was learned today, called at the White House and laid the facts before the President.

The opposition is chiefly based on speeches made by Judge Parker when he was the Republican candidate for Governor of North Carolina 10 years ago. At that time, he took the position that Negroes were "not yet ready for suffrage" and that the Republican party of his State would not depend on them for support.

The fight, so far as the Negroes is concerned, is being led by the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has headquarters in Washington.

The subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Judiciary, to which the Parker nomination was referred, has not made its report. Senators Overman (Dem.), North Carolina, and Hebert (Rep.), Rhode Island, two of the subcommittee, are ready to report favorably. Senator Borah, the third member, has not yet made up his mind. He is still studying the Parker "yellow dog" decision in the Red Jacket coal mining case, on which organized labor is basing its protest.

A repetition of the fight against the confirmation of Charles Evans Hughes now seems likely and the President again may have to rely on Democratic votes to have his nominee confirmed.

The American Federation of Labor has gone strenuously on record against Parker's confirmation, as a result of his decision in the Red Jacket case, but its opposition has been conspicuously less effective than that of the Negro organizations.

Some Republican Senators are said to have urged President Hoover to withdraw the nomination, but such an event is wholly unlikely. It would be a confession that the appointment was a mistake and from the political standpoint the administration would rather have Parker rejected by the Senate than to withdraw him.

As a matter of fact, he is almost certain to be confirmed eventually, although only after a struggle.

OLD OFFICERS OF MOON MOTOR CO. ARE VOTED OUT

regime—and elected eight more directors, who thereupon authorised yesterday's meeting.

Old officers of the firm were: Carl W. Burst, president; Stanley Moon, secretary; W. D. Hemenway, vice president, and H. W. Klemme, treasurer.

The Moon Motor Car Co., a pioneer in the automotive industry, grew out of the Moon Bros. Carriage Co., which made carriages for years before the first automobile was built. Joseph W. Moon, who had been president of the older company, became head of the new venture. At his death in 1919, he was succeeded by Stewart McDonald, under whose presidency the company attained a peak production of 12,964 cars, in 1925. McDonald was succeeded in 1928 by Burst, who had been with the company since 1909, serving as factory manager and in other capacities.

Treasurer Klemme had been with the company since it made buggies. Stanley Moon, son of the founder of the company, had been secretary since 1919.

FLATHEAD LEASE AWARD LIKELY TO MONTANA POWER

Secretary of Interior Wilbur Has Virtually Decided to Accept Bid of $68,000 a Year.

By PAUL G. ANDERSON.
A Staff Correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Secretary of Interior Wilbur, it was learned tonight, has virtually decided to give the Montana Power Co., a long-term lease on the great Flathead River power site, located on the Flathead Indian Reservation in Montana. In potential power capacity, the site is the third largest in the United States, being exceeded only by Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam.

The Montana Power Co., which has close financial relations with the Anaconda Copper Co., has been seeking possession of the site for years. Its efforts have been strenuously opposed by advocates of conservation and organizations devoted to the welfare of the Indians.

It is possible, by utilizing five adjoining sites on the river, to develop 214,000 electric horsepower without the employment of auxiliary steam plants. Engineers have declared that power can be produced cheaper there than at any spot in the country. Another bidder for the property, in addition to the Montana Power Co., is Walter H. Wheeler, a Minneapolis engineer, the nature of whose financial backing has not been disclosed.

The Montana company proposes to develop only one of the five sites, and to produce only 68,000 horse power, for which it proposes to pay the Indians a royalty of $1 per horsepower, or $68,000 a year. Wheeler has offered to develop the full 214,000 horsepower, and to pay the Indians $1.12½ cents per horse power, or $240,750 a year.

Wheeler asserts that if allowed to have the property he can procure contracts insuring the development of a great electro-chemical and electro-metallurgical industry in the immediate region. The Montana Power Co., on the other hand, proposes to transmit the power 140 miles to Anaconda, thence to be distributed over its existing power system. Opponents of the Montana Power Co., bid have charged its plan is designed to prevent the full development of the property, to forestall competition with its own system.

It has been shown that the Montana Power Co. financed the organization of a Flathead Indian Association, which has indorsed its bid. In this enterprise the company enjoyed the active assistance of Superintendent Coe, of the Flathead agency, who is a subordinate officer of the Interior Department.

Senator Wheeler, (Dem.) Montana, has opposed both bids, declaring that neither of them offered full justice to the Indians or the Government. Senator Walsh (Dem.), of Montana, is in favor of accepting the bid of the Montana Power Co. Representative Kvale, of Minnesota, has offered a resolution in the House, forbidding the granting of any lease until the Federal Power Commission has been reorganized.

Naval Treaty Begins To Take Definite Shape

those dealing with the scrapping of battleships, the definition of aircraft carriers and replacements and age limits.

France and Italy formally reversed the right to build the capital ships they were entitled to construct under the Washington treaty prior to the present year. This tonnage amounts to 70,000 for each country, but the general understanding of the conference is that the battleships will not be built.

According to the definite conference scrapping program, the United States will scrap the battleships Florida and Utah, one ship to be rendered unfit for warlike service within 12 months of ratification of the London treaty and finally scrapped within two years.

The other ship is to be rendered unfit for service within 18 months and finally scrapped within 30 months.

The British Empire will scrap four ships, the Malborough, the Emperor of India, the Benbow, and the Tiger, at various intervals from the date of ratification of the treaty.

The following capital ships are to be retained for training purposes: The United States, the Arkansas; Great Britain, the Iron Duke; and Japan, the Hi-Yei.

These ships will be rendered useles for warfare within 12 months in the case of the United States and Great Britain, and 18 months in the case of Japan.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Secretary of State Stimson and former Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki, are bent on finishing the major part of the conference work by next Thursday. The French delegation, however, appears to be in no hurry. Advices from Paris tonight indicated Premier Andre Tardieu did not expect the treaty to be formally signed until after Easter.

An advance party of the American delegation left London today to sail from Southampton aboard the liner George Washington, which brought them here in January. It included three Admirals, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, Rear Admiral J. R. P. Pringle, and Rear Admiral Orry Yanell.

Press Praise for Results.

The British Sunday press gives measured praise to that accomplishments of the conference. The consensus is that, though only a semblance of a five-Power pact has been achieved, the three-Power agreement is of real value and the door is still open to France and Italy whenever they can settle their differences.

The Sunday observer says that Anglo-American friendship has at last been placed upon "an impregnable basis of good sense and good feeling." Its editor, J. L. Garvin, believes "the Hoover-MacDonald negotiations for a complete Anglo-American settlement and an impregnable peace between 20,000,000 English speaking people in the world have worked out in 10 month to supreme success, which is to the everlasting fame of both men.

"When President Hoover in effect, the other day, described this full and final establishment of parity-with-friendship as epoch making, he did not say too much."

Means Saving of $260,000,000 to U. S., Idaho Congressman Says.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—A saving of nearly $260,000,000 on the United States naval battleship program before 1936 will result from the London naval conference, in the opinion of Congressman French of Idaho, chairman of the House Appropriations Naval Subcommittee.

The saving, the Idahoan said, will be accomplished through the withdrawing of three battleships from the fleet and by deferring replacement that was called for under the Washington arms conference, which called for two battleships to be laid down in 1931 and one in 1933 and two in 1934, one in 1935 and two in 1936.

Although members of the Senate are cautiously withholding their views on the outcome of the conference, there is a manifest determination by a group headed by Senator Hale (Rep.), Maine, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, and Senator Swanson (Dem.), Virginia, to scrutinize any treaty entered into by the American delegation in London for the reduction of naval armaments. Hale has declared that such a naval agreement would require some study and there is little probability that a treaty of that sort would be brought before the Senate at this session.

Chairman Britten of the House Naval Committee reiterated that the reported agreement at London was made only to "save the faces of members of the American delegation," and added that it was a "pledge that the United States would admit of British domination of the sea, because the United States is too practical to expend $105,000,000 for naval ships for which it has no use."

On the other hand, Congressman French said the "results of the London naval conference are so splendid that they should command the heartiest support of the people of the United States and the world. x x x other nations could not see their way clear to go as far as the United States in making reductions, but the tonnage agreed upon is somewhat under the present tonnage of the several nations and about 200,000 tons under the tonnage proposed by the United States at he Geneva conference in 1927."

French Socialists Demand Discusion of Proposed Treaty.

PARIS, April 12.—Leon Blu, leader of the Socialists, today demanded in the Chamber of Deputies that the results of the London naval conference be discussed in connection with the Foreign Affairs Budget.

Premier Tardieu replied that it was impossible to debate that question in the absence of Foreign Minister Briand. He told the Chamber the accords would be duly broght before Parliament for ratification after signature of the final act in a month. Blum said he was not satisfied with the answer and that he would interpellate the Government next week.

Italian Paper Deplores "Failure of Peace to Triumph."

ROME, April 12.—Popolo di Roma, discussing what is considered the last phase of the naval conference, today commented:

"Il Duce found in Dino Grandi, Italian Foreign Minister, a most fervent, tenacious defender of Italian rights, which have been safeguarded day by day and hour by hour with admirable care and intelligent ardor.

" * * * the Italy of Premier Mussolini has sought by all means to make the cause of peace triumph. It is not her fault if the facts have proved that the imperialism of others was stronger than all the disarmament theories of nations and universal brotherhood."

BISHOP CANNON DENIES RUMOR

RICHMOND, Va., April 12.—The Times dispatch says that Bishop James Cannon Jr., tonight denied over long distance telephone from Durham, N. C., that he was married.

He said, the paper states, that should he ever decide to rewed he would give the proper announcement to the press. The inquiry was made of the Bishop, the paper says, in view of persistent rumors that the churchman had recently married again.

BASS IDENTIFIES PICTURES OF TWO ST. LOUIS GUNMEN

OFFICERS SEEK ACTUAL SLAYER

Waitress Who Said Victim Was Pearman Had Heard of $200,000 Insurance Plot From Him.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BENTONVILLE, Ark., April 12.—Warrants will be issued Monday for the arrest of three St. Louis gangsters named by Dr. A. J. Bass of Columbia, Mo., in his confession as having been the gunmen whom he hired in 1928 to kill his wife's cousin, Machier J. Dorsey, and who subsequently tormented him until he paid them $4000.

The three men, when arrested, will be questioned concerning any possible connection they may have had with the murder of William R. Pearman, Columbia automobile mechanic, for which Dr. Bass is held.

The doctor told the reporter tonight that earlier in the day he had looked at police photographs of the men and had positively identified two of them. He was not positive about the third, he said, but declared he would know him if he saw him face to face.

Who Fired Shots?

Whether Dr. Bass fired the shots which ended Pearman's life is the unsolved questions to which Arkansas officials and insurance company investigators are directing themselves.

From Dr. Bass' own confession they have the $200,000 insurance fraud proved beyond shadow of doubt.

But now they want to know whether Dr. Bass with his own hands committed the murder, or Pearman was the victim of a group of St. Louis gangsters, who for nearly a year had terrorized Bass and who killed Pearman trusting that through blackmail they could obtain from Bass all or most of the insurance money, which Bass was scheduled to obtain if Pearman's death was passed by without close investigation.

The authorities have taken Dr. Bass' circumstantial story of gangster participation in his coldly calculated insurance frauds, which admittedly involved murder, with much doubt. They have been more inclined to look upon the retired 55-year-old dentist as an amateur criminal who worked out what he believed was the "perfect crime," and that his was the mind which conceived the scheme and his the hand which executed the crime.

Uncertain Where Murder Occurred

If the authorities could establish when and where Pearman was killed—whether the murder was committed on the lonely hill road near Gravette, Ark., where the body was found, or elsewhere and the body taken there—and could trace Bass' movements between early Wednesday morning, March 26, and late Thursday afternoon, March 27, they would be much nearer a solution.

They believe Pearman's body was deposited at the roadside early Thursday, but they have no information tending to show it was there until Friday, and even then it was not recognized as that of a dead man. Saturday the murder was discovered.

Approximately 36 hours of Dr. Bass' time is unaccounted for. It was during that period the authorities believe the murder was committed. Dr. Bass could have gone from Columbia Wednesday morning, to Gravette, Ark., and returned to Columbia by the time he was seen there Thursday afternoon.

Dr. Bass' confession to the attempted insurance fraud and his confession to a contemplated murder in a previously attempted insurance fraud, coupled with the facts that have been disclosed, provide an extraordinary crime story, the beginning of which goes back nearly two years.

Began With Business Deal.

There is even a conflict as to the details of the apparently innocent business transaction which developed into the murder of Pearman.

It is clear, however, that in 1928 Dr. Bass and his wife's cousin, Machier J. Dorsey, chairman of the Board of the Northern States Life Insurance Co., of Hammond, Ind., entered into a business deal involving a large tract of Arkansas land. Bass said in his confession that Dorsey had borrowed $112,000 from him and his wife, giving a mortgage on the land, and assigning to Bass $100,000 of life insurance. Dorsey has said Bass owned the land, and that he agreed to aid him in selling it, each to receive one-half the profit. In connection with the deal, he said, each agreed to obtain $100,000 of insurance payable to the other.

But whatever the business details, Dorsey took out his policy payable to Bass' wife, Dorsey's cousin.

Dr. Bass told a friend in Columbia of the insurance policy, and according to his confession, discussed with this friend the subje

They have been more inclined to look upon the retired 55-year-old dentist as an amateur criminal who worked out what he believed was the "perfect crime," and that his was the mind which conceived the scheme and his the hand which executed the crime.

Uncertain Where Murder Occurred

If the authorities could establish when and where Pearman was killed—whether the murder was committed on the lonely hill road near Gravette, Ark., where the body was found, or elsewhere and the body taken there—and could trace Bass' movements between early Wednesday morning, March 26, and late Thursday afternoon, March 27, they would be much nearer a solution.

They believe Pearman's body was deposited at the roadside early Thursday, but they have no information tending to show it was there until Friday, and even then it was not recognized as that of a dead man. Saturday the murder was discovered.

Approximately 36 hours of Dr. Bass' time is unaccounted for. It was during that period the authorities believe the murder was committed. Dr. Bass could have gone from Columbia Wednesday morning, to Gravette, Ark., and returned to Columbia by the time he was seen there Thursday afternoon.

Dr. Bass' confession to the attempted insurance fraud and his confession to a contemplated murder in a previously attempted insurance fraud, coupled with the facts that have been disclosed, provide an extraordinary crime story, the beginning of which goes back nearly two years.

Began With Business Deal.

There is even a conflict as to the details of the apparently innocent business transaction which developed into the murder of Pearman.

It is clear, however, that in 1928 Dr. Bass and his wife's cousin, Machier J. Dorsey, chairman of the Board of the Northern States Life Insurance Co., of Hammond, Ind., entered into a business deal involving a large tract of Arkansas land. Bass said in his confession that Dorsey had borrowed $112,000 from him and his wife, giving a mortgage on the land, and assigning to Bass $100,000 of life insurance. Dorsey has said Bass owned the land, and that he agreed to aid him in selling it, each to receive one-half the profit. In connection with the deal, he said, each agreed to obtain $100,000 of insurance payable to the other.

But whatever the business details, Dorsey took out his policy payable to Bass' wife, Dorsey's cousin.

Dr. Bass told a friend in Columbia of the insurance policy, and, according to his confession, discussed with this friend the subject of bringing about, Dorsey's death that the $100,000 might be collected.

Bass, in jail, calmly related the details of the contemplated murder. His friend, he said, put him in touch with St. Louis gunmen, who agreed to kill Dorsey for $2000, an amount which Bass agreed to pay, the boss of the gunmen agreeing to notify Bass or his friend in a code telephone message when the job had been done.

The message was received, but there had been a slip. The night the message came Bass and his friend were discussing the matter in the Daniel Boone Tavern at Columbia when Dorsey walked through the lobby.

Bass said he quickly got in touch with his gunman's boss and it was agreed to put another and better man on the job. Bass went with this second gunman in an automobile to Indianapolis to point out Dorsey in order that there should be no mistake.

It appears that Bass had been figuring all of the angles and uppermost in his thought was a question as to what would happen if the attempt at murder should fail. So in Indianapolis Bass told Dorsey, he says, that he had heard threats against him in Columbia. Then Dorsey, he says, disclosed that he had canceled his $100,000 policy. Dorsey's statement is that in January, 1929, he changed the beneficiary of the policy.

Murder Called Off.

With the policy canceled or the beneficiary changed, there was no possibility of financial gain to Bass by Dorsey's death, and the murder was called off. Dr. Bass said he drove the gunman back to St. Louis and he returned to Columbia.

A day or two later, according to his story, he received a telephone message to the effect that the gunman had been "ready to serve," that it was no fault of his that Bass no longer desired Dorsey's murder, and that he must pay the $8000, agreed upon as the murder price after the $2000 agreement had failed through. Bass refused to pay and from then on received frequent telephone messages threatening his life, he declares.

He employed an armed guard for his home, and finally related the story to the Rev. Carl Agee, pastor of the Christian Church of Columbia, in which Bass was a deacon. As a result of this conference Bass decided to attempt a compromise with the gunmen, and the preacher and the armed guard accompanied Bass to St. Louis. Bass said he gave a check "to cash" to the friend with whom he had first plotted Dorsey's murder, the friend cashed the check and gave it to the gunman. But the threats did not cease, demands being made for the remaining $4000.

Says Gunman Proposed Scheme.

If Bass' story is to be believed he was in a state of terror for months, fearing death at the hands of the gunmen he had employed to kill Dorsey. He again met the gunman in St. Louis and pleaded for time, finally asking that he have an opportunity to obtain money by the sale of land he owned in Arkansas.

He related that the gunman was surprised to learn he had the land, and immediately proposed a scheme by which it would be sold, that the purchaser be required to take out a large amount of life insurance to protect the notes he would give for the purchase price of the land, and that then a dead body would be substituted for that of the insured and the money collected. Apparently Bass agreed that this was a good way out.

It will be noted that although in the first scheme Dorsey's murder was planned to get the insurance money, in the second Bass contended there was no plan of murder.

Hears of Missing Folta.

Shortly after this Bass, on his way to East St. Louis with a load of hogs, fell into conversation with Frank Folta Jr. of Martinsburg, a small town not far from Columbia. Folta told Bass that his brother, William Folta, had been missing from home for 17 years and that the family know nothing of his whereabouts, did not know whether he was alive or dead.

The missing Folta could be made to serve in the insurance fraud which Bass said had bene suggested by the gangster. Shortly afterward Bass called at the Folta home in Martinsburg with the astonishing news that the missing William Folta was in Chicago, alive and well, but did not want the family to have his address. Folta, Bass said, had amassed a fortune in the Orient. All this was in October, 1929.

The following month a stranger describing himself as a "Government agent," called at the Folta home and obtained minute details about all the Folta family, and Bass called twice more on the same mission. This was information needed in obtaining insurance under Folta's name.

The Folta family, eager for the return of the missing William, advertised for him in newspapers and by radio and finally, Feb. 10, last, a letter signed with the name of William Folta was received. It stated he would be home April 1.

Pearman Taken Into Plan.

Bass had become acquainted with the automobile mechanic, Pearman, in Columbia, and took Pearman into his scheme. Pearman agreed to impersonate Folta, obtain $200,000 of life insurance, and transfer it to Bass in connection with a fake real estate transaction. A body was to be substituted and was to be identified by Bass as that of Folta. Pearman would remain Pearman at home and would be known as Folta only to Bass and the representatives of the insurance company.

Pearman's death warrant was signed when he joined Bass' scheme.

Pearman, who had a wife and two children in Columbia, was boastful of his prospects of wealth and from time to time talked to Pearl Powell, a waitress, with whom he was friendly. He told her he was in a land deal with Bass, that he was receiving $50 a week and when the deal was carried out he would "get $50,000." He told her of the insurance and said something about representing himself as somebody else, and about a body that was to be substituted.

Body of Victim Found.

On Saturday morning, March 30, a body was found by the roadside near Gravette, Ark. Three bullet wounds in the head told plainly the story of murder. Papers in the pockets indicated the body was that of William Folta.

The following day Dr. Bass appeared and was positive in his identification of the body as that of Folta. Bass first aroused suspicion of the Arkansas officers when he deprecated a suggestion by one that members of Folta's family be sent for to be absolutely sure of the identification. Bass said he knew Folta well, and his word should be taken. Bass even said that he had removed an appendicitis scar from Folta by use of an electric needle. The Sheriff examined the body and could not find even a trace of a scar. He decided Bass was "too scientific" and placed him in jail.

In the meantime, the waitress in Columbia had read of the finding of the body. She recalled Pearman had said something about Folta, and had talked of Dr. Bass. Pearman had told her he would return to Columbia the previous Thursday. He had not returned. She consulted the Sheriff in Columbia, the Arkansas Sheriff was consulted and she was asked to visit Bentonville, Ark., the county seat, where the body had been taken.

Waitress Identifies Body.

She immediately identified the body as that of Pearman, and related all that Pearman had told her about Dr. Bass and of assuming the name of Folta in the "real estate deal." The web then began to weave about Bass. Members of the Pearman family and of the Folta family went to Arkansas. Pearman's son and daughter identified their father's body. The Foltas said the body was not that of William Folta.

Bass refused to talk to the authorities, but his Columbia attorney, Boyle G. Clark, who visited him, gave to the Arkansas officials the detailed story of the Machier Dorsey plot and of the Bass-Pearman insurance plot, as they had been related to him by Bass. A few days later Bass confessed to the scheme up to the point of the murder.

He insisted he knew nothing of the killing of Pearman, which he said he was certain had been by the gunmen with whom he had been dealing. He said he was compelled to identify Pearman as Folta to save his own life.

That is the story in so far as it is now known to the investigators. They are following several leads, and are now proceeding on the theory that Pearman was killed at some other place, probably in Missouri, and his body taken to Arkansas.

MAN TAKEN FROM RIVER WAS KILLED BY BLOWS ON HEAD

Autopsy Shows Unidentified Victim Had Fracture of Skull Before Thrown Into Water.

Authorities think that a man, whose body was taken from the Mississippi River near the mouth of the Meramec River, in Jefferson County, Friday, by the crew of a Government steamer, was slain by blows on the head and the body, then thrown in the river.

An autopsy performed at Antonio yesterday by Coroner Walter Gibson disclosed not water in the lungs, indicating that death had occurred before the body got into the river.

Dr. Gibson found death had resulted from a fracture of the skull. There were two lacerations on the head, showing that the skull fracture had been caused by blows with a sharp instrument, Dr. Gibson said.

St. Louis detectives, who viewed the body, said they could not identify it because of the decomposed condition. The detectives went to Antonio after receiving information that a St. Louis gangster sought for questioning in the recent kidnapings of bookmakers had been slain by the "other side" and his body thrown into the river. The gangster had been hiding on the East Side to avoid police questioning, according to underworld information.

There were no labels in the man's clothing, and, except for matches, the pocket contained nothing. The body had been in the water about a week, making it impossible to obtain finger prints. The body was buried at Antonio yesterday afternoon.

The man was about 35 years old, had brown hair, weighing 150 pounds, and was 5 feet 6 inches tall. The clothing was of good quality, consisting of a brown checkered suit, white shirt with red dots and attached collar, blue and red tie, and tan lowcut shoes, size 6½. Relatives of a missing St. Louis man viewed the body, and said it was not that of the man sought.

banks and trust companies by the following amounts:

First National Bank, $10,544,130; Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co., $9,662,140; Mississippi Valley Trust Co., $6,769,880; Lafayette South Side Bank and Trust Co., $2,326,010; St. Louis Union Trust Co., $1,919,270; Franklin-American Trust Co., $1,878,070; Cass Bank and Trust Co., $558,500; Industrial Savings Trust Co., $422,500; Fidelity Bank and Trust Co., $300,000; West St. Louis Trust Co., $300,000; North St. Louis Trust Co., $299,030; Laclede Trust Co., $239,000; Lindell Trust Co., $50,000; Real Estate Mortgage Trust Co., $24,470.

Probable Legal Action.

The legal test will begin, it is expected, when the Collector sends out his bills based on the increased assessments. The banks may then tender the amount which they hold to be due, and may either seek a writ of mandamus to compel the Collector to accept the amounts tendered or permit him to sue them as delinquents.

Aside from the increase in bank assessments, the Board of Equalization made a net increase of $188,700 in the assessment of personal property and a net increase of $87,970 on real estate. These increases, added to the original assessment of $1,086,002,630 on realty and $144,167,940 on personal property, and with the increase of bank assessments, make an aggregate assessment of $1,265,740,240 on all real and personal property, excepting the assessments of public utilities. These are fixed by the State Board of Equalization, and last year were about $88,000,000.

Some of the increased assessments on real estate were made on large theater buildings. Loew's State Theater's assessment was increased from $650,000 to $700,000; that on the Ambassador Building from $1,250,000 to $1,350,000; on the St. Louis Theater from $550,000 to $600,000, and on the Fox Theater from $1,250,000 to $1,350,000. The Bell Telephone building was increased from $2,750,000 to $2,900,000, and other realty of the telephone company was increased by an additional $151,000.

Decreases Allowed.

Decreases in real estate assessments included a cut in the assessment of the Odeon Building, Grand boulevard and Finney avenue, Henri Chouteau owner, from $200,000 to $175,000; Fashion Square Building, 1301-11 Washington avenue, Jemima Lindell Estate owner, from $452,000 to $420,000; Blackwell-Wielandy Co., seven-story building at 1611 Locust street, from $275,000 to $235,000; Marquette Hotel, Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, George Thompson Hotel Corporation owner, $425,000 to $400,000, and Big Four Auto Co., new three-story garage building at 2410 South Jefferson avenue, $90,000 to $74,000.

Some of the increases in personal property assessments were: Radio Station KMOX, Mayfair Hotel, $300 to $29,000, on its organ and other studio equipment, and accounts receivable; Title Insurance Co., $17,760 to $167,760, on its equipment of title records; Land Title Co., $2500 to $12,500, on records.

The board heard 303 appeals from assessments, as compared with 137 last year. The members of the board, besides City Assessor Fred Gehner, chairman, were Hiram Lloyd, Lon W. Harlow and Richard E. Gruner.

CLEWS IN MURDER OF WOMAN SOUGHT IN WASHINGTON

Autopsy Shows Mary Baker, Government Clerk, Was Attacked Before Being Killed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—An autopsy tonight on the bruised and bullet-torn body of Mary Baker, 28-year-old Government clerk, which was found wedged in a culvert today beside Arlington National Cemetery, failed to give a clew to the slayer.

Department of Justice Agents, Army authorities, Washington detectives and Virginia police, after hours of intensive search, likewise admitted the murder was as much a mystery late tonight as it was when the body was found.

The autopsy showed the young Government worker had been shot three times instead of once, as was first reported. One of the bullets went through her neck, a second penetrated under her left arm and the third entered her back. Her skull was fractured and bruises on her throat indicated she had been strangled.

After completion of the autopsy Dr. B. H. Swain, coroner of Arlington County, Va., said that Miss Baker had been criminally assaulted before being killed.

Investigators reported they had so far failed to find Miss Baker's coat, hat or pocketbook.

Described by friends as not "the type of girl to run around," she was last seen alive last night by Inez Eyre. They had attended a church meeting.

Alarm was felt when she failed to return to her home in Lyon village, just acros the Potamac River. Early this morning her automobile was found stained with blood and abandoned near Arlington.

Then began another search, which led to the discovery of her body at noon by Arlington County police.

Mildred Sperry and Olga Skinner, who shared the Tiny Lyon Village house with Miss Baker, were questioned by William C. Gloth, county prosecuting attorney.

After receiving information from them, he ordered a hunt for a man, saying that he wanted to question him.

Taken to the culvert, Miss Skinner identified her slain friend. She almost collapsed and was helped away by police.

A slender blonde, Miss Baker was the daughter of the Rev. Thomas P. Baker, an Episcopalian minister of Oak Grove, Va., 90 miles from Washington. She had many friends at the Navy Department, where for eight years she had been employed.

With Miss Eyre, the slain girl left her office at the usual time yesterday afternoon to attend a service at the Epiphany church. It did not start until 5 p. m., so the friends decided to walk. Miss Baker said she preferred to leave her car parked near the office because of difficulty in parking in the busier sections.

After the services, Miss Eyre said her friend said: "It's only 20 minutes to six. I guess I'll walk down and get my car because I don't have to meet Mildred until 6 o'clock."

She was referring to Miss Sperry, who she was supposed to meet in front of a department store. That was the last time she was seen alive by her friends.

caped injury by leaping from a plane.

Holds Transport License.

Lambert, who is 21 years old, and a licensed transport pilot, has been flying for four years and is considered an expert by his colleagues. He comes of a family of aviators, his uncle being the dean of aviation enthusiasts for whom the flying field was named.

Three of his cousins have died in airplane crashes during the past three years. Samuel Breckinridge Lambert was killed near South Bend, Ind., only last Tuesday; George Lea Lambert, son of Maj. Lambert, in St. Louis County last July, and James Theodore Walker, in Pennsylvania, in June, 1927.

Condie, 24 years old, has been learning to fly under Lambert's tutelage but is not yet a licensed pilot. He lives at 40 Elizabeth avenue, Ferguson.

Although the ship was the property of the Detroit Aircraft Co., manufacturers of the Lockheed ships, the question of responsibility for the property loss is one that will have to be threshed out. In Detroit, James Work, vice president of the company, issued a statement that the ship was not covered with crash insurance and that he was informed that Lambert "accepted full responsibility for the ship if he were permitted to fly it alone." Work declined to comment without an investigation on the cause of Lambert's leaping.

Arthur Ecoff, 13, Fatally Shoots John F. Callahan Jr., 12, at Home.

Joseph F. Callahan Jr., 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Callahan, 6923 Garner avenue, was accidentally shot and killed yesterday by a playmate, Arthur B. Ecoff, 13, at Ecoff's home, 1939 Forest avenue.

The two, who had been playing together for 15 minutes before the shooting, got a revolver from a back bedroom, where Ecoff's father, Francis Ecoff, kept it, and carried it to the front room of the house to examine it, Arthur Ecoff told police.

Removing three of four shells that were in the pistol, they were whirling the loaded chamber and snapping the hammer when the loaded cartridge was discharged. The bullet struck Joseph in the heart, causing immediate death. Arthur ran from the house and called the neighbors, who notified police.

QUEEN OF SWEDEN BURIED; 3 KINGS ATTEND FUNERAL

Body of Victoria, Who Died in Rome, Placed in Royal Tomb of Church at Stockholm.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, April 12.—Within the Swedish Royal Pantheon in Riddarholms Church, where a large company of Swedish Kings and Queens already lie, the body of Queen Victoria of Sweden was buried this afternoon. The Queen died at her villa in Rome last week, after many years of illness.

The Queen's body was brought ashore amid impressive scenes from the cruiser Brottning Victoria, which was escorted by the cruiser Gustave V and destroyers from Swinemuende, Germany.

On a hearse drawn by six horses through the crowded streets of the mourning capital, it was carried past the royal palace to the church.

King Gustave, with the King and Crown Prince of Norway, the King of Denmark, the President of Finland and many other personages, followed afoot.

Tht procession was preceded and followed by the Naval Cadet Corps, cavalry and artillery detachments. Contingents of the Stockholm garrison and a large number of private associations and societies were drawn up along the route. Military bands stationed at intervals gave a solemn note to the procession.

The bells of every church in the city tolled as the cortege began to move, and continued their mournful ringing until the church was reached. When the coffin was placed on a catafalque in the church, three gentlemen and three dames of the Queen's court took places beside it.

The burial ceremony was begun by the royal steward, who lifted the royal crown from the coffin, where it had reposed. As the ceremony went on, a mourning salute of 42 guns boomed from the Skeppshohlen naval station.

In accordance with a wish once expressed by the Queen, the Royal Opera Orchestra, after the ceremony, played the prelude to Wagner's "Parsifal."

The coffin was then borne to the mortuary chapel of the Bernadotte Dynasty, while the choir of the royal chapel sang a hymn composed by King Oscar II, father-in-law of Queen Victoria.

FOREST PARK CASCADE SYSTEM TO BE COMPLETED ABOUT MAY 1

1000 Japanese Cherry Trees Already Planted on North Slope of Government Hill.

Reconstruction of the north slope of Government Hill in Forest Park, where an elaborate system of cascades and landscaping will be illumined at night by flood lights, will be completed about May 1, Park Commissioner Pape announced yesterday. About $40,000 of bond issue money will be spent in the project.

The area under development has already been planted with about 1000 Japanese cherry trees, donated by the late Samuel Moffatt, New York, which are expected to bloom about May 1. One hundred small jets of water will augment a large fountain in the cascade scheme and 28 floodlights will be concealed in elaborate flower beds.

The development is below Government Pavilion and above Post-Dispatch Lake, a spot visible for considerable distance in the park.

EMBEZZLER WILL PLEAD GUILTY OF ROBBING FRISCO

Oliver D. Chalmers Says He Is Not Even Going to Hire Lawyer — Short $100,000.

Oliver D. Chalmers, who admits that, as manager of mail and express traffic for the Frisco railroad, he took large sums of money belonging to the road, which others now estimate at more than $100,000, said yesterday that he would plead guilty when arraigned in court. He was released shortly before noon, on a $40,000 bond, signed by professional bondsmen.

"I'm not going to hire a lawyer," he told his bondsmen. "I'm going to make a clean breast of it when I go to court and accept the best terms I can get. I feel that I ought to make some atonement."

Like Marvin E. Phillips, assistant cashier of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Bank, held for a $31,600 defalcation, Chalmers has admited that the money which he took from his employers was dissipated in gambling. But unlike Phillips, Chalmers has refused to tell in detail of his gambling operations. It was through Phillips, after his arrest Tuesday, that Chalmers' practice of cashing the Frisco's checks for his own account was discovered, leading to Chalmers' arrest Friday.

Chalmers is 38 years old, and lived at 4530A Shenandoah avenue with his wife and 18-year-old daughter. His salary was $300 a month, and the rent of his flat $75 a month. He had been with the Frisco since 1915, when he entered the employ of the general baggage office in Springfield, Mo. He had formerly been a drug clerk, and express company employe, in Springfield.

He is 6 feet tall, with bespeckled face and sallow complexion. He said he was a nephew of William Young, former Chief of Police and later Police Commissioner, who died in 1925. Chalmers had expected to obtain release on $10,000 bond, but the amount was increased when the extent of his peculiations was learned. The $40,000 bond was approved by Judge Butler in Court of Criminal Correction and is returnable before him April 25. Pending presentation of the case to the grand jury Chalmers is charged in a temporary warrant with a specific embezzlement of $825.42 last Feb. 4.

While the Frisco accounting department is making an audit to determine the exact amount embezzled, which may be announced tomorrow, Frisco private detectives are investigating to learn if anything can be recovered. E. T. Miller, vice president and general solicitor of the Frisco, said Chalmers was not under surety bond. The question of restitution has not been discussed, Miller said.

Chalmers had $239.90 cash and a $200 check in his pockets when arrested. There was only a small balance in his personal account at the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Bank.

Trips to East Side.

Chalmers, depositing checks intended for the Frisco in his own account at the Vandervoort Bank, became acquainted with Phillips, who was manipulating other funds to which he helped himself. As a teller, Phillips recorded Chalmers' deposits. The Frisco Building, at Ninth and Olive streets, is across from the bank quarters. After working hours, Phillips and Chalmers visited East Side gambling establishments.

"I'm not the only one that's taking what doesn't belong to him," Phillips remarked when arrested. "There's lots of guys getting away with it."

Pressed for details, Phillips said checks made payable to the Frisco, averaging $2000 to $3000 a month, were being deposited at his window to a personal account, and the man making the deposits had been seen by him at gambling resorts. Phillips said he became interested in gambling after a customer at the bank told him of visits to such places. Whether Phillips named Chalmers as the customer has not been disclosed.

"That guy Phillips turned me up," Chalmers told police when taken to Headquarters.

Chalmers admitted to Frisco officials that he had deposited to his own account checks given to the Frisco by the Post-Dispatch, the Globe-Democrat and the Kansas City Star for carrying papers in baggage cars. This had been going on for more than four years in the case of the St. Louis newspapers, two and a half years in the case of the Kansas City Star.

Because of the haste with which bundles of newspapers sometimes must be handled, it is not practicable to make out waybills for them, as is done with express matter. Instead the papers keep accounts of the weight of their bundles, and make monthly remittances to their railroad company. The checks sent to the Frisco were in a form prescribed by Chalmers and were payable to the Frisco, Chalmers and Nourse, the passenger traffic manager. Chalmers made the indorsement of the railroad with a rubber stamp, forged Nourse's signature, signed his own name and deposited the checks to his own account.

Post-Dispatch checks thus handled, as shown by a checkup, number 38 and totaled $42,407.59, extending back to the early part of 1926. Further inquiry indicated this total might be raised $3000 or more, as it appeared peculations went back further, into 1925. Aside from the 38 checks, 13 Post-Dispatch checks reached the treasurer of the Frisco and were cashed for the railroad in the proper manner.

A checkup by the Kansas City Star placed the loss to the Frisco from Star checks misappropriated by Chalmers at $31,708.72.

W. C. Houser, treasurer of the Globe-Democrat, thought the Frisco might have lost $40,00 in that paper's checks. The Globe-Democrat had sent the Frisco $51,000 in checks over a five-year period, but not all the checks were indorsed in the same way. Houser was unable to give exact figures on how many checks had passed through Chalmers' account, as all the canceled checks had been turned over to Frisco officers.

Leo V. Youngworth to Confer With Directors of Hospital for Crippled Children.

Leo V. Youngworth, imperial potentate of Shriners, will arrive in St. Louis today from New York to confer with directors of the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children. He will leave tonight for Mexico City.

Youngworth and his party will be met at Union Station by local Shriners and will be escorted to the Mayfair Hotel for breakfast. Matters pertaining to the hospital will be discussed. The hospital is one of 10 institutions supported by Shriners. The institutions are open to crippled children under 14 years old, regardless of race or creed. Conditions under which children are admitted are that parents are unable to pay for treatment, and that there is reason to think the patient will improve under expert treatment.

BUTTE, Mont., April 12.—Herman Carbon, 24 years old, pilot, and Bill Gordon, 27, a passenger, were killed tonight about a mile from the Three Forks Airport, in an airplane crash. The ship went into a dive from a height of about 200 feet.

Carbon was a flyer with about 120 hours' experience and was with the Three Forks Aircraft School.

CANNON TO TESTIFY IN LOBBY INQUIRY

Southern Methodist Episcopal Bishop to Reply to Tinkham's Charges.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Southern Methodist Church, a prohibitionist, may appear before the Senate Lobby Committee. In a letter today to Senator Caraway, chairman of the committee, Bishop Cannon, chairman of the Southern Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service, said he would be glad to appear.

The letter was written after Congressman Tinkham (Rep.) Massachusetts, had announced he would demand that the lobby committee investigate the prohibition activities of Cannon and the Southern Methodist Board.

Commenting on the letter, which said both Cannon and E. L. Crawford, secretary of the board, would be glad to testify, Caraway announced they would be given an opportunity to reply to Tinkham, if they wished.

Tinkham, an outspoken wet, has demanded that the Lobby Committee investigate the Anti-Saloon League and the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Northern Methodist Church and that it procure a list of contributions of $500 or more to the Federal Council of Churches.

"Surface Not Yet Scratched," La Guardia Declares.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Asserting the Senate Lobby Committee "hasn't scratched the surface" in its investigation of Muscle Shoals, Congressman La Guardia (Rep.), New York, today predicted the "biggest national scandal ever broken in Washington," if an attempt be made to revive the American Cyanamid Corporation's bid for the Alabama project.

"The pressure of the Cyanamid Corporation on House members in the last Congress was tremendous," La Guardia said, adding that "it was even able to get the House Military Affairs Committee to hold a rump meeting."

"But the background was so rotten they never dared to call up the bill on the floor of the House," he continued.

"The lobbying activities of this company included every bit and kind of lobbying that is often told in fiction. There wasn't a thing with which men may be tempted that wasn't provoked to make friends for their bill. Thousands of innocent investors were induced to buy land at Muscle Shoals. People who put their money there are now being canvassed and told their investments depend on the Cyanamid big going through.

"They, in turn, naturally become excited and write letters about this bill. As a matter of fact, if the Cyanamid bill would pass there would be less men employed on the project than under any other proposition. If there is any attempt to revive the Cyanamid bill, I predict it will be the biggest national scandal ever broken in Washington, and will be so far-reaching that it will affect both political parties.

"The Senate Committee has not obtained all the facts, and startling as their disclosures may be, they haven't scratched the surface of the activities of the Cyanamid Corporation to jam their bill through Congress."

Many witnesses, including Chairman Huston of the Republican National Committee, have been heard recently by the Senate Committee in its inquiry into activities surrounding legislation on the 10-year-old Muscle Shoals problem.

Two measures proposing disposition of the property are now before the House Military Affairs Committee, one the Norris resolution to authorize governmental operation, which has been adopted by the Senate, and the other the Wright bill to lease the project to the Cyanamid company for 50 years.

FRENCH AID ROUT OF COMMUNISTS RAIDING IN CHINA

Join With Local Troops After Their Lungchow Consulate Is Burned — 500 Reds Killed in Fight.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, April 12.—Chinese press dispatches from Canton today reported that "a private letter from Lungchow, Kwangsi Province, stated that since Jan. 1, Communists had been looting districts along the border of French Indo-China. The climax of their activities was reached March 25, when they raided and burned the French consulate at Lungchow, driving away the French Consul and occupying the Lungchow customs offices.

The letter continues: "The raid caused the French to send 300 soldiers and five airplanes, assisting Chinese troops, in defeating the Communists, 500 of whom were slain. Five Russians were captured with many Chinese Communists. The Chinese soldiers executed the Russian and Chinese prisoners with machine guns."

Widespread Communist depredations directed by Chinese and Russian agitators, say Chinese press dispatches, are taking place in Southwest Kwangsi Province. Communications in the affected area are paralyzed.

Suffering among the people whom the Communists have victimized are declared to be "beyond description."

LEIPSIC EDITOR SENTENCED

REMBRANDT REPORTED BOUGHT BY CHICAGOAN

Mrs. Neilson Said to Have Paid $250,000 for "Young Lady With a Fan."

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Art circles today discussed a report that Mrs. Francis Neilson, wife of an author and daughter of the late Gustavus Swift, packer, had acquired Rembrandt's "Young Lady with a Fan."

Mrs. Neilson is in Paris with her husband, who was in the British Parliament before coming to America. Friends here learned she paid $250,000 for the canvas and that it was obtained by a London gallery from the collection of Lord Leconfield in Petworth House, Sussex.

The painting is now being brought to America, Mrs. Neilson's friend say, and will be included in an exhibit next month in Detroit, arranged by Dr. W. R. Valentiner. The "Young Man Rising From His Chair," a companion picture in the collection of the late Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati publisher, will also be shown. The paintings became separated many years ago.

Mrs. Neilson's latest acquisition added another to the list of valuable canvases owned by Chicagoans. Another recently brought here was Raphael's "Nameless," for which a connoisseur who has preferred to remain unidentified, is said to have paid between $300,000 and $500,000.

YALE ATHLETE OPERATED ON

Sidney Kieselhorst, St. Louis, Has Appendicitis Attack.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Sidney B. Kieselhorst of St. Louis, captain of the Yale track team and intercollegiate champion in the low hurdles for two years, underwent an operation for appendicitis today and will be out of competition for the coming season. Kieselhorst suffered a violent attack late last night. He was resting comfortably today.

Gideon served several terms as a member of the city council under the aldermanic form of government. He was elected Judge of the Greene County Probate Court in 1914 and re-elected in 1918. He was defeated for re-nomination in 1922 by A. C. Hayward, former chief prohibition enforcement agent here and supported Judge John H. Fairman, Democratic candidate, who was elected over Hayward.

Gideon defeated E. E. E. McJimsey, long active in Republican politics, for mayor, April 3, 1928. McJimsey had the support of the organization Republicans led by George W. Hendrickson, postmaster, and O. E. Gorman, former member of the Republican State Committee.

An effort was made to recall Gideon, but the vote was 7521 against the recall to 6595 for it at a special election held last Oct. 15. In all his races, he has declared himself the candidate of the "cotton sock crowd" as against the representatives of the "silk stocking bunch." Before and during the campaign, charges were made that there was corruption in the police department, which is under the direct control of the mayor.

Teaf, long a resident of Springfield, was for several years a member of the Police Department under Mayor W. E. Freeman. He had risen from the ranks to a sergeant when he was dismissed by Freeman. The sergeant, veteran of the Spanish-American War and former commander of the local post of Veterans of Foreign Wars, was alleged to have taken possession of the grounds where a carnival company was exhibiting.

During his service on the police force and later, Teaf studied law and was admitted to the bar. He devoted little time, however, to practice, and was appointed Assistant Chief of Police immediately after Gideon's election.

Kell's Record.

Kell, a trouper of the old school, is the owner of a company which plays throughout the country from Southern Illinois to Texas. The company plays one-week stands in a tent during the warmer months, and engagements in indoor theaters during the remainder of the year.

The indictment of Gideon followed the sentencing Friday of Pike to a year in Leavenworth penitentiary on his plea of guilty to receiving monthly payments of $15 from John Yancey, confessed bootlegger, to allow the latter to sell liquor without police interference.

Another former public official sentenced for violation of the prohibition law was John Riley Combs, ex-Sheriff and former Judge of Taney County. Combs was sentenced to a year after pleading guilty of selling five gallons of whisky.

CONCERTED WORK FOR REGIONAL PLANNING BEGUN

Body Proposed to Guide Development of St. Louis Metropolitan Area in Missouri and Illinois.

A temporary organization has been formed to arrange for the establishment of a regional planning association to guide the development of the metropolitan area centering around St. Louis in Missouri and Illinois.

At a meeting at the Missouri Athletic Association Friday night, representatives of governmental and civic bodies were present from St. Louis, from St. Charles, Jefferson and St. Louis counties, Missouri, and from St. Clair, Madison and Monroe counties, Illinois. The scope of the proposed regional planning will not necessarily be limited to these counties. The Civic Development Committee of the Chamber of Commerce arranged the meeting.

Luther Ely Smith, chairman of this committee, was chosen head of the temporary regional organization; C. E. Williams, vice chairman, and Charles H. Diel, secretary. Organization is to be completed within the next month.

Example of Other Cities.

Harland Bartholomew, engineer of the City Plan Commission, addressing the meeting, pointed out that the physical city is not bounded by political lines alone. A regional plan differed from a strictly city plan, he said, being much more comprehensive. A regional plan "is a concept of an area in which population and industry will distribute itself and the preparation of a pattern for the area so that industry and population can find itself," he explained.

By way of illustration, Bartholomew related that the Boston district had brought about solutions of water, sewerage, drainage and park problems through co-operative action of the communities in the region; that similar means had been used to solve the New York transportation problem and to provide an outer park system for Chicago.

The automobile, which has scattered and expanded population, had done most to focus attention on the need of regional planning, he declared. All city and county governments and other communities, he went on, were faced with the problem of providing drainage, sewerage, parks and other things, and soon would have to determine whether they were justified in providing finances for such things over unlimited areas.

Points to Be Considered.

Among the things which should be studied in a regional plan, Bartholomew declared, were: Size of future population, distribution of population, provision of a good base map, physical characteristics of the area, such as the natural locations for industries and homes; street and highway layout to connect population centers—not as complicated a problem as a city plan; transportation, railroad location and facilities for industries, advisability of prohibiting industries from locating in certain areas, zoning and park systems.

One other problem involves the shifting of property uses, Bartholomew said, continuing: "The extent to which industry is moving around is surprising. That's a significant trend. Coupled with it is the broader question of what caused the development of a region and what are the things retarding its development."

A plan for the region is a splendid and justifiable thing, even if only a means of suggestion, Bartholomew declared; people will welcome it although there may be no legal grounds for enforcing it. The most important thing now, he concluded, is to get planning action before it is too late to correct many mistakes.

Representatives from a number of Missouri and Illinois communities in the region spoke in support of the planning proposal.

R. H. HAYES, EAST SIDE REAL ESTATE DEALER, FALLS DEAD

Collapsed While Working in Garden; Funeral Will Be at Residence Tomorrow at 2 P. M.

Robert H. Hayes, East St. Louis real estate dealer, collapsed yesterday afternoon while working in the garden of his home at 1645 North Forty-sixth street and died within a few minutes. Death was attributed to heart disease.

Mr. Hayes, who was 59 years old, had been associated with his brothers, William and Samuel, in the real estate business for many years. Surviving also are his widow, two sons and a daughter. The funeral will be at the residence tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be at Lebanon, Ill.

Italian Auto Racer Killed.

By the Associated Press.

SIENA, Italy, April 12.—Enrico Berni, piloting an automobile in a 1000-mile race around Italy, was killed near here today when his machine crashed into a bridge. Count Da Vinci, riding with him, was not hurt. Near Porta Romana another racer piloted by Moretti crashed into a wall and was completely wrecked. The pilot was not hurt.

OFFICERS FOR MERGED CITY RECOMMENDED

Nolte Proposed for Comptroller, Deuser of County for Treasurer Under Plan.

A recommendation to make the Comptroller of St. Louis the chief fiscal officer or comptroller of Greater St. Louis—the proposed metropolitan government of St. Louis and St. Louis County—has been adopted by the Finance Committee of the Council on Metropolitan Government, the Post-Dispatch has learned.

The treasurer of St. Louis County would be ex-officio treasurer of Greater St. Louis, under another recommendation of the committee. This step was taken to give recognition to county interests.

If the metropolitan plan is adopted according to the preesnt schedule, it would become effective early next year. Louis Nolte, who has made a notable record as Comptroller in the city, will be in office then, as will Philip G. Deuser, county treasurer.

Who Shall Be Chief?

The problem of who shall be head of the Greater St. Louis government confronts the leaders in the metropolitan plan movement. So far, it has been decided that the law making and appointing power shall be in the hands of a Metropolitan Council of 11, with six members chosen from city districts, four from county districts and the presiding officer-at-large in the whole area. Whether the presiding officer shall be known as Mayor, President or Chairman or by some other title has not been determined, nor has the relationship of this office to the present form of city administration been settled. It is foreseen that some official should be recognized as head of the metropolitan government, if only for ceremonial purposes.

Official announcement will be made next Sunday of the plan of the Greater St. Louis government, after which it will be printed in pamphlet form for a wide dissemination. The City and County Metropolitan Development Committee, Chamber of Commerce Building, will invite the fullest public discussion of the plan and welcome suggestions about it. A complete general summary of the plan was published in Friday's Post-Dispatch.

As son as a committee of lawyers working in behalf of the Metropolitan committee completes its consideration of the verbiage and form of the proposed enabling constitutional amendment, the amendment will be made public, and circulation of initiative petitions to put it on the Missouri ballots next November will be started. This is expected to be not later than May 1.

Vote on Plan in November.

It is proposed to have the amendment voted on throughout the State at the November general election. If it is adopted, the detailed merger plan, in the form of a Greater St. Louis charter, will be submitted to the voters of the city and county in separate elections early next year. The League of County Municipalities has adopted a resolution calling for full public discussion of the plan and expressing "unalterable opposition" to submission of the enabling amendment without advance public discussion.

Robert A. Roessel, chairman of the Metropolitan Development Committee, calling attention to the plan to give wide publicity to the project and amendment, said the league's resolution was adopted after a talk by Circuit Judge Lashly of the county, who has been a critic of the merger activities.

"Judge Lashly was taken to the meeting by Mayor Wilson of Webster Groves," Roessel asserted, "and he denounced and ridiculed the plan. He dictated the resolution which they passed, inciting them to action without deliberation or full information."

CLAYTON EXPECTED TO FIGHT SALE OF COUNTY WATER CO.

Protest to Public Service Body Would Cite $8,350,000 Price as Too High.

A formal protest to the State Public Service Commission against approval of the purchase of the St. Louis County Water Co., by the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation for $8,350,000 is expected to be filed by the City of Clayton. A resolution of protest has been drafted by Glenn Mohler, City Attorney, for introduction in the Board of Aldermen Tuesday night.

The resolution doubtless will be adopted, as the board at its last meeting authorized the drafting of it. The grounds of protest will be, first, that the price for the wa company is so far in excess of t Public Service Commission valu tion, $5,590,000, that it would r sult in an increase in rates, a second, that if a city-county me ger plan is adopted the new m nicipality would have to pay t high a price to acquire the coun water company on account of t high purchase price named in th sale.

The Commonwealth Utiliti Corporation, which is a subsidiar of United Gas Improvement Co poration of Philadelphia, has a plied to the Public Service Co mission for authority to purcha the 14,000 shares of common sto of the water company at $225 share. This stock was issued fo years ago at $20 a share.

UNERAL SERVICES FOR MISS SUSAN B. BEESON

Teacher Who Began Work in 1857 and Served 50 Years Buried in Calvary Cemetery.

The funeral of Miss Susan B. Beeson, 89 years old, who, prior to her resignation in 1907, taught in the St. Louis public schools for 50 years, was held at St. Joseph's Church, Farmington, Mo., yesterday. Burial was at Calvary Cemetery, St. Louis. Miss Beeson died Friday at the home of her niece, Mrs. M. P. Cayce, at Farmington.

Miss Beeson was appointed a teacher in February, 1857, at the age of 16. She first taught at the Benton School and later at the Eliot and O'Fallon schools. In 1871 she was made a teacher of English nad history of art at Central High School, where she remained until 1887, when she became a member of the faculty of the old Normal. She returned to Central when the normal was merged with the high school, 10 years later, and continued there until her resignation.

Miss Beeson resigned after 50 years of teaching because, she said, she believed younger teachers should be employed.

ECHO OF CHICAGO SCHOOL ROW

Disbarment of Attorney J. J. Gorman Sought.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 12.—The disbarment of John J. Gorman of Chicago was asked in the State Supreme Court today by the Chicago Bar Association. Charges of unethical conduct, growing out of Gorman's activities in the conflict with Superintendent of Schools McAndrews of Chicago, are the basis of the request. The controversy was part of Mayor William Hale Thompson's campaign to "purge" school text-books of alleged "pro-British" propaganda.

The bar association also asked the court to disbar Robert E. Hogan of Chicago for a violation of ethics.

16 CHILDREN RESCUED IN HOSPITAL EXPLOSION

Employe Burned to Death at Irvington, N. Y.—Nurses Save Patients.

By the Associated Press.

IRVINGTON, N. Y., April 12.—An employe was burned to death and 16 disabled children were carried to safety today when heated wax ignited in an undetermined manner, exploded causing a fire which destroyed Irvington House Cardiac Home, a private hospital for children with heart disease.

Edward Bryce, 28 years old, handyman and mechanic at the institution, was fatally injured.

The 14 nurses at the hospital, directed by their supervisor, Miss Lena Buffton, carried the 16 disabled children, wrapped in blankets, down fire escapes and inside staircases to the garage and other buildings on the hospital grounds. These children, and a few others, along with several nurses, were the only ones in the hospital when the explosion occurred in the basement.

There were 78 children patients at the hospital but most of them were on the lawn. Miss Buffton ran three times through the building, accompanied by five nurses, to make certain that all the children had been carried out. She and the nurses were ordered from the building by firemen.

Neighbors brought blankets, clothes and other coverings to protect the children from the cold and lent automobiles for their transportation to homes and the grounds of the Ardsley Country Club.

Bryce was trapped in the burning basement for 35 minutes before police and firemen, who came from Dobbs Ferry, North Tarrytown, Tarrytown and Irvington, took hi mout. He died later.

39 SENTENCED IN LIQUOR CONSPIRACY IN OKLAHOMA

Former Sheriff of Pottawatomie County Gets Maximum, Two Years and $1000 Fine.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., April 12.—Sentences were passed today on 39 defendants in the Government's Pottawatomie County liquor conspiracy case in United States District Court here. Frank Fox, former Sheriff of Pottawatomie County, got the maximum penalty, two years in prison, and a fine of $1000. Randall Pitman, attorney, charged with being at the head of a county-wide liquor ring, was acquitted at the trial in February.

The eight defendants who stood trial received heavier penalties than the 31 who pleaded guilty. J. W. (Smoky) Motsenbacher, alleged head of an alcohol ring in the county, was the only other defendant to receive the maximum sentence and fine.

Many of the defendants who pleaded guilty were given suspended sentences or sentences already covered by the time they have been in jail, permitting their immediate release.

Clarence Burdette and Sam Honnicutt, both of Chickasha, received one year in jail each. Mrs. Ruth Morgan May, young wife of a divinity student who was a key Government witness, received one year in jail and was paroled. She was one of the principal witnesses for the Government. Sentencing of Homer Knappenberger, former Mayor of Earlsboro, was deferred pending the disposition of other charges against him.

One hundred and two persons were indicted in the liquor conspiracy case last fall.

FIREMEN RESCUE CHILD FROM WATER 'SHUT-OFF' BOX

2-Year-Old Girl Tried to See if Foot Would Fit and It Did.

An engine company of the Fire Department was summoned yesterday to extricate 2-year-old Nona Saitta when her left foot became fastened in a water "shut-off" box, embedded in the pavement in front of her home, 3007 Montgomery street. Traffic was blocked for several minutes during the excitement and a crowd of some 200 persons gathered to witness the rescue.

The child was playing in the street with other children when she thrust her foot into the iron box "to see if it would fit." It did, and Nona was unable to withdraw it.

The other children rallied the neighbors and passers-by, but all efforts to release the child failed until firemen arrived and dug around the box with shovels, broke off the water pipe below and lifted out a section of the pipe with Nona and the box. The box was then broken with hammers, Nona emerging uninjured.

OPPOSITION TO BRUENING GOVERNMENT FAILS TWICE

Nationalists Attempt to Hold Out on Taxation, Communists Lose in Conference Vote.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 12.—The Cabinet of Chancellor Bruening, aided by a threat of new elections, again steered safely between the Nationalist opposition, on the one side, and the Communist and Socialist opposition on the other, in the Reichstag today.

By a vote of 217 to 205 Nationalist attempts to hold out on the Government in matters of taxation while simultaneously pushing their agrarian plans were defeated in that Chancellor Bruening out-maneuvered them with a resolution binding the finance and agrarian programs together.

After this test vote the Government, throughout the day's second reading of the finance bills, obtained approval so that passage on the third reading seemed assured.

As a final gesture of defiance this afternoon the Communists introduced a motion of non-confidence, but this was voted down 222 to 203.

MAN'S BODY FOUND IN VACANT FLAT, WITH REVOLVER NEARBY

Shot in Right Temple; Letters Addressed to Lewis Gardner in His Pocket.

The body of a man was found in the attic of a vacant flat at 2102-04 North Tenth street, yesterday, by policemen. Next to him was a revolver with one cartridge discharged and investigation showed a bullet wound in the right temple. He had been dead some time.

Among papers in his pockets were two letters addressed to Lewis Gardner, one bearing the address of 2301 North Thirteenth street and the other 2109 North Thirteenth. There also was a letter addressed to Mrs. H. Gardner, 4212 Evans avenue.

The man was about 50 years old, 5 feet six inches tall, and weighed about 155 pounds. He was bald, and was dressed in a blue flannel shirt and a brown suit. An eagle, with the letters U. S., was tattooed on his left forearm.

Fears Chicago Gunmen; Divorced.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Vienna is not too far away from Chicago for Mathias Riger, who told his wife he wouldn't come here because he was afraid he would be shot by gunmen. Mrs. Riger, who came here from Vienna in 1923, told Judge Williams her story in asking for a divorce. She got it. Mrs. Riger had written her husband of the glories of Chicago, but Riger said he would stay in Vienna and feel safe."

U. S. DISMISSES SUIT AGAINST GASOLINE TAX

Three Judges Hold Interstate Trade Is Not Involved in Missouri Levy.

A suit of the Central Transfer Co., seeking to enjoin collection by Missouri of a tax of 2 cents a gallon on gasoline used in motor vehicles and attacking the tax law as unconstitutional on the ground that it amounted to confiscation of property and interfered with interstate commerce, was dismissed by a Federal statutory three-judge court, comprising District Judges Faris and Davis and Circuit Judge Stone, yesterday.

Dismissal was ordered on ground that the court lacked jurisdiction, "due primarily to the fact that all parties to the suit are residents of the State of Missouri and are doing business in the State." However, the court handed down an opinion, written by Judge Faris, in which it held that support of the plaintiff's contention "would result in such a multitude of impracticabilities as would render a State excise tax on motor fuel oils well nigh unenforceable."

"For if the law were otherwise," the opinion adds, "any traveler on any interstate journey, whether for pleasure or business, could insist, when buying such oils locally, on exemption from tax either in toto or pro rata—in toto, in fact, if plaintiff's contention here be allowed with all its thoroughgoing implications."

The court cited the Helson case, a gasoline tax controversy in which the United States Supreme Court held that taxing in Kentucky of gasoline bought in Illinois did impose a burden on interstate commerce and added if such a situation should appear here, this court would hold likewise. Such, however, was declared not to be the case in this instance because the Central Transfer Co., which operates a fleet of trucks and tractors, had bought its gasoline in Missouri and no interstate problem was involved.

"We know of no case," continues the opinion, "in which a State is not privileged to levy an excise tax on an article of trade or commodity when such commodity has finally come to rest in such State, and this is so even though the purchaser may intend to use and does use the commodity in making interstate trips or in interstate commerce.

"Clearly, therefore, there is no substance in the plaintiff's contention that such a tax levies a burden on interstate commerce and such contention must be placed in the category of things which are, in law, denominated frivolous."

WOMAN KILLED; FAMILY OF FOUR HURT IN PLANE CRASH

Ship Belonging to Barnstorming Circus Falls 100 Feet at Pecos (Tex.) Airport.

By the Associated Press.

PECOS, Tex., April 12. — Miss Letha Prewitt of Pecos was killed and five other persons were injured seriously today in an airplane crash at the airport here.

Mr. and Mrs. William Turner and their two small children, of Pecos, are among the injured. The pilot, John Eckler, suffered a broken nose.

The plane had gained an altitude of about 100 feet on the take-off when the motor stalled and the ship side-slipped to the ground. It was operated by a barnstorming circus to take up passengers.

FIREMAN HURT IN BLAZE

Damage of $5000 to Building at 4125 Olive Street.

Fire of undetermined origin on the second floor of a building at 4125 Olive street, occupied by the Tucker Upholstering Co., early yesterday morning caused damage estimated at $5000. The blaze, which began about 4 o'clock, tied up traffic. Fireman John Schwieder, Engine Company No. 50, was cut on the right arm when a skylight broke and glass fell on him.

A fire Friday midnight in a garage at the rear of 3955 California avenue caused $500 damage to the building and two automobiles.

HOOVER CALLED ON IN DISPUTE OVER BUYING ERIE CANAL

Michigan Senator Threatens to Fight River Bill Providing $110,000,000 Budget.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Warfare broke out on Capitol Hill today over proposals for Federal acquisition of the Erie Canal in New York State and the Illinois Waterways, but after President Hoover had intervened, House leaders stood by their decisions for these projects despite Senate threats.

Senator Vandenberg (Rep.) of Michigan, went to the White House and told the President "there will be no rivers and harbors legislation, if the Erie Canal project is kept in the river and harbors bill." He said it would "throttle the St. Lawrence River waterway scheme."

Mr. Hoover called in Chairman Dempsey of the House Rivers and Harbors committee, who sponsored the Erie Canal acquisition, and Congressman Hull (eRp.), Illinois, advocate of the Illinois waterway project, both of whom were accused by Vandenberg of "bludgeoning" War Department engineers into favorable reports on these proposals.

Committee Meets.

Returning to Capitol, Dempsey called his committee together to work out the final terms of the $110,000,000 rivers and harbors bill and announced the provisions for acquisition of the Erie and Oswego Canals in New York State would be kept in the bill when it is reported to the House. Hull said the same of the Illinois waterways.

Both Dempsey and Hull said their hour's conference with the President was very pleasant. Vandenberg, who was at the executive office earlier in the day, likewise came away pleased with his reception, but bitterly opposed to the Erie project. He said he was convinced of the President's favor toward the St. Lawrence waterway plan, which, Vandenberg feels, is imperiled by the Erie Canal acquisition. Opponents of the St. Lawrence waterway insist on an all-American route from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic, and the Erie Canal is part of this project.

Committee in Night Session.

The $110,000,000 bill for extension of waterways through inland territory was favorably acted on tonight by the House Rivers and Harbors Committee. A few days ago the bill seemed headed for the $150,000,000 mark, but at the request of President Hoover it was kept down.

The measure provides for bringing under Federal supervision key links to waterways that will connect the Atlantic—by way of the Erie and Oswego Canals, the Great Lakes connecting channels —with the Middle West and then down by Chicago and the Illinois River to the Mississippi and the Gulf.

Among the latest items to be added to the bill was an authorization for $3,058,000 furnishing additional locks at Keokuk, Ia. and at the Twin City dam on the stretch of the Upper Mississippi River between the mouth of the Illinois River and Minneapolis. For the St. Louis-to-Grafton (Ill.) stretch of the Mississippi, $1,500,000 was included.

The largest single item in the bill is $29,000,000 for the Great Lakes connecting channels. The bill authorizes a three-year program of expenditures totaling $15,000,000 on the Missouri River between Kansas City and Sioux City.

Important items are $4,066,000 for construction of levees at Lake Okeechobee, Fla., to prevent a recurrence of the flood of 1928 in which 2000 or more lives were lost; $8,346,000 for a breakwater outside Los Angeles and Long Beach Harbor; $6,000,000 for the intracoastal waterway from the Cape Fear River, North Carolina, down the coast line to Charleston, S. C., and other amounts set aside for other waterways along the Atlantic; and $3,441,000 for development of the first 80 miles upstream from Paducah, Ky., on the Tennessee River, and $150,000 for surveys on the same river between Muscle Shoals Dam No. 3 and Hales Bar, above Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Illinois waterways, now State controlled, would be taken over by the Government under Hull's proposal, with $7,500,000 for completion of the work. No appropriation would be provided in this bill for the Erie Canal, the measure merely allowing for its transfer to the Federal Government from the State.

"We don't propose," Vandenberg announced, "to have the fundamental issue of the St. Lawrence waterways throttled by Congress in Congressman Dempsey's grab bag.

"I protested that the War Department engineers are making policy decisions which it is none of their business to make. It seems to be generally admitted that some of the inquisitive gentlemen from Illinois and New York used a political bludgeon on the engineers instead of an engineering argument.

JUDGE SPRAGUE DEFENDS SAILING OF MODELS IN PARK

Protests as Citizen Against Pape's Threat to Bar Event to Prevent Congestion.

Circuit Judge Sprague, as a citizen, has written Park Commissioner Pape in protest against Pape's threat to prohibit the sailing of model boats in a Forest Park lake east of the Municipal Theater because of the automobile congestion it causes in the park on Sundays. Judge Sprague objected that golf, baseball and tennis in the park are responsible for much more motor congestion, comparatively few persons engaging in the boat pastime.

The Judge spoke in behalf of the children and others interested in model boats.

Fred E. A. Brock, secretary-treasurer of the Omar Tool & Machine Co., has written the Post-Dispatch that as many persons fly kites near he lakes as sail boats in it, and that the kite enthusiasts might just as well be held to cause congestion. Brock had visited Pape to arrange to have the water level in the lake maintained to make it easier to manage model boats. Brock said it was hoped to convince Pape that his attitude about the possible prohibition of the sailing was beyond reason.

Removal of bulrushes and overhanging branches had been asked of Pape by persons interested in the sailing, but Pape said he could do nothing because the lake is under jurisdiction of the State Game & Fish Department, which propagates fish there. Brock asserted that the surroundings made this lake a poor place for this purpose and that the expense was not warranted.

NEW YORK ANTI-FASCIST KILLED BY POLICE BURIED AS MARTYR

Parade and Speeches Mark Funeral of Italian Student Slain by Stray Bullet.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Carlo Mazzolo, Italian student, who was killed by a detective's stray bullet at an anti-Fascist meeting in Cooper Union last Sunday, was buried today as a "martyr of a sublime ideal."

More than 1500 anti-Fascists, obtaining a permit from police, held a parade with the funeral cortege to Union Square where speakers addressed the crowd.

Mazzolo's body had lain in state since Sunday in the offices of an Italian newspaper. The funeral procession was led by a band and mounted policemen. More than 100 policemen had been stationed along the parade route and in Union Square, but they said they anticipated no trouble.

Anti-Fascist organizers had refused to allow a delegation of communists to march in the procession or to participate in the speaking at Union Square.

SCRANTON EX-MAYOR CONVICTED OF GRAFT

Head of Slot Machine Syndicate Testified Against Millionaire Official.

By the Associated Press.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 12.—Former Mayor E. B. Jermyn and Harry J. Friend, former Civil Service Commissioner, were found guilty of conspiracy in Criminal Court today. They have been on trial for the last week as the result of charges that graft was paid to them by heads of a syndicate operating slot machines in an open-handed manner in this city for many months during the Jermyn administration. The indictments were returned by the January grand jury.

Sentence was deferred by Judge Maxey.

Jermyn and Friend are the first of more than 100 persons in Lackawanna County under indictment in connection with the crusade against gambling, to be brought to trial.

They were charged with conspiracy to afford protection to the operation of slot machines in Scranton against police interference.

Jermyn is a multi-millionaire and a member of a prominent family interested in anthracite mining. He was twice Mayor of Scranton. Friend is his cousin and was Civil Service Commissioner in the Jermyn administration.

The principal witness against the accused men was Edward G. Miller, alleged head of the slot machine syndicate. He testified that he paid about $700 a week for protection to Friend, who, Miller said, told him he turned over three-fourths of it to "City Hall."

$314,486 SUIT FILED OVER REAL ESTATE DEVELOPMENT

Suit for $314,486 against John W. Rowan, president of the John W. Rowan Plastering Co., 411 North Seventh street, and Gus A. Veninga, 307 South Gore avenue, Webster Groves, was filed in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday by C. H. Bayless of Ladue and McKnight roads, president of C. H. Bayless, Inc., a real estate development concern.

In his petition, Bayless alleges that on July 13, last, he transferred to the defendants 778 shares of capital stock of C. H. Bayless, Inc., pursuant to an agreement that the defendants would render certain specified assistance in financing and developing a tract of Ladue Terrace property lying north of Ladue and west of McKnight road. This, he declares, the defendants have failed to do. The amount he seeks to recover, he states, represents a fair valuation of the 778 shares of stock.

Commenting on the suit, Jesse W. Barrett, attorney representing Rowan, declared the valuation figure was "ridiculously high," and that the agreement into which Rowan and Veninga entered with Bayless had ben carried out.

TUBERCULOSIS DEATH RATE 5 PCT. LOWER IN 1929 IN CITY

Disease in St. Louis Fatal to 823 Last Year, Including 315 Negroes.

The tuberculosis death rate in St. Louis decreased 5 per cent in 1929, falling from 101 deaths per 100,000 population in 1928 to 96 last year, according to a report given the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis yesterday by Dr. Howard H. Bell, city tuberculosis controller.

Deaths here last year from tuberculosis totaled 823, including 315 Negroes and two Chinese. The Negro tuberculosis death rate dropped 7 per cent, although it is more than five times that of the white rate. The Negro rate for 1929 was 339 deaths per 100,000 population.

Opening of 130 additional free hospital beds for tuberculosis patients contributed to the lowered rate, Dr. Bell said. About 400 more beds are urgently needed, he said, to aid in the hospitalization of some of 10,000 cases of the disease in St. Louis at the present time.

STENOGRAPHERS SWITCH AFTER ANTI-NEPOTISM DECISION

Judge S. G. Nipper Asks Wife's Niece to Resign; She Gets Her Successor's Job.

The decision of the Missouri Supreme Court last week upholding the anti-nepotism amendment to the Constitution as self-enforcing without any legislative enabling act, caused a switch yesterday in stenographers in the St. Louis Court of Appeals. Judge Simon G. Nipper, one of the members of the court, immediately on reading the decision asked for the resignation of his stenographer, Miss Frances Coleman, who is a niece of his wife. Then he offered the position to Miss Selma Krone, stenographer for Robert L. Sutton, one of the commissioners of the court. Miss Krone accepted, so Commissioner Sutton, being without a stenographer, appointed Miss Coleman to succeed Miss Krone. The salary is $2000 a year.

MERCHANTS' TAXABLE SALES SHOW INCREASE

Rise for Year Ending May 31, 1929, $517,000 Compared to Previous 12 Months.

Taxable sales of St. Louis merchants for the 12 months ending June 1, 1929, were $517,000 more than in the previous 12 months, but manufacturers' taxable sales fell off $55,539,000 in the same period, License Collector Chapman reported yesterday.

Merchants' sales for the 12 months up to June 1 last amounted to $60,283,000, as compared to $600,766,000 for the year before, while manufacturers' sales declined from $674,731,000 to $619,222,000; stocks on hand May 31, amounted to $57,112,800 for merchants and $65,290,800 for manufacturers, as compared to $59,731,300 and $73,869,000, respectively, on May 31, 1928.

Stock and sales tax of merchants amounted to $1,324,824 for the latter period and $1,372,222 for the former; manufacturers, $1,455,206 to June 1, last, and $1,619,226 to June 1, 1928.

Total collections amounted to $4,259,934 for the 12 months ending June 1, last, as compared to $4,457,618 for the previous 12 months. The report showed that total collection expenses had been held down to the extent that $766 of the annual appropriation of $75,948 was turned back to the municipal revenue fund.

City licenses for dogs brought $9226, a decrease from $10,820, which itself was a decrease from $13,388; dance halls, $3250; private detectives, $1490; pawnbrokers, $11,600; junk peddlers, $7583. Gasoline tax receipts rose to $361,416 from $307,985, and automobile licenses to $580,365 from $537,825, an increase of 1531 city licenses being issued.

Of total collections, $1,040,430 goes to the School Board, $61,180 to soldiers' bonus, $48,919 to the Public Library; $36,721 to blind pension, $24,459 each to the Zoo and the Art Museum, and $24,305 to school bond interest and sinking fund.

PLANS TO CIRCLE GLOBE IN 12 DAYS BY PLANE

J. H. Mears, Who Holds Record of 23 Days by Air and Steamer Gets Permit to Cross Russia.

MOSCOW, April 12.—The Soviet Government has granted John Henry Mears, American round-the-world traveler, permission to fly over Soviet territory in his forthcoming attempt to lower his own record of 23 days and 15 hours for circling the globe. The authorities have offered to render him every possible assistance.

Mears, with the late Capt. C. B. D. Collyer, made a world record in circumnavigating the globe using both plane and ship. Mears plans to make the forthcoming trip entirely by plane, covering 19,400 miles. He hopes to make the journey in 12 days.

Announcement was made last February that Mears would have with him as pilot Bernt Balchen, who piloted Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd over the North and South Poles. The announced plans called for departure from New York thence to Harbor Grace, N. F.; Island of Olympia, Ireland; Moscow, Chita, Vladivostok, Tokio, Petropavlovsk, Kamchatcka, Seward, Seattle and back to New York.

NUMBER OF BOOKS LENT BY LIBRARY INCREASES

24,726 More Than March, 1929, and 30,204 More Than Last.

A total of 357,995 volumes for home use were issued by the libraries of the St. Louis Public Library system during March. This was an increase of 24,726 loaned volumes over March, 1929, and of 30,204 volumes over last February. The Carpenter branch, at Grand boulevard and Utah place, led in branch circulation with 27,254 loaned volumes, and the Crunden branch, Cass avenue and Fourteenth street, showed the largest gain for March of any of the branch libraries, circulating 15,900 volumes, a gain of 2001.

There were 166,315 borrowers' cards in force on April 1, 50,072 having been issued to men, 65,013 to women, 51,191 to children and 39 to institutions. During March, 5594 cards were issued, of which 2495 were granted to persons who had not had library cards before.

Volumes added to the libraries in March totalled 4089, of which 1851 went to the collection at the Central Library at Olive and Thirteenth streets.

MOTION TO DISMISS RYCKOFF CASE ARGUED

Judge Hamilton to Rule May 12 on Demurrer to $157,064 City Fraud Charge.

Attorneys for A. M. Ryckoff, Chicago contractor; John C. Pritchard, former Director of Public Utilities, and George B. Heath, former chief electrical engineer of the Utilities Department, yesterday presented before Judge Hamilton their arguments for dismissal of the information in which the three are charged with obtaining $157,064.66 from the city by false pretenses, in the execution of Ryckoff's contract for street lighting installation.

A demurrer to the information, filed recently by the defense lawyers, was argued by them and Circuit Attorney Miller. Judge Hamilton gave 10 days for further presentation of legal points raised in the discussion, and will rule on the demurrer before May 12, the date set for the trial.

The information now pending replaced an indictment voted against Ryckoff and the two former city officials. The indictment was voted after the Post-Dispatch showed, by a private engineer's investigation, that the city had been heavily overcharged by Ryckoff in paving and sidewalk replacement projects. The city then conducted a survey, through Pitzman's Co. of Surveyors and Engineers, and ascertained that the amount of the net overcharge on all items, whereupon the information was issued, citing the figures as ascertained by the survey.

Points of Arguments.

William Baer appeared for Ryckoff and Patrick H. Cullen for Pritchard and Heath. The point stressed in their arguments, was that the information did not state sufficient facts to permit preparation of a defense. They alleged that the State failed to plead the lighting contracts for Districts B, C and D, and did not set forth the location and boundaries of these districts.

The defense lawyers also charged the State had made the legal error of including allegations of wilful fraud, and of acts of mere negligence, in the same information.

Another charge of the defense was that Ryckoff, a private citizen, accused of making overcharges on his contract work, and the two (then) city officials, accused of giving their approval to the padded claims, should not have been jointly charged with the offense. Instead, the defense lawyers held, the officials should have been charged with official misconduct.

Insist on Separate Charge.

The defense lawyers argued that there were special statutes governing cases of official misconduct, and that under general rules of law, a special statute should be pleaded rather than a general one.

Circuit Attorney Miller termed the last point "interesting," but did not concede its legal force. He said the courts had held, in the St. Louis waterworks coal fraud case, that a city employe and an outside contractor could be jointly charged with fraud against the city.

He said the charge was one of obtaining money by false pretenses, and not one of violation of a contract. The State, he said, charges joint action of the three men, and he held the two officials "stepped out of their offices long enough to become conspirators."

Attorney Cullen argued the information should have set forth the official duties of Pritchard and Heath. Both lawyers argued that the time of the final settlement of Ryckoff's claim was left indefinite in the information, dates in both March and June, 1927, being given. A compromise settlement, following Comptroller Nolte's objection to the item of cable, was pending between the two dates.

The Circuit Attorney replied the information furnished all the facts needed by the defense, and more for good measure.

SUES TO LEVY ON BEQUEST TO HEIR OF E. W. GROVE

Suit to collect $5573.33 on a note held by the Mrs. Eugene Gray Co., a Columbus (O.) clothing firm, against Mrs. Marjorie Grove Wood Johnson of Pass Christian, Miss., was filed in Circuit Court yesterday. According to the plaintiff's attorney, John C. Robertson, the note was given by Mrs. Johnson when she purchased wearing apparel. It was executed March 15, 1928. About $1000 on the account had been paid, the attorney said.

Mrs. Johnson is foster daughter of Edwin W. Grove, president of the Paris Medicine Co., St. Louis, who died Jan. 27, 1927, leaving an estate of $6,000,000. By his will Mr. Grove left an income of $500 a month to Mrs. Johnson during her life. The plaintiff asks the court to appoint a receiver to collect this income until the indebtedness is paid.

ARRESTED FOR $51,000 CALIFORNIA ROBBERY

Insurance Man Apprehended in New York With Bride on Return From Europe.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Clyde Warren, 32 years old, of Monterey, Cal., was in the lineup at Police Headquarters today following his arrest yesterday when he and his bride arrived from Europe on the liner Aquitania.

His arrest was made at the request of Chief of Police William J. Quinn of San Francisco, who telegraphed that Warren was under indictment there in connection with the theft of $51.000.

Warren, who has been in the insurance business in Monterey several years with the woman he recently married, professed not to know much about the charges against him and assured police that the matter would be cleared up as soon as he got back to California.

The insurance man had been arrested in London recently at the request of San Francisco police and was held for 15 days, finally being released just before he began his return trip to this country. He and his bride had sailed on their honeymoon early in February.

Magistrate Maurice H. Gotlieb, in Jefferson Market Court, held Warren in $5000 bail for a hearing on April 18 on the charge of being a fugitive from Justice. Mrs. Warren was in court. She left as soon as bail was fixed, returning soon with cash bail.

GIRL, MOTHER AND FORMER'S SUITOR FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

By the Associated Press.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., April 12.—Mrs. Thomas Campbell, 40 years old, her daughter, Millie, 15, and Andrew Simons, 24, were found dead of gunshot wounds on the Campbell farm, near Hilton Beach, St. Joe Island, today.

Provincial police said Simons apparently had killed the mother and her daughter and committed suicide. He lived with his mother on another farm two miles away, and had been courting the Campbell girl, police said, for nearly a year. Neighbors said Thomas Campbell, husband of the woman and father of Millie, was in Detroit undergoing medical treatment.

DENIES HEIRS' RIGHT IN MULLANPHY TRUST

Defense Asks Court to Place Broad Construction on Will of Pioneer.

Arguments were made yesterday before Circuit Judge Pearcy in the suit of collateral heirs of Bryan Mullanphy, St. Louis pioneer, to terminate a charitable trust created under his will, which was filed in Probate Court in 1851.

The will set aside one-third of Mullanphy's estate in care of the city to aid stranded travelers bound to settle, bona fide, in the West. The trust property now amounts to approximately $1,000,000 and its funds are handled by the Bryan Mullanphy Emigrant Relief Board, whose members are appointed by the Mayor. It is the contention of petitioners that there is no present need of the charity, due to absence of such travelers, and the court is asked to vest title to the property for the benefit of the heirs consisting of about 250 relatives of testator.

While counsel for defense conceded that the will, if strictly construed, can not now be carried out, they asserted that petitioners have no interest in the property. The court is asked to place a broad construction on the language of the trust and decree that the city, through its board, can use the income to aid of stranded travelers generally through co-operation with a national travelers' aid bureau.

The heirs were represented by former Judge Henry S. Priest, Francis M. Curlee and George G. Vest. Assistant City Counselor Richard S. Bull and Richmond C. Coburn, representing the Attorney-General, appeared for the board.

The defense contended that the court has the power to order a diversion of the fund for the purposes expressed but it was denied that petitioners had any right to it. Judge Priest, in his argument, asserted the city for years has been unable to apply the charity as the will directed. He took the position that Mullanphy did not mean that travelers going further West than Missouri were to be aided. The attorney declared Mullanphy owed his allegiance to St. Louis and Missouri and in his will sought to render assistance to persons stranded in this city when on their way to establish a homestead in Missouri west of St. Louis.

Mullanphy had in mind, Judge Priest said, the 400,000 acres in this State which were yet unsettled and he was not thinking of California or other Western points. As this acreage has all been taken, it was argued, the trust has ceased to be a living trust because no beneficiaries now exist for it.

Testimony in the case was heard several weeks ago, and arguments were set for yesterday. Judge Pearcy took the matter under advisement. Previous similar efforts to terminate the trust have failed.

Such a gentle, exhilarating dentifrice

—white, dazzling teeth at a saving of $3 a year

UNTIL you have tried Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ you will never know how simple and pleasant—and how economical—a dentifrice can be.

Men and women tell us that little brushing is necessary; they say that its action seems almost automatic. Discolorations left by food and tobacco disappear at once. The superfine cleansing and polishing agents reach the crevices between the teeth and dislodge decaying particles of food. To the broad surfaces of the teeth they impart a flashing luster that others envy. And remember, they cleanse safely; being harder than tartar they remove it, and being softer than enamel are harmless to it.

Yet this dentifrice costs you but 25¢ the large tube. And it is made by the makers of Listerine—proof enough for anybody, that its merit is beyond question. Such a paste at such a price is made possible by economical buying power, modern methods of manufacture, and mass production.

More than a million people, having satisfied themselves by actual tests that Listerine Tooth Paste is superior, have discarded costlier dentifrices that accomplish no more. The saving that follows amounts to $3 a year per person. That saving becomes increasingly important when the family is large.

Don't take our word for the merit of Listerine Tooth Paste. Get a tube today at your druggist's and try it for a month. We predict that you will be so satisfied that you will not care to use any other. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis.

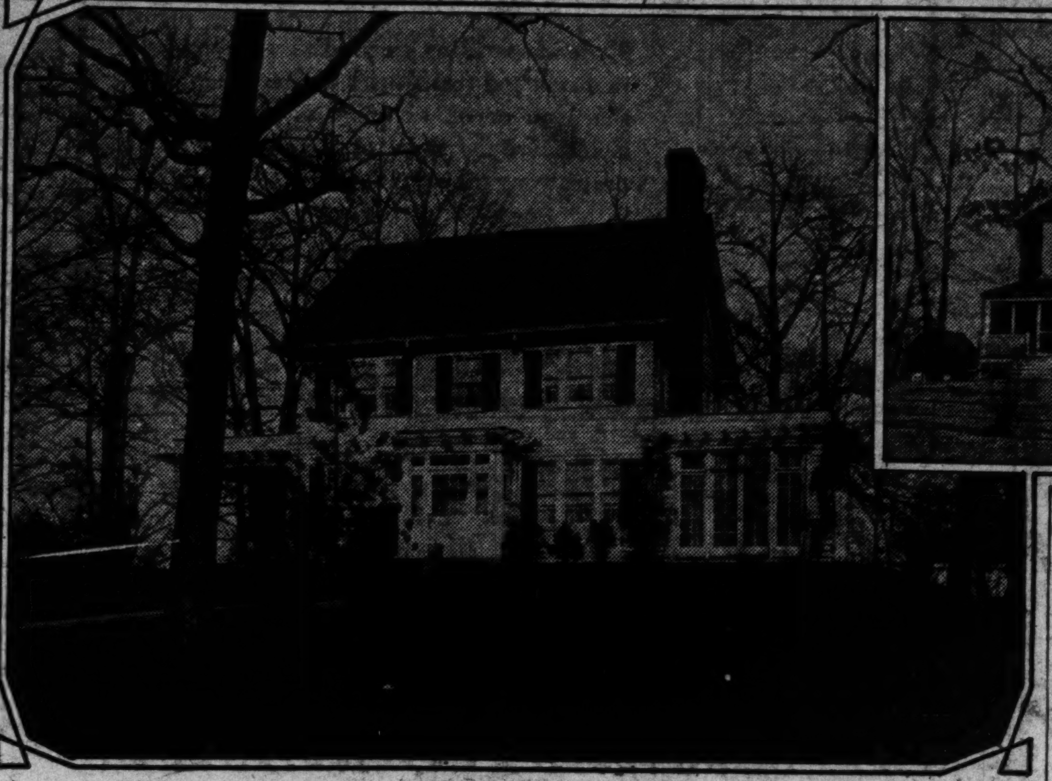
Modernization Magic Worked Wonders Here



—Charles B. McCormack & Son, General Contractors.

Picture of the exterior of the residence does not reveal the remodeled interior. New floors, modern plumbing and new lighting and heating equipment made the house more convenient and homelike.

MODERN KITCHEN IS A REAL WORKSHOP

Kitchen Mileage Cut Down by Proper Arrangement of Room Equipment.

Many housewives when purchasing new kitchen equipment insist that the sink will be high enough to allow them to work without bending their backs when washing the dishes. Many sinks in the older kitchens were entirely too low.

Tinted enamel may now be secured in sinks, so that the color scheme may be carried out in this equipment.

The range should be handily located with reference to the sink and work table. Nowadays when color is the vogue, the stove also comes in gay colors, such as red and green, thus permitting the decorative ideal to be carried out still further.

Whether the refrigerator should be within the kitchen or in an entryway depends on local conditions. It must be handily located to save steps. When ice is used, the refrigerator should be near the door, to prevent tracking of dirt into the house.

Many city apartments are provided with outdoor icing, the ice being inserted into the box through a door in the outside wall. The iceman does not enter the kitchen at all.

The refrigerator is, of course, provided with a door matching the outside door in the wall.

Electric lights should be located to give good illumination. Central lights often give shadows and one housewife when modernizing her kitchen avoided this disadvantage by insisting on several wall lights.

RESIDENCES OFTEN HEATED UNDER MANY DIFFICULTIES

Heating Plant May Be Doing a Good Job in a Poorly Constructed Building.

Home owners who had difficulty in keeping their houses warm during the past unusually severe winter, might do well to refrain from placing the cause on any one factor until they have made an impartial investigation to find out just where the fundamental cause lies.

The heating plant of a residence, if properly installed, with due care observed in computing radiation requirements, and the plant kept in good condition, should give reliable, even heat during the coldest of weather.

In checking up on the factors that aided in giving a cold house, the windows, the doors, the floors and the insulation of the walls and roof should be looked into as well as the heating plant.

Any of these may be at fault or all of them may need replacement to render the house more habitable in cold or windy weather.

How a Suburban House Was Entirely Remodeled

Task of Completely Modernizing Dwelling Was Not Nearly as Complicated as It Appeared at First Thought.

Modernization often changes a building so completely that the old house fades entirely out of the picture.

Such was the case when a certain home owner gave orders to remodel his suburban home in Webster Groves. A picture of the residence taken before the architects and building contractors took hold of it, as well as one taken after the job of modernization was completed, illustrate what was accomplished.

Modernization began with the removal of the old front porch, the hall and first floor room partitions. A living room the entire width of the house was arranged. A large open fireplace adds a homelike touch to the big room.

A closed sunporch on the south side of the house, and an open porch on the north side, were constructed. The closed porch was equipped with an open fireplace which adequately heats the room in between-season weather. This sunroom has attractive French doors and a tiled floor.

The old front stairway, which was narrow and partitioned off, was torn out and a wide oak stairway installed.

The opening from the living room to the dining room was enlarged and French doors provided. Quartered white oak floors were laid in all the rooms except the kitchen, bathrooms and rear sleeping porch.

New plumbing fixtures were installed in the old bathroom and a shower room was built in the front of the house between the two second floor front rooms.

Practically all the plaster in the house was torn out and the rooms replastered.

The electrical wiring throughout the building was modernized and plenty of additional base receptacles provided for floor lamps and household appliances. All the old fashioned double-strength glass throughout the house was removed and replaced with polished plate glass and the front entrance was fitted with removable glass penels to provide a storm entrance in the winter season.

The heating plant was overhauled and an oil burner installed in the furnace. The attic of the house was insulated with insulating material and the front part made into a playroom for the children.

When the roof was reached the old shingles were removed, the construction changed and the new roof covered with asbestos shingles. The weather boarding on the exterior of the residence was removed and a covering of new siding applied.

The major changes enumerated above practically made a new house of this suburban residence.

CHILDREN WANT A NICE HOME

Their Unconscious Habit Is to Make Mental Comparisons.

The parents of a growing family must acknowledge the superficial judgment of the young people and by means of modernization give their children that social prestige to which they are rightly entitled, but which is not evident when the residence is allowed to grow out of date.

Perhaps young people are less thoughtful when considering social prestige.

They are more apt to judge social position by visible evidence rather than by honorable lineage, family prominence and true worth of character.

How to Plant Shrubs.

The principles of proper planting are not hard to master. The shrubs should be massed into corners and borders, and a selection made differing in height, so that all of them can be seen and intermingle in effect, with their bloom coming at different seasons so that they are always interesting. No item in use for landscape planting will improve the appearance of property as much as a well trimmed hedge.

TREES ADD A HOMEY LOOK TO A DWELLING

Flowers and Trees Provide the Attractive Frame for the Home Picture.

Although most home owners appreciate the great value of trees on the front lawn and in the back yard, they forget that trees need care, especially in the spring.

As a result of this forgetfulness, the trees on many residence properties are starving to death and dying from neglect.

The soil on most home places is much poorer than the soil which the trees were accustomed to in their virgin forests.

In addition, every time the careful property owner rakes the dead leaves from beneath his trees on the front lawn, he removes the food nature supplies to the trees in their native home in the forest.

Other growing conditions in cities and towns also are less favorable; trees must live in a smoky air, laden with poisonous gases and must often draw their food and water from soil which is sometimes overlaid with concrete.

Many of these unfavorable conditions cannot be changed but it is a very simple matter to correct plant food difficulties by the application of plant food, for a properly fed tree can make an excellent showing even under adverse conditions.

It is easy to feed trees; simply make holes around the trees three feet apart in a circle under the drip of the branches and fill the lower half of the hole with plant food and the upper half with soil. The holes can be made with a crowbar or some other sharp instrument.

Not only will this encourage the growth of roots at a lower depth in the soil, making them less subject to injuries by drouth, but the deeper roots will eliminate competition between the tree roots and the grass.

Often the reason why grass does not grow under trees is because the roots take all of the moisture and food from the soil, leaving none for the grass.

A Real Pleasure.

There is real satisfaction and happiness in getting the maximum amount of comfort and beauty in decorating and furnishing the home.

NEGRO PAPER ATTACKS CHARLES U. BECKER

Criticises Him for Discharging Opponent of Congressman Dyer in Primary.

An attack on Secretary of State Charles U. Becker has been published by the St. Louis Argus, a Negro weekly newspaper, in connection with the recent discharge of State Representative Walthall M. Moore, a candidate against L. C. Dyer for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Twelfth District, from a clerkship in the St. Louis automobile license office.

Moore, who had been employed in the office seven years, was dismissed on April 4, the day notice of his candidacy for Congress was received officially in Becker's office at Jefferson City. Becker controls motor license issuance.

Becker, a Republican, is expected to be a candidate for the nomination for Governor in 1932. The Argus said, in this connection: "It is predicted that Becker's treatment of Moore has about made him unavailable as a candidate. It is said that if Becker were to be nominated Negroes in Missouri would vote for his Democratic opponent in resentment of his treatment of Moore."

The congressional primary will be held next August. Dyer, incumbent from the Twelfth District for years, desires re-election. A large portion of the voters of the district are Negroes and in recent years there has been a growing sentiment among them in favor of a Negro Congressman. A protest against Moore's discharge was adopted the same day by the Regular Sixth Ward Republican Organization and sent to Becker, signed by Alderman Lange, president of the organization, and Committeeman Scott and Committeewoman Gamble of the Republican City Committee.

It is asserted by the Argus that Becker sent the order for Moore's dismissal by long-distance telephone, to hasten it. J. E. Mitchell, editor of the Argus, was told afterwards in a telephone conversation with Becker that Dyer's friends in St. Louis "would not stand for Moore running against Dyer while working for Becker." Becker added, according to Mitchell, that Dyer's friends had accused the Secretary of State of backing Moore's candidacy. A formal dismissal was received by Moore on April 7.

In an editorial, the Argus asserted that the term "Dyer's friends" was a euphemism for Dyer himself, asserting that Dyer fears defeat and evidently does not believe a Negro should aspire for office. The editorial, backing Moore's candidacy, says further of Dyer: "He has for many years posed as a friend to the Negroes. They were all right as long as they 'whooped 'em up' and voted to keep him in office, but the first time he has the chance his influence is used to take a small job from a Negro because he dared run against him. This is his reward to our group for supporting him for the past 16 years."

FOX IN OPEN LETTER REPLIES TO HALSEY, STUART & CO.

Says Investment Bankers "Little Profit" Was $3,396,500 in Two Years.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—William Fox, who recently sold his controlling interests in the Fox Film and Theater Corporation, today made public an open letter to stockholders of the two corporations in reply to an open letter of Halsey, Stuart & Co., and to a statement and affidavit by Winfield R. Sheehan, vice president and general manager of the Fox companies.

In his letter to Halsey, Stuart & Co., Fox denies that the bankers made "little profit," in financing Fox film and theater deals. For the two years ended October, 1928, Fox says, the banking firm earned $3,396,500 in financing the Fox companies.

He also denied that Halsey, Stuart was the only firm to finance Fox deals and declared that in every case where the bankers advanced money to the companies "the temporary advances were made as a part of the final business and because those advances resulted in their acquiring the various bond issues."

OFFICER OF AFRICAN KNIGHTS AND DAUGHTERS KILLS SELF

Rev. Samuel D. Davis' Accounts Apparently in Good Shape, Says President of Order.

The Rev. Samuel D. Davis, national secretary and treasurer of the Ancient United Knights and Daughters of Africa, killed himself yesterday afternoon in the basement below his offices at 711A North Compton avenue, by discharging a .32-caliber automatic pistol into his head.

No reason for his act is known. Benjamin Mosby, president of the organization, said his accounts apparently are in good order, but an audit will be begun.

He lived at 4159 Enright avenue, and was presiding elder of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church in this district. His widow survives.

Of the three commissions into ich the conference was divided ationality, territorial waters d responsibility of states for mage caused in their territory to person or property of foreign- —only the Nationality Commis- n formulated results. These re embodied in a convention ich was approved by all the legates except the American.

David Hunter Miller, editor of eaties for the United States De- artment of State, said he could t sign the convention because it d several unacceptable features.

The Inter-American Women's mmission, which has been here, serted that the regulations which ere adopted were discriminatory garding the nationality of mar- ed women.

The conference decided that a nvention regarding territorial aters was not feasible at present cause of the divergence of views had uncovered but recommend- steps to continue work on this bject and suggested several ns by which the Council of the gue of Nations could assist.

It also recommended that the ague Council convoke as soon as considered opportune a new con- ence either to conclude a gen- l convention regarding territor- waters or a limited convention as a temporary measure confined to points which the Committee on Territorial Waters sets forth concerning the judicial system applied to territorial waters.

The conference also adopted a resolution expressing hope that the convention on the International Regime of Maritime Ports signed at Geneva in 1923 should be completed by the adoption of measures settling the scope of the juridical powers of countries regarding vessels navigating internal waters.

The third commission frankly recognized its failure to reach any agreement.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Twelve girls and four boys, who participated in a demonstration of 300 Young Communists in front of the Board of Education business offices today, were arrested and held for their parents. They represented themselves as the "Young Pioneers of America" and protested against what they termed the School Board's "attempt to wreck" their organization. They carried banners demanding release from a six-year prison term for Harry Eisman, 15 years old, sentenced in New York last May after a demonstration against the Boy Scout movement. One of the signs read: "The Boy Scouts are the tool of Capital." The prisoners will be released after their parents call for them.

STEEL MERGER TO BE ATTACKED IN COURT

C. S. Eaton Seeks to Block Bethlehem-Youngstown Combine Voted by Stockholders.

By the Associated Press.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 12.—Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, will appeal to the courts to prevent the consummation of the merger of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation at a meeting of stockholders 857,821 shares of Sheet & Tube stock, 58,080 more than the necessary two-thirds majority, were voted in favor of the consolidation.

Three main obstacles lie in the way of completion of the deal:

First, the possibility that the courts may uphold Eaton's contention that stock transferred since the record date should not have been voted.

Second, the possibility that allegations of law violation by purchase of votes—charged in a formal statement by Eaton yesterday—may be found valid, and may be held to taint the whole proceeding with illegality. The same result could be obtained if a charge of conspiracy were upheld in the courts.

Third, the possibility that the merger contract may expire while litigation still is in progress, and that a new contract will have to be submitted to another stockholders' meeting.

Eaton has referred most frequently to the first of the three contentions—that stock transferred since the record date should not have been voted. It is on this point that the first legal action of the post-ratification period will be taken—an appeal from Judge C. S. Turnbaugh's ruling yesterday in dissolving the temporary injunction which restrained the voting of proxies on 90,000 shares sold after March 22. The appeal will be filed, Eaton's attorneys say, in the District Court of Appeals now sitting in Carrollton, O., after Judge Turnbaugh fixes appeal bond.

As to alleged illegality of votes, the Eaton forces claim to have evidence including affidavits, that the management bought votes, contrary to Ohio law. Not enough votes are involved to change the result of the ratification ballot, but the Eaton group thinks a court might hold that illegal ballots tainted the whole proceeding.

Bethlehem has said it would not take over Sheet and Tube until all litigation was ended. The contract requires that the Sheet and Tube property be transferred by April 30 with allowance for a postponement to Sept. 1 by agreement of both sides. The contract states, however, that if the transfer is not completed by Sept. 1 the contract shall be null and void. Should this be the case, observers think that a new contract would be necessary and that ratification by a new stockholders' meeting—in which Eaton would control enough stock to block the deal—would be necessary. Others think a way could be found to extend the contract without a new ratification.

SUES K. OF C. FOR $100,000

F. C. Cunningham Also Names Four Officers as Defendants.

Suit for $100,000 damages was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Frank G. Cunningham, an attorney, against the Knights of Columbus and its District Deputy, Joseph M. Ebeling; Thomas A Langen, State Deputy; Luke E. Hart, national supreme advocate, and R. P. Cummins, commissioner.

He alleges that on March 20 certain individual defendants made untruthful statements about him after testimony had been introduced bearing on charges to expel him from the order. Cunningham, the petition states, has been a member of the Knights of Columbus 27 years, being affiliated with Laclede Council. Luke E. Hart, one of the defendants, said he had not seen the petition, but from what he learned it contained, the statements, so far as they referred to him, were without foundation. Other defendants could not be reached.

MORE WOMEN JOINING GANDHI'S CAMPAIGN

He Includes Attack on Liquor in Revolt—Bombay Plans General Salt Making.

By the Associated Press.

BOMBAY, April 12.—Six days ago Mahatma Gandhi opened the nationalist civil disobedience campaign by entering the waters of the Gulf of Cambay near Dandi and defying the Government's salt monopoly by crudely making salt from sea water.

After six days of agitation, the Nationalist campaign tonight continued with unabated vigor despite arrests of many prominent Gandhi lieutenants and the meting out of prison sentences.

The Mahatma is still at liberty the Indian Government apparently playing a waiting game and desirous of making haste slowly. He spoke today in the Surah district.

The chief centers of activity in the campaign today were Calcutta, Lahore and Bombay, three of the great cities of India, and there was agitation and the menace of violence in all three.

At Calcutta, Mayor J. M. Sen Gupta, campaigning vigorously again after his release from imprisonment at Rangoon, Burma, for seditious utterances, was once more arrested, this time while reading proscribed literature to a meeting of students. The Bengal students are taking an increasing part in the Nationalist demonstrations.

At Lahore, a crowd of 20,000 demonstrators marched through the city in a procession, and at Bombay the stock exchange was closed for the day in protest against a police charge against a crowd of Indians yesterday. Two bombs of crude construction exploded on the Great Indian Peninsular Railway. One injured two persons in the third-class waiting room Byculla Station, near Bombay, and other partly wrecked a suburban milk train.

Hadji Sirajuddin, a Mohammedan, found lying with an injured arm near the Byculla station, was arrested. The police believe the bombs were exploded in connection with a strike among railroad employes.

The manufacture of contraband salt continued apace today. Two notable features of the movement were the increasingly prominent part played by women and the fact that a war on liquor is being bracketed now by Gandhi with his war on the salt monopoly.

Bombay is preparing to wind up "National week," a time of mourning for the shootings at Amrsitar in 1919, with the manufacture of salt by a great mass of volunteers.

The volunteers intend to gather on the seashore with pots for collecting water and to manufacture salt as Gandhi did last Sunday at Dandi. The Mahatma is expected to come to Bombay soon. He has repeatedly preached the gospel of non-violence to the volunteers, and the Indian National Congress reminded them of it today by issuing a manifesto calling upon the people to refrain from violence in tomorrow's demonstration.

Mary Sudik No. 2 Blows In.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., April 12.—No. 2 Mary Sudik of the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co., blew in late today and flowed wild for 20 minutes before it was brought under control, tearing loose the crown block on top of the 122-foot steel derrick. The No. 1 Mary Sudik was controlled last Sunday after blowing wild for 11 days.

BOY, 10, KILLED BY PLAYMATE IN FIGHT OVER EASTER RABBIT

John Bats of Canton, O., Shot to Death After Following Chum to His Home.

By the Associated Press.

CANTON, O., April 12.—John Batz, 11 years old, is dead and his 10-year-old playmate has been taken by the police, after a street fight among five boys over a chocolate Easter rabbit.

The Batz boy went to the home of Charles Christeen, 10, after the fight over the rabbit and tried to push the door open, police were told. Young Christeen, police said, fired as his playmate came through the door. Charles is held in Stark County jail on a charge of delinquency.

The Batz boy, according to the story told police, disputed the Christeen boy's ownership of the chocolate bunny. They fought for it and other boys joined them. Christeen was beaten and he went home and got a rifle, his playmates said. Batz followed him to end the argument.

Victor Gravila, 10, another of the boys who fought over the Easter bunnies, also was arrested according to the officers the rifle was not loaded when the Christeen boy picked it up. He said he merely wanted to scare John. The Gravila boy, police said they learned, found a cartridge and put it into the rifle, handing it back to Charles. Then according to the story told police, John dared Charles to shoot and Charles pulled the trigger.

TO INVESTIGATE CHARGES WOMAN WAS BURIED ALIVE

Kentucky Judge to Call Grand Jury After Hearing Story of Two Sisters.

GRAYSON, Ky., April 12.—Circuit Judge G. W. Wolfford of Carter County announced today that he would call a grand jury Monday to investigate charges that Mrs. Susie Vickers, 62 years old, for whom funeral services were held here March 29, was buried alive.

Judge Wolfford's announcement came after two sisters, who formerly employed Mrs. Vickers, appeared before him and testified that, in their opinion, the woman was buried while still living. The women were Mrs. George B. Clay and Mrs. Monchell Johnson, both of Catlettsburg, Ky.

The sisters said that Mrs. Vickers was subject to fainting spells and that she would lie in a state of coma for some time. They also told the Judge that they understood she was buried without being embalmed and without the services of an undertaker.

Mrs. Vickers was stricken with a heart attack while preparing the evening meal in her home at Denton, Ky., March 27. She was pronounced dead and was brought here March 29. Services were held here the same day at the Baptist Church.

BOY KILLED, 7 HURT IN AUTO COLLISION

Car Carrying Green Summit, Ill., Basketball Team Is Crowded From Road.

Lawrence Seago, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Seago of Kane, Ill., was killed and seven persons were injured when an automobile, in which the basketball team of Green Summit School was turning from a game at Centerville School Friday night, was crowded off Illinois Highway No. 3 and struck by an automobile driven by T. H. Elliot of Kansas City, at a point eight miles north of Jerseyville.

Miss Violet Vickmore, the teacher, who was driving, suffered a severe scalp cut, and skull and internal injuries, and was taken to a Jerseyville hospital in a serious condition. A pupil, Miss Bernadine Milner, 17, seriously injured, was treated and taken to her home at Green Summit.

The four other members of the basketball team were cut and bruised.

Elliot, who suffered rib fractures, was said to have been driving erratically and was arrested.

SHERIFF GETS 15 MONTHS, $2000 FINE ON DRY CHARGE

Gegeby County (Mich.) Officer Convicted of Making and Possessing Beer.

MARQUETTE, Mich, April 12.—Sheriff John S. Johnson of Gegeby County, who was convicted yesterday of manufacturing and possessing beer ,today was sentenced by Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond to 15 months 'imprisonment in Leavenworth and a fine of $2000.

The Sheriff's attorneys will appeal. The conviction was on an indictment based on seizure of beer in a bottling plant at Bessemer, Mich., owned by Johnson. His defense was that he had no active part in the operation of the plant and that his manager, John Seeke, was instructed to use a formula which would make oily near beer. Seeke was a Government witness.

BUTLER IN REPORT FORESEES END OF WAR ARMAMENTS

NEW YORK, April 12.—Reviewing the accomplishments of the past year toward universal peace, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, in the annual report of the division of intercourse and education of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, said that armaments "will not disappear in an instant, but once their effective limitation is begun, the force of economic and moral gravitation will do the rest."

"The full significance of the pact of Paris (the Kellogg-Briand multilateral treaties), which renonces tilateral treaties), which renounces policy," said Dr. Butler, who is president of the endowment, "is day by day becoming clearer. By its terms the war-maker becomes the law-breaker, the freedom of the seas becomes a matter of course, and security is no longer a matter of fortification, of long-range guns, of submarines, of battleships, of poison gas or of bombing airplanes.

The report added that "it is not to be doubted that before many weeks the United States will have ratified the revised protocol" of the World Court.

BALTIMORE, April 12.—Dinah Did Upset, a 4-year-old filly which has the habit of springing upsets in stake races, turned in another one of her surprise victories today as she carried the silks of W. Labrot to the front in the Prince George Handicap at Bowie.

Because of the class of the field and Dinah Did Upset's known likeness for sprint distances, the daughter of Upset was neglected in the mutuels. As the result, a $2 straight ticket paid $20.20, while her owner received $3400 for the filly's victorious jaunt over the mile and a sixteenth route.

Only a nose back of the flying hoofs of the winner followed M. Shea's Sandyford, while a length and a half to the rear trailed Inception to take down the short end of the purse. Joe Marrone III, the favorite, finished a good fourth.

Together with Sandyford, Dinah Did Upset broke from the post flying. Sandyford was eased back a bit on the turn as Jockey Leblanc sent Dinah Did Upset into the lead. Coming into the stretch, the filly put up one of her game finishes to throw off the challenge of the fast stepping Sandyford.

Today's racing closed the 11-day meeting at Bowie, the thoroughbreds moving to Havre de Grace Monday for a 12-day session.

H. P. Whitney's silks were carried to victory twice during the afternoon, his Squab taking the opener and Frumper gaining the verdict in the fourth.

Long prices rewarded the backers of Herb Ashby in the third, which won and paid $39.20; King Bird in the sixth, which refunded $39.60, and Jack Hawksley in the seventh, which paid $35.70.

The other winner was Yeggman, which scored in the second under a fine ride by H. Thurber.

Homans Wins From Somerville In Golf Final

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 12.—Flashing sub-par golf that left seven birdies and an eagle on his card, Eugene Homans, Englewood, N. J., linksman and one-time Princeton star, bested C. Ross Somerville, London, Ont., former Canadian champion, 3 and 1 today in the final match of the North and South amateur golf tournament.

The brilliant Homans, who was 2 under par figures at the thirty-fifth hole where he wound up the match, started out the morning round in a fair way to make the match a runaway, but lapsed after the first nine holes and Somerville had a 1 up lead at the end of the 18-hole morning round.

Dinah Did Upset handled her weight well, followed the pace closely, took lead in stretch and just lasted to win. Sandy Ford displayed good speed, ran into lead, saved ground, dropped back on turn but came again at end and was running strongest of all. Inception, well up, was hard ridden last half mile and held on gamely. Joe Marrone III broke slow and in close quarters was out run in early part, but finished fast. Bocaratone closed a big gap. Mr. Desmond had no mishaps. Grey Coat tired.

Grover Alexander Stars And Phillies Win City Series From Athletics

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—The Athletics are the baseball champions of the world, but they can't lick the Phillies in their own home town. Even with Al Simmons' bat belching a home run and the regular battle array fighting it out for the cause of McGillicuddy, the White Elephants took the slap in the finale of the series at the Baker Bowl yesterday, 5-1.

It was the third conquest of Baker bats since Philadelphia's major league clubs came to grips upon their return from training in Florida, but of the six contests waged the rival forces of Lehigh avenue this spring it was the fourth fray captured by the Shottons, the Phillies having won the lone game played in the Grapefruit League. The 1929 city series ended in a 2-2 deadlock.

While Don Hurst's three-run homer off Al Mahon, Mack's portside prodigy, in the fourth inning, was the deciding blow of the game, the splendid pitching of Grover Cleveland Alexander and Lou Koupal also counted heavily in the second success of the Bakers in two days.

Alexander worked five nice innings, allowing seven hits but scattering them so that Simmons' long hit accounted for the only run. Alexander was credited with the victory which brought the city championship to the Phils.

BROWN DEFEATS EGGMANN FOR DISTRICT TITLE

By Davison Obear

Wray D. Brown won the men's singles event in the fourth annual St. Louis district indoor tennis championship by defeating Teddy Eggmann in the final round at the Washington University Field House last night. The score was 6—2, 6—1, 6—2. The men's doubles title was won by Wray Brown and Teddy Eggmann who defeated Harold Wiese and Herbert Steidman, 6—4, 12—10, 6—4 in the deciding round.

Millicent Endicott and Karl Kammann won the district indoor mixed doubles championship by defeating Mrs. Virginia Ducker and Karl Hodges, 6—3, 8—6 on the final match on last night's program.

In winning the district indoor singles title last night, Brown captured his third indoor championship. He won the honors in 1927 and 1928, but did not compete in last year's tournament which was won by Eggmann. Brown and Eggmann succeeded Karl Kammann and Charles Barnes as district indoor doubles champions. Kammann and Barnes were eliminated by Wiese and Steideman in a third round match.

In the first set of the singles final Brown played steadily, sending deep shots to keep Eggmann away from the net. When Eggmann did get the opportunity to hit short shots at the net, he was successful. Brown won this set, 6—2, scoring 32 points as compared to 16 counted by Eggmann.

Eggmann was very erratic in the second set. Brown won the first five games, dropped the next and took the seventh game and the set, 6—1. In this set, Eggmann scored only 9 points while Brown counted 25.

Play was closer in the third set. Eggmann had a chance to make the score 3-all in this set, but lost the sixth game on an error. Brown won the next two games rather easily. Eggmann forced the final game of the set to deuce but Brown won it, taking the set, 6-2, and the match.

Cambridge Crew, With American Coxswain, Beats Oxford in Annual Race

PUTNEY-ON-THAMES, England, April 12.—Cambridge University, with an American coxswain, R. E. Swartwout of New York at the tiller, won its annual boat race with Oxford today by two lengths in a match so stubbornly contested that the result was in doubt right up to the last three-quarters of a mile.

Followed by the roar of a million excited throats which swept along both banks of the Thames from Putney to Mortlake, in the wake of the rival boats, the Oxford crew spurted into a quarter-length lead from the crack of the starting pistol, maintained it at a gruelling pace for nearly four miles only to crack up on the home stretch and see Cambridge nose their way to victory.

A Fine Effort.

They made a magnificent effort to win, those boys in dark blue, setting the pace throughout a terrific race, but Cambridge's staying power beat them. At the finish the entire light blue crew remained sitting upright, looking fresh, while the Oxonians, very much distressed, lay over their oars, gasping for breath.

Cambridge rowed the course of four and a quarter miles in 19 minutes, 9 seconds, fast time under the conditions.

By winning the Cambridge established superiority over Oxford in total wins for the first time since before the American Civil War. It was the seventh consecutive victory for Cambridge which now has a total score of 41 victories, as against Oxford's 40 wins. Oxford's total, however, includes two strings of nine consecutive victories. Honors were divided in one dead heat which occurred in 1877.

The weather today, which was blustery and wet, favored Oxford, which won the toss and chose the protected Surrey side. This is the inside route on the winning "S" shaped course.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Let George Do It.

JACK DEMPSEY, we note, is trying to inveigle Primo Carnera into a match with the black giant, George Godfrey.

When it comes to knocking out the Italian Colossus, Jack evidently believes in "letting George do it."

By scheduling such a match, Jack will knock himself out—out of a million-dollar fight with Primo.

Primo's chances of beating the Black Menace at this time measure about 30 degrees below zero, which ought to make Carnera's manager a little cool toward the Godfrey affair.

A Dempsey Trait.

DEMPSEY'S proposal is characteristic. William Harrison has always given the public a run for its money. Jack refuses himself to fight Carnera until the Beeg Boy has proved conclusively that he is a fighter.

Promoter Dempsey wants to show that Carnera can scrap after which, Fighter Dempsey will consent to meet the foreigner.

Fair enough.

It's no wonder he's the only battler today who can pull a million-dollar gate.

Heavies Are Looking Up.

THE heavyweight fight situation is about to quit the "dud" class. For the coming summer we have the following fight events, more or less certain to take place:

Sharkey vs. Schmeling, for the Muldoon world championship trophy.

Carnera vs. Godfrey or Campolo.

Sharkey (if he beats Schmeling) vs. the winner of the Carnera-Campolo-Godfrey triangle.

Schmeling (if he wins from Sharkey) vs. either Carnera or Dempsey.

Dempsey vs. Carnera (if both win through the respective matches they may engage in).

If Dempsey meets either Schmeling or Carnera in Chicago (but especially Carnera) the Stadium will house more money than it did during the Tunney-

KILLEFER'S CLUB PLAYS SMART BASEBALL; GULLIC HITS HOMER WITH ONE ON

By J. Roy Stockton.

Bill Killefer's Brownies showed unexpected batting power at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon, bombarded Jess Haines, Andy Messenger, Syl Johnson and Fred Frankhouse for 16 safeties and ran away with the first game of the annual Spring series, 13 to 8.

This devastating attack of the St. Louis Americans, a surprise after the powder puff offensive they displayed in their Florida games, was not all that the men of Killefer showed. They demonstrated that they were a smart ball club, ready at all times to take advantage of any mistakes that the enemy might make and ready to take a long chance to score a run.

Browns Hustle for Killefer.

There were five fielding misplays by the Brownies, and that feature of the game also was a surprise, inasmuch as a stout defense has been accepted as one of the team's strongest assets. But they were errors of the hand and not of the mind or heart and the Brownies, by their wide-awake play, made the fans forget all about the boots.

Two plays by the Brownies stood out as indicative of how the team is going to hustle for Bill Killefer and how it is going to play smart baseball.

In the seventh inning with the score tied and one out, Blue and O'Rourke drew bases on balls. Manush's sacrifice fly sent Blue to third. Then "Red" Kress shot a single to center. Blue, of course, scored. But nobody expected O'Rourke to do more than reach third and as it was a short single, he was taking a chance in trying for that. But while O'Rourke was still only half way to third, it was plain that Killefer was waving him home. Douthit, of course, was expected to throw to second to prevent Kress from advancing to that bag. That's exactly what Douthit did and when Adams took the ball he naturally looked around to see if Kress was trying for second, or had taken an undue lead off first.

Killefer's Smart Coaching.

Bill Killefer knew Douthit would throw to second and that Adams would look at first and that's why he waved O'Rourke home. When Adams' attention was called to the fact that O'Rourke was flying for the plate, Sparky was a bit surprised, if not dumbfounded and his throw was what might be expected from a man who was rattled. It was high and O'Rourke scored easily and Kress went to second on the error.

It was a great bit of coaching at third base by Manager Killefer, and fine co-operation on the part of O'Rourke, who asked no questions.

Oscar Melillo was the quick thinker in the other smart play of the game, and while it played no part in the result of the struggle, it was important in showing how Killefer has his men wide-awake at all times.

Oscar singled with two out in the sixth inning and when Gullic singled sharply to left, Oscar took instant advantage of a momentary nap by Frankie Frisch. Base runners usually don't take an extra base on hits to Chick Hafey's territory. Frisch may have been cogitating on that fact, or perhaps, he thought he was still a second baseman with no need to worry about third. At any rate, Frankie was not near third base and Melillo, seeing the bag unprotected, dashed for it, even when he saw Hafey holding the ball. Gelbert ran over to take the throw, but Chick couldn't peg for the sack, and when Gelbert did get the ball, Melillo was safely on third.

Browns Will Win Many Games With Their Wits Even if Outhit

If they bat at their normal gait, the Browns won't have many 16-hit ball games. But they can play wide-awake ball all the time, and if they do, they will win many a contest with their wits when enemy pitchers may spike their guns.

Schulte Gets Two Doubles.

The Browns took a first-inning lead when Blue singled, Kress walked and Fred Schulte pounded a double against the left-field bleachers wall.

In the second the Cardinals came back and took the advantage, scoring four runs on a pass, Hafey's double, Gelbert's single, Wilson's double and two errors by Kress and one by Manion.

The lead didn't last long, as the Browns knocked Haines out of the box in their half. Crowder led off with a double, but was out at the plate on O'Rourke's grounder. Manush doubled, scoring O'Rourke, Kress walked, Schulte doubled to drive two runners home, and Melillo singled to score Schulte. Messenger then relieved Haines and ended the rally.

Frisch opened the third with a double, advanced on an infield out and scored on Hafey's sacrifice fly. Fisher, the slugger from Buffalo, obtained in the Roettger trade, then lined a triple to center and scored on Gelbert's single to tie the count.

Gullic Hits Long Homer.

Melillo's double and Gullic's tremendous homer into the left center field bleachers put the Browns ahead again in the fifth and when Manion and Pinch Hitter Badgro followed with singles, Messenger was taken out and Syl Johnson took up the pitching burden.

Fisher's double and Gelbert's single gave the Cards a run in the sixth and in the seventh they added another to tie the count again, on Frisch's walk and Hafey's double down the left field line.

Then came the Brownies' smart base running in the seventh to make the Cardinals the underdogs for the rest of the afternoon.

Fred Frankhouse pitched the eighth for the Cards and was nicked for three runs. He issued two passes and a safe bunt and a double did the rest of the damage.

Alvin Crowder went five innings for the Browns and was slapped for seven hits and six runs, errors causing much of his trouble. Sammy Gray finished and in four in-

BEAUMONT SURPRISES WITH 6-5 VICTORY OVER CLEVELAND TEAM

SOLDAN WINS FROM CENTRAL IN OTHER HIGH SCHOOL CONTEST

By HAROLD TUTHILL.

The lack of sufficient practice showed in the opening games of the City High School League baseball season yesterday afternoon at the Public School Stadium. The first game of the double-header was won by Beaumont from Cleveland, 6 to 5. Soldan humbled Central, 7 to 3, in the second contest. The attendance was 200.

Before the curtain had been rung down on the Cleveland-Beaumont affray, 13 errors had been committed by the two teams—nine by Cleveland and four by Beaumont. Cleveland lost the game when Earl Hahn dropped Bernie Walsh's pop fly in the seventh with the bases loaded and two out. The miscue helped Beaumont to tie the score at five-all and put the North Siders in a position to win out in the eighth.

A Wild Pitcher.

When Alois Wessling, the second Cleveland hurler, allowed Bob Kalbitz to single to left and Harold Klein to reach first on a base on balls, he was yanked by Coach Bert E. Fenenga, in favor of Bob Wilfert, who promptly filled the bases by hitting Dan Meyers with a pitched ball. After striking out Earl Fay, Wilfert forced in the winning run by beaning Johnny Guhman.

Cleveland's big rally came in the seventh when four runs were chased across the plate. The Carondelet team made only two hits in this session, but a walk, two errors and a sacrifice fly helped to account for the quartet of runs.

A Three-Hit Game.

Bob Lahey's shoots were too much for the Central batsmen. Lahey only allowed three scattered hits and would not have been on except for Wilbert Siesennop's wild throw of Pfeifer's grounder in the first inning, which let Pfeifer get to third, from which he scored on Wright's infield out.

Four of Central's five errors were made in the first two innings, and gave Soldan four runs. Two more were added in the third on three safeties and the final run came in the eighth on McGreevy's home run.

Central's big rally was in the ninth. A single, a walk, a sacrifice fly and an error gave the Midcityans two runs.

Concordia Wins From Millikin Again; Score 12-8

Concordia Seminary's baseball team made a clean sweep of its two game series with Millikin University of Decatur, Ill., by defeating the visitors in the second game played yesterday at the Concordia Field. The Preachers found the visiting pitchers for fourteen hits and led all the way to win 12 to 8.

McGraw Predicts Real Major League Scramble For First Few Weeks

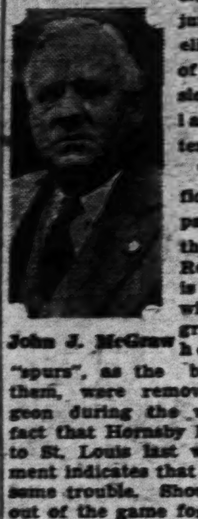
Manager, New York Giants.

CHICAGO, April 12.—When the National League opens the season Tuesday indications are that several of the clubs will not be able to show their natural strength and I wouldn't be surprised to see a real April scramble of uncertainty. In the long run, though, you may be sure that the really good teams will come around and show their class. In the good old days we used to figure that the race really started along about the first of August.

By that time the spring surprises had died out and the class told. It is much the same now. The advantage of an early spurt, however, is tremendous for a real club. To get the jump in April eliminates a lot of worry over a slowing down late in September.



John J. McGraw

The most significant news of the past few days is the report that Rogers Hornsby is again troubled with that bone growth on the heel. These "spurs", as the ballplayers call them, were removed by a surgeon during the winter but the fact that Hornsby had to go back to St. Louis last week for treatment indicates that there has been some trouble. Should Hornsby be out of the game for several weeks the chances of the Cubs would be materially lessened. His hitting would be missed.

Pittsburg Is Hurt.

It is the same in Pittsburg, where Pie Traynor is said to be suffering from eye trouble. From what we hear, he is troubled with double vision, a condition that has stopped several great players. With Traynor out of the Pirate lineup it is like a missing sparkplug. The Pirates also will miss Burleigh Grimes, who is still a holdout as this is being written. Other big factors are the throwing arms of Hartnett, of the Cubs, and Glenn Wright of the Robins. Nobody knows yet just how good they are.

It is noticeable in the last few exhibition games that nearly all of the clubs in both leagues have developed a punch. In the National League for instance every club seems to have a dependable punch with the possible exception of Boston. What they do is entirely problematical. It depends on how the new men develop.

Waiting for Punch.

The Reds have a punch with Heilmann and Meusel as added batters, but they haven't shown it as much as expected in the practice games.

Must Have Pitchers.

Any ball club that has hopes of a pennant this year must be unusually well equipped in pitchers to stand off hard hitting outfits like the Phillies and Robins. The Pirates are rated real contenders because they have that balance of pitching and hitting.

The deciding factor in the early weeks will be the good or bad fortune the pitchers have in striking their stride. All we ask now is good weather.

Dempsey match. That is to say, it may approach a $2,000,000 total!

Yes, the fight business, like the rag man's, is picking up.

The Case Is Different.

THE campaign of the N. B. A. to discredit Carnera, because of his long line of quick knockouts, is not meeting encouragement. A majority of commissioners will report that Carnera was not guilty of collusion or paying foes to "quit."

Commissioner Seneca Taylor of St. Louis said no connivance was necessary, as Primo was just too big and powerful for his third-rate opponents.

Fighters of real caliber wanted sums too great for a mere exhibition. "Chuck Wiggins, who is just an aging third rater, although game and tough, had to be paid $9000 to take a chance with the big fellow.

One Negro giant, Ace Clarke, was not in the nature of a set-up. It took Carnera six rounds to beat Ace, but the Italian's managers did not murmur at taking him on. It took George Godfrey one round more to stop Ace than Carnera required—which indicates the giant is better than he is reckoned.

Freak, as Well as Fighter.

CARNERA'S exhibitions can not be compared to the barnstorming tour of a mere fighter. He is a human freak and his boxing is a separate part of the exhibit.

The public knows all about Carnera. Nobody roped customers into the Carnera fights. It was pretty well understood everywhere Primo showed that the men picked had little chance. The public could have remained away if it feared a poor fight.

Young Stribling, whose sole appeal is as a fighter, fought men far inferior to the boxers that Carnera has faced in many instances. Billy Freas, for example. Freas was just a push-over for Stribling, here. Carnera could breathe on Freas and knock him over—and not because of the garlic.

Yet Stribling goes his merry round of the country year after year pushing them over without any great outcry resulting.

Carnera, besides his fighting, is an exhibit. He is the most wonderful looking bit of trained beef that ever appeared in the ring. On this basis alone he is worth the admission price. Furthermore, he has proved that he is as good or a better man than Stribling at fighting.

If the commissioners desire to campaign against the pushover nuisance let's not confine the housecleaning to Carnera.

Two Sides of the Shield.

WHAT does a knockout rate?

Usually it rates a back seat far in the rear of the pugilistic chase. But not always. Different cases, different verdicts. For example:

Tuesday night Jack DeMave opposes Otto Von Porat at the Coliseum. In Chicago they are calling this match a "setup" because Von Porat knocked out De Mave in two rounds.

One week later at the Arena, we will find a different story. There we have a headline bout between King Tut (Harry Tuttle) and Pinky Kaufman. Please note that Kaufman had King Tut on the floor twice in the first round and finished him in the second. No "fluke" about it.

But nobody calls King Tut a "setup" for Pinky Kaufman!

Why not?

There is a difference, say the wise birds. King Tut is a headliner, while De Mave is just a heavyweight.

King Tut fought Kaufman since the knockout, and outpointed him in 10 rounds. De Mave has remained kayoed since the Scandinavian flattened him.

Exhibition vs. Hippodrome.

AN Eastern writer, commenting on New York's recent wrestling consciousness, observes:

William Muldoon, whose judgment we respect, thinks very few heavyweight wrestlers really are "matched" to engage in a "contest." He hints at prearrangements which result in "hippodroming."

Well, what of it? Mr. Muldoon knows fans will pay more willingly and eagerly to watch a "show" than they will a drab "contest."

When Ruth and the Yanks are barnstorming the score means nothing. And we suspect that upon occasion pitchers on the opposing club have been instructed to "lay one in there so the Babe can bust it."

But do you hear any fans complaining because they watched a "show" at which the homer-hammering king did some "hippodroming?" You do not.

No, you do not. First, because the club doesn't have to ask opposing pitchers to lay one over for the Babe—he can bust it anyhow. Second, because if they did, the fans would not know about it.

If they did, they would pull down the fences. And they would refuse to patronize anything of the kind afterwards.

It is because they think Babe's homers are NOT "arranged" that fans get the thrill they do, whether it be in major or minor games.

It will be a sorry day for any sport when exhibitions become "hippodromes." There is a vast difference between the two. Exhibitions can be honest contests, even though the parties are of unequal strength. Hippodromes are DISHONEST exhibitions.

A hippodrome is the lowest form of athletic chicanery, because it takes advantage of the confiding nature of the public.

STANFORD SETS WORLD'S RECORD FOR MILE RELAY

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 12.—For the second time in 13 years the University of Southern California today defeated Stanford in a dual track meet marked by the recording of one new world mark and tying of another. The final count stood 84 1-12 to 46 11-12.

It was fitting that the final event on the program, the mile relay, should go to Coach Robert Templeton's athletes in record-breaking time as consolation for their decisive defeat. The Cardinal quartet covered the distance in 3 minutes 15 2-5 seconds, exactly a second faster than the former mark set in 1921 by Newark A. C.

The much equaled time of 9.6 seconds in the century also was credited to Stanford, when Hector Dyer showed his heels to Frank Wykoff, 1928 Olympic sprinter, in the major upset of the day.

Golfers Meet Tomorrow.

THERE will be a golf meeting in room 208 at the city hall tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock to which everyone interested in providing a $10,000 open tournament for St. Louis this season is invited. Preliminary meetings between officials of golf associations and of civic organizations have indicated that the chances of the success of the venture are good.

If such a tournament is held, it will be the outstanding golf event of the season in the district for there is not a sectional, national or State tournament assigned to St. Louis for 1930. This rather unusual occurence leaves the city without a tournament other than the local events. Fans here are anxious to see the top-ranking golfers of the country compete in a big event. That's what a $10,000 open tournament would be.

It is planned to hold the tournament, which would be called the St. Louis Open, July 15 to 19, inclusive. The first day would be devoted to practice while on each of the four days following there would be an 18-hole round, two at Sunset Hill Country Club and two at Westwood Country Club.

As the time chosen follows closely the National Open which is to be held at Minneapolis this year, it is expected that many of the stars of the country would come here to compete, among them Horton Smith. It is understood that Bobby Jones is to be extended a special invitation.

New Greens Opened.

SEVENTEEN new greens have been opened by the St. Clair Country Club, a member of the St. Louis District Association, located near Belleville. The improvement in the course was made at considerable expense but Walter Kossman, St. Clair professional, contends that it is a real course now.

"The greens have all been built well," Kossman said, "and when you play here you have to use a niblick often as there are a number of shots which have to be made almost straight up in the air."

At the next meeting of the District Association set for April 21 it is likely that a proposal will be made to hold the District Tournament at a club other than Midland Valley, awarded the event at a recent meeting. Midland is rebuilding No. 10 and No. 13 greens and John Nangle, president of the District Association and a past president of Midland Valley, said he thought it might be advisable to hold the championship at another club.

Midland Valley formerly was kept in condition by a firm located in Indianapolis, but Nangle last year ended "remote control" and has acquired Thomas Hays as greenkeeper. He was formerly located at the Westchester Biltmore Club in New York. With the exception of No. 10 and No. 13, the greens at Midland are in fine condition.

The regular greens on the 18-hole Municipal course in Forest Park will be opened next Sunday if the weather permits, Park Commissioner Pape has announced.

Lahrman Is Re-elected.

BEN LAHRMAN has been re-elected president of the Forest Park Golf Club. Ben has a number of other jobs, in addition to the one at which he earns a livelihood, but we can't think of what they are just now. The Forest Park Golf Club has 450 members.

There will be a qualifying round for members of the club a week before the district tournament and the 10 low scorers will compete in the district event.

Elmer Harrison, who, with his brother, Donald, takes care of the professional shop at Algonquin, spent five weeks in California during the past winter. He was in Los Angeles at the time the open tournament was held there but declares he didn't see much of the play. However, those who have played with him at Algonquin recently declare something has happened to Elmer's game, for he cracked out a 68 the other day.

Cause for Arguments.

ONE way to start an argument among golfers is to ask what is the toughest three par hole in the district. Each club has its own pet short shot and the members of each club are sure that it is harder than any of the others.

There are many good short holes in the district but in the opinion of many of the golfers, No. 2 at the St. Louis Country Club and No. 3 at Normandie rate about the hardest on which to make par.

No. 2 at the Country Club is 233 yards long. The fairway is narrow with trees to the right while the green is trapped to the left and back. The right side of the green slopes downward toward the trees. It requires a full spoon shot to reach the green in one and anything but a good straight shot is almost sure to result in trouble.

No. 3 at Normandie is 210 yards long. The fairway slants downward from the tee to a deep ditch in front of the green. The green is trapped right and left and there is another ditch farther to the left. To the right of the green, in addition to the trap is a steep embankment. The green has a rolling surface. Golfers use anything from a No. 3 iron to a brassie to reach the green and unless the shot is straight and true trouble results. And after the green is reached there is still the rolling green to contend with, particularly if the cup happens to be on the back edge.

Westborough plans to open its pitch and putt course some time this week. Clarence Coff, Westborough professional has signed his brother Bob Coff as assistant. Another brother is employed in the pro shop, making as many Coffs at Westborough as there are in a carload of tees.

Soldan Defeats East St. Louis High Track Team

Led by Capt. Dave Cook, who scored three firsts, two seconds and ran on the relay team, Soldan easily defeated East St. Louis High, 162½ to 50½, in a dual track meet yesterday afternoon on the East Side field. King Tut and Kaufman Meet In Rubber Bout

Henry Tuttle of Minneapolis, who boxes under the name of King Tut, will be facing the only man who ever knocked him out when he meets Pinkie Kaufman of Hartford, Conn., at The Arena on April 21. St. Louis fans, after seeing Tut win two bouts by one round knockouts, can hardly imagine the King on the floor but that is where he was the greater part of his first bout with Kaufman. Later he met and defeated Kaufman, not by a knockout, however.

Mique Malloy, Chicago promoter who handled the two appearances of Primo Carnera here, has arranged two other bouts in support of his main event which should prove interesting. He has matched Shuffle Callahan with Jack Barry and has arranged for another match between Al Stillman and Ted Ross. Stillman fought and beat Ross once. Al claims that he had Ross out but that Ted received the benefit of a long count, while Ross advances the unusual alibi of having struck a ring post with his head early in the fight.

In any event, Stillman is St. Louis' main boxing hope just now and after winning 24 to 32 successive victories by knockouts he will be watched with interest.

Malloy plans to be in St. Louis Tuesday with several boxers in order to see the opening game of the baseball season between the Cardinals and the Cubs.

AUTO RACES TO BE DECIDED ON NEW SPEEDWAY IN COUNTY HERE

With a view of attracting the foremost race drivers of the country to St. Louis, the Greater St. Louis Speedway Association, Inc., is constructing a five-eighths mile track on a 36-acre site on the Creve Coeur Mill road, at the Rock Island right-of-way, 12 miles west of the city limits, north of Olive Street road.

It is planned to open the track the latter part of May and have at least one 50-mile special every Sunday, with purses ranging from $500 to $1000. Eighty feet wide on the straightaways and 100 feet on the 6-foot banked turns, it will be the widest track in America, according to the promoters. Work is well under way, the grandstand, bleachers and judges' stand being more than half finished.

The grandstand and bleachers each will be 200 feet long and will accommodate 10,000 persons. Parking space will be laid out to accommodate 10,000 cars. It is estimated that 40,000 can witness the speed contests comfortably.

Incorporated for $50,000.

The association is incorporated for $50,000. Louis E. (Ed) Montgomery, real estate operator, is president and treasurer, with Charles M. Meyer as secretary. Montgomery resides at 6731 Arsenal street and Meyer at 7525 Forsythe boulevard. More than 100 business men and sportsmen are stockholders.

Montgomery said it was planned to have auto polo, stock car racing for amateur drivers and other features, but that the speed classics would be the outstanding events of every program. Racing will be held every Sunday afternoon and on holidays. The admission price will be decided on the next week or so.

The track has been laid out so that drivers may take the turns wide open and thus lose the least possible amount of speed and Montgomery said the entire set-up was designed for the safety of the driver as well as the public. Safety aprons will protect the lives of drivers who lose control of their cars and a zone of loose ground, 40 feet in width, will be maintained between the outer rail and the spectators for the protection of patrons.

One of the policies announced by Montgomery is that advertised purses will be in the hands of the judges before the races start.

Offices of the association, at present are at 6400 Southwest avenue. Offices also will be maintained at the track.

The entire plant will be completed in four weeks.

AMERICAN BIKE TEAM ARE NOW SECOND IN PARIS 6-DAY RACE

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 12.—Renewing the sensational drive which carried them up from last place to a contending position in the last two days, the American team of Harry Horan and Tony Beckman advanced to second place, at the 117th hour in the six-day bicycle race here today.

In distance covered they were tied for the lead with the French combination of Pellissier and Banchanneet, each team having pedaled 1600 miles, but the Frenchmen had an advantage in the points that are awarded in the sprints.

Horan and Beckman, who hail from South Orange, N. J., and Secaucus, N. J., respectively, were riding strongly and conserving their resources for the final day of riding tomorrow.

AUTO RACES TO BE DECIDED ON NEW SPEEDWAY IN COUNTY HERE

With a view of attracting the foremost race drivers of the country to St. Louis, the Greater St. Louis Speedway Association, Inc., is constructing a five-eighths mile track on a 96-acre site on the Creve Coeur Mill road, at the Rock Island right-of-way, 12 miles west of the city limits, north of Olive Street road.

It is planned to open the track the latter part of May and have at least one 50-mile special every Sunday, with purses ranging from $500 to $1000. A DARK MOMENT: The First of Three Brownie Errors in the Second Inning

Bottomley crossed the plate safely when Ralph Kress' good throw popped out of Catcher Clyde Manion's glove, after Fisher's grounder to short. Before the inning was over, Kress crowded in three more misplays and the Cards counted four runs. The Redbirds sandwiched three hits with the three breaks, and it was a tough session for Pitcher Alvin Crowder of the Browns.

IOWA U. BASEBALL TEAM BLANKS TIGERS

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 12—Three University of Missouri pitchers were unable to stop the batting attack of the University of Iowa baseball team as the Hawkeyes defeated the Tigers, 14 to 0, here this afternoon. The Iowans scored in all but two of the eight innings played, the ninth being omitted to enable the visitors to cratch a train. Ziffern, Iowa portsider, scattered the Tiger hits behind effective support.

CENTER JUMP RETAINED IN BASKETBALL RULES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The International Joint Basketball Rules Committee, meeting here today, made several alterations in the rules, but rejected the one suggestion that has aroused the most discussion—that the center jump be abolished. Following the recommendation of the National Coaches' Association and of the majority of those who answered a questionnaire sent out last summer, the committee voted to retain this feature of the game.

WEBSTER LINEUP IS CHANGED FOR SECOND ROOSEVELT CONTEST

With a lineup changed in several places, Coach Gaines' Webster High baseball team will meet Roosevelt of the City League for the second time in a week tomorrow afternoon on the Roosevelt diamond at 4 o'clock. Gaines changed his lineup last Thursday when, after watching Moller, Haywood and Smith go through their paces, he declared that so far this season he had not realized how good these men were. In the other game the Rough Riders defeated Webster, 6 to 2.

The Webster coach has decided to leave "Red" Barrie in left field, although Barrie made some bad miscues in the game last week. Moller may play on the initial sack, but Bailey, who has been playing there regularly, is making a good fight. Moller's hitting makes him desirable. Clark Honig, being pushed out of short by Charlie Haywood, is now going to try his hand at third. Dick Coates, however, will be the likely starter.

The pitcher is still undecided. Hudson, the veteran, has been working hard lately, but may be replaced by Nisbet. Nisbet had a sore arm for a short while last week, but probably will be ready for the game.

BROOKLYN WINS FROM YANKEES BY 4-3 SCORE

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 12. — The Brooklyn Robins, with Vance and Elliott pitching, defeated the Yankees in the first of their two-game series here today, 4 to 3.

Home runs by Bissonette and Flowers were the deciding factors. The former hit the first ball Hoyt pitched into the right field bleachers. Flowers' drive was off the same pitcher and traveled into the left field stands.

Flowers' homer came after the Yankees had tied the score, on Vance. Ruth walked, Gehrig doubled and Lazzeri singled. The Yanks could do nothing with Elliott.

Pipgras and Sherid shared the pitching burden for the New Yorkers.

St. Louis Athlete, Yale Captain, Is Out for Season

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.

YALE today lost the most valuable member of its track team in the crippling of Sidney Kieselhorst, who was operated upon for appendicitis early this morning. He became ill yesterday and was rushed to a local hospital during the night. As the Yale track season begins next week and closes May 31, he is out of athletics for the year.

He will receive his Yale diploma in June. He is intercollegiate champion in the low hurdles, winning that event for two consecutive seasons. He also was Yale's best entry in the 100-yard dash and scored also in that event in the inter-collegiates. He won his major insignia as a freshman when he crossed the Atlantic with the Yale-Harvard track team that invaded England meeting the combined Oxford and Cambridge team. He was beaten in England by Lord Burleigh, in a historic race. He has won his "Y" three times.

GENEWICH HOLDS WHITE SOX AND GIANTS WIN, 4-1

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 12. — Joe Genewich was too much for the White Sox today so the Giants walked off with the first major baseball presentation of the season 4 to 1. This made the spring exhibitions between these clubs 10 to 6 in favor of the Chicago representatives.

A crowd of 12,000 saw the New Yorkers humble Ted Blankenship who pitched the first five innings. He was not batted extremely hard and hurled well enough to win the ordinary spring game, but his associates were too feeble with the flail.

None of the Giants was extremely robust at the plate, but the visitors kept pecking away at the domestic flingers, edging over a run now and then. Their final tally was achieved when Hal McKain worked.

The same teams play here tomorrow, bringing to a close the spring exhibition games.

BRAVES DEFEAT RED SOX, 4-3, IN 11 INNINGS

BOSTON, April 12. — The Braves beat the Red Sox, 4 to 3, in 11 innings before an 8500-crowd, at Fenway Park this afternoon in the first of a two-game spring city series. The second game is to be played at Braves Field tomorrow.

The winning run was scored in the first of the eleventh on singles by Moore and Berger, new Braves, and an error by Oliver, new Red Sox center fielder, in fielding Berger's hit. Before this Berger had driven in two of the Braves runs with a single and a double. Otis Miller, former St. Louisan, played well at third for the Red Sox and drove in two of their three runs.

HEILMANN, PINCH HITTER, KNOCKS HOMER AS REDS DEFEAT INDIANS

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, April 11.—Playing their first game at home this year, the Cincinnati Reds today beat the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 3, by making better use of their hits than did their opponents. Six of Cincinnati's 10 hits were bunched against Walter Miller in the sixth inning for four runs, while the Indians got their runs one at a time. Heilmann and Hodapp hit homers over a temporary fence back of left field. Heilmann's hit high against the regular fence but Hodapp's could have been caught under normal conditions. Hudlin pitched to only 10 men in retiring the Reds in the first three innings as his final workout before facing the White Sox in the American League opened Tuesday but Miller and Jablonowski were not so effective.

May kept Cleveland's hits well scattered and only one of his five walks was expensive. His seven-inning stay on the mound was the most pitching done by any Red hurler this year.

BROWNS TROUNCE CARDINALS, 13-8, IN FIRST GAME OF SERIES

nings allowed three hits and two runs.

Notes of Game

BOTH St. Louis managers were making their St. Louis debut. Bill Killefer of the Browns took over the reins after being Dan Howley's assistant for three years. Gabby Street served one year as assistant to Billy Southworth and Bill McKechnie before being made leader of the Red Birds.

New players in the first spring series game were George Fisher, Cardinal right fielder; Andy Messenger, Cardinal pitcher; Sparky Adams, Cardinal second baseman and Ted Gullic, Brownie right fielder.

Fisher was obtained from the Giants with Eddie Farrell in exchange for Walter Roettger. He hit around .320 for Buffalo last year. Messenger was drafted from Wichita Falls; Adams was purchased from the Pirates and Gullic from Tulsa.

Fisher was given a hand by the pavilion fans after he walloped a triple to center in the third inning. And again in the sixth when he doubled.

The crowd gathered slowly, but about 14,000 persons attended.

Herman Bell will start for the Cardinals today, with Bill Hallahan due to relieve him after four or five innings. Southpaw Walter Stewart and Dick Coffman will do the pitching for the Brownies.

The Browns acting as the at-home club, for the first game, wore their white uniforms, while the Cardinals sported their new traveling suits of blue-gray.

New seats were installed in the press box during the winter. The old ones must have looked too comfortable. Nobody will fall asleep in the new ones. They are immovable and nearly impossible.

Melillo singled to center in the sixth for his third straight hit, and on Gullic's single to center, Oscar, seeing third unguarded, took an extra base. Hafey had the ball in ample time, but Oscar was quick to notice that Frisch was napping.

(This is the second of a series of three articles on the three-year-olds of 1930, grouped in dozens. Those in the first dozen were discussed last Sunday. The fillies will be taken up in the next and final article.)

By George Daley

Of hte New York World Sport Staff

NEW YORK, April 12.—Picking 3-year-olds out of the second or third dozen which are likely to earn racing distinction is a gamble. It's like reaching into a grab bag with a prayer on one's lips.

Crack Brigade may go far and do a lot of climbing. Gone Away, Ned O., War Saint and Crossbones are sure to appeal to the chance-takers.

Horses have a way of improving over winter or slipping back. When asked to go a distance the form discovered as 2-year-olds often is misleading. Sir Barton was a maiden when he won the Kentucky Derby in 1919 and then went on to carry off in quick succession The Preakness, The Withers and the Belmont Stakes. Petee Wrack did not get out of the maiden class as a 2-year-old, but beat Victorian, Sun Edwin and Reigh Count in the Travers the following season. American Flag and Crusader, sons of Man O'War, barely attracted attention in their first season, but rose to great heights as 3-year-olds.

Well-Bred Horses Can Surprise.

These are only a few of the examples which pop up each year. Certainties are deadly monotonous. It is the unexpected which elevates the spirit and the unexpected in racing adds to its fascination.

One week ago the possible future of the first dozen was considered. It is made up of Whichone, Gallant Fox, Desert Light, Boojum, Flying Heels, Mokatam, Caruso, Dedicate, Hi-Jack, Spinach, Grattan and Sarazen II. Those in the second and third dozen are not so well known which is more the reason for giving some of them a new introduction.

T. W. Cassidy's Crack Brigade made a deep impression last spring before being forced out of training by a leg infirmity. He beat Mokatam in the Colorado Stakes but was beaten half a length by the same colt in the running of the Keene Memorial, beating Caruso, War Saint and others. He also ran second to Black Majesty in the Juvenile, third to Sarazan 2d and Caruso in the Youthful Stakes and third to Grattan and Erin in the Hudson. If fully recovered he well may go up to the first dozen. He gets speed from his dam—Crack o'Doom by Ultimus and should get stamina from his sire—Light Brigade.

Black Majesty, a son of Black Toney-Herodias, may be more dependable over a distance for W. R. Coe than Caruso, the Polymelian colt which established such a strong record last season. He won only one stake in 1929—the Juvenile, but late in the fall he ran second to Caruso, his stable companion, in the Richard Johnson Stakes with Hi-Jack third and giving weight to both. He was handicapped most of the year with bucked shins which kept returning. I like this fellow.

Crossbones Beat Ned O.

Buck Foreman's Ned O., a brother of Neddie, by Campfire-La France; E. B. McLean's Crossbones by the unbeaten Colin-Black Flag and W. S. Kilmer's Sun Craig, by Sun Briar-Craighthorne are all at the same notch on Maryland racing last fall. Crossbones beat Ned O a head when graduated from the maiden class on Oct. 28 but later had the tables turned, when he finished third on the day Ned O. beat Sun Craig a head only to be disqualified. All three had little racing as two-year-olds and may be better than generally rated.

Spinach appears to be William Ziegler's best colt and yet Gone Away, so little known as he is, may be a better one. The son of Runantell-Sisaga, started only six times and never ran a bad race being twice first, twice second and once third. His first two starts were in claiming races and he was lucky to escape as he would have been a bargain at $6500.

He ran second to Jack Campbell at Saratoga Springs, six furlongs run in 1:11 4-5. He finished third to Flying Heels and Hi-Jack in the Nursery Handicap, and then split Whichone and Boojum in the Champagne Stakes. This fellow will be worth watching every minute.

H. P. Whitney's Crazy Coot was handicapped by throat trouble after winning the National Stallion Stakes for H. P. Whitney, but the Mad Hatter-Ruth Law colt, must have recovered else he would not be up for the Kentucky Derby. Here is one which must be taken only on faith for the present, even though he exposed class.

Peto's Accomplishments.

Jimmy Fitzsimmons has hopes of the Belair Stud's Peto, by Peter Pan—Eulogy, because of his defeat of Flying Heels at Empire City, when getting 14 pounds, and his runaway victory over Polygamous and Caruso in the Albany Handicap at Saratog. He looks well this spring.

George D. Widener's War Saint, by St. James—War Goddess, gave promise of being a better colt than Hi-Jack, his stable companion, after winning three straight races at Saratoga Springs, but this could not be established because a slight ailment led to his early retirement. This colt appeals to me strongly and I am looking for him to move up from the third dozen to a place with the leaders.

Gifford A. Cochran's Polygamous is overshadowed by his stable mate, Flying Heels, but let it be recalled that he beat Gallant Fox in the Futurity Trial at Belmont Park. Another colt in the same stable must not be overlooked as one likely to climb. St. Marco, a son of Eternal, won two out of only three starts in a way to suggest quality.

SOUTH BROADWAY A. C. TO HOLD ITS NEXT BOXING SHOW MAY 1

TShe South Broadway Athletic Club will hold its next amateur boxing tourney on Thursday night, May 1, according to Matchmaker Willie Miller, who announced last night that he will endeavor to arrange another bout between Steve Marre of Sherman Park Community Center and Johnny Miles of the South Broadway team, to furnish a middleweight feature of the special card.

Marre and Miles were to have met for the seventh time this season in a special match on last Thursday night's program at the South Side club, but Marre withdrew from the match on the night of the tourney, claiming that a cut over one of his eyes had not healed sufficiently to permit him to go through with the bout.

Frank Doxey, Olympian A. C. flyweight star; Carl Schaffer, South Broadway featherweight, and Ernest Doorac, South Broadway heavyweight, are other fighters in line for special engagements, while tourney officials expect to secure at least 30 entries for the preliminary events.

KEARNEY REPORTS LOTS OF MONEY ON TWO DERBY STARS

HIGH FOOT, the Valley Lake Stable's star, which stole all the honors at the Fair Grounds meeting, has finally been established favorite in the Kentucky Derby future book, it was announced last night by Tom Kearney.

There has been a considerable plunge on High Foot by Chicago interests, Kearney says. As a result, his price has fallen to 8 to 1. Place and show odds are 4 and 2.

Tannery, E. F. Pritchard's colt, has likewise taken a drop in the odds as his chances of winning the Derby have gone up. He is now down to 20, whereas he was recently quoted at 60 and 50 to 1. It is said that Pritchard himself has tossed some big money into the book.

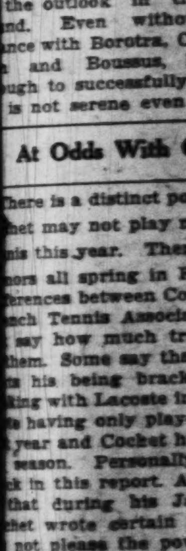
ENCH TENNIS UPREMACY IS ON DECLINE, TILDEN SAYS

By William T. Tilden II.

ARIS, April 12.—France is fac- a crisis in its defense of the is Cup this year. For the first e since they lifted the cup in 7, the odds are not in their or to successfully defend. I not see that they have better n an even chance in view of developments of the past two ths.

p to a comparatively few weeks there was every indication Rene Lacoste, the French champion, would be in condition to play this year.



TILDEN.

Unfortunately, he is not so well as was believed and the last word is that he is not expected to play any tennis during 1930. This is a great loss to France and to the game in general and his absence will be regretted by all tennis followers but cer- ly it puts a new construction the outlook in the challenge nd. Even without Lacoste, nce with Borotra, Cochet, Brug- and Boussus, looks strong ugh to successfully defend, but is not serene even here.

At Odds With Officials

here is a distinct possibility that het may not play much, if any, nis this year. There have been nors all spring in France about erences between Cochet and the nch Tennis Association. I can- say how much truth there is them. Some say that Cochet re- s his being bracketed in the ing with Lacoste in view of La- s having only played one event year and Cochet having played season. Personally, I put no k in this report. Another story that during his Japanese trip het wrote certain articles that not please the powers that be he was reprimanded. He is also posed to have aroused the ire the French press and certain ments of the Association in the tter of gate money during the p.

do not know what is the truth, this much I do know: Cochet not play singles on the Rivi- and he personally told me that did not intend to play tennis s spring and might not play in French championships or at mbledon. There is no doubt out Cochet being at loggerheads h tennis at the moment and at little tennis he played on the viera showed clearly his game s affected. Even Cochet cannot ect to play Davis Cup tennis his best if he gets no competi-

ean Borotra seems to be the instay of the French team this r. He will be certain to rise the occasion with his best, but l his best be good enough? His eat in four sets at the hands H. W. Austin of England would licate that he is not playing too ll.

Much Depends on Cochet

Certainly, neither Brugnon nor ussus can be counted on as a nt winner in the Davis Cup allenge round. Brugnon, except his one fine week at Menton, en he beat Rogers and Coen and rried me five sets, has had a t disastrous Riviera season. ussus' crushing defeat at the ds of Dr. Prenn of Germany, the Monte Carlo tournament, t place him out of serious con- ration. It seems to me that whole question of defeat or tory rests on Cochet. If he will back in the game, play through the big events, he will be once re the Cochet of old and France l successfully defend. If, on other hand, he stands out as now plans, it would not sur- me to see him fail if he at- pts to play in the Davis Cup rnament and France go down defeat.

The outstanding feature of the viera season and the early spring he definite signs of the French line. It may not come this year even next, but the handwriting n the wall just as clearly as it wed in the United States for eral years before we fell before French attack. There is no stion but what it is coming. The at team of Lacoste, Cochet, Bo- ra and Brugnon is breaking up. o longer presents the unbroken nt of two years ago. The young nch stars, good as they are, are developing as fast as expected. ssus and de Buzelet are not dy to step in and fill the gaps t are opening.

There is a distinct possibility that het may not play much, if any, nis this year. There have been mors all spring in France about ferences between Cochet and the nch Tennis Association. I can- say how much truth there is them. Some say that Cochet re- ts his being bracketed in the king with Lacoste in view of La- te having only played one event year and Cochet having played season. Personally, I put no ck in this report. Another story that during his Japanese trip chet wrote certain articles that not please the powers that be d he was reprimanded. He is also pposed to have aroused the ire the French press and certain ments of the Association in the tter of gate money during the p.

I do not know what is the truth, this much I do know: Cochet not play singles on the Rivi- and he personally told me that did not intend to play tennis s spring and might not play in French championships or at mbledon. There is no doubt out Cochet being at loggerheads th tennis at the moment and at little tennis he played on the viera showed clearly his game s affected. Even Cochet cannot ect to play Davis Cup tennis is best if he gets no competi- n.

Jean Borotra seems to be the instay of the French team this r. He will be certain to rise the occasion with his best, but ll his best be good enough? His feat in four sets at the hands H. W. Austin of England would dicate that he is not playing too ll.

Certainly, neither Brugnon nor ussus can be counted on as a int winner in the Davis Cup allenge round. Brugnon, except his one fine week at Menton, hen he beat Rogers and Coen and rried me five sets, has had a ost disastrous Riviera season. ussus' crushing defeat at the ds of Dr. Prenn of Germany, the Monte Carlo tournament, t place him out of serious con- eration. It seems to me that whole question of defeat or tory rests on Cochet. If he will back in the game, play through the big events, he will be once re the Cochet of old and France l successfully defend. If, on other hand, he stands out as now plans, it would not sur- e me to see him fail if he at- pts to play in the Davis Cup rnament and France go down defeat.

The outstanding feature of the iera season and the early spring he definite signs of the French line. It may not come this year even next, but the handwriting n the wall just as clearly as it wed in the United States for eral years before we fell before French attack. There is no stion but what it is coming. The t team of Lacoste, Cochet, Bo- a and Brugnon is breaking up. o longer presents the unbroken nt of two years ago. The young nch stars, good as they are, are developing as fast as expected. ussus and de Buselet are not dy to step in and fill the gaps are opening.

Refusal of Pay Increase Sent Von Porat to U. S. And Into the Boxing Game

By W. J. McGoogan.

If the owner of a shipping firm in Oslo, Norway, had come through with a little increase in the salary of $50 per month which his young stenographer, Otto Von Porat, was receiving some five years ago, Otto would not now be the eighth ranking heavyweight professional boxer in the world

Von Porat had boxed before that time. He had won the Olympic heavyweight title at Paris in 1924 and it was there that the shipping magnate offered Otto a chance to associate himself with his firm. Von Porat jumped at the opportunity for a job. He was only 21 years old then and wanted to get started in the business world. He thought the prestige he had gained in his Olympic victory would help him greatly with his employer who was chairman of the Norwegian Olympic Committee.

So Von Porat set out to work diligently for his new boss at a salary of $20 per month. He had had a high school and business college education and knew that he must start from the bottom. After six months at $20 each month, his pay increased to $50.

He Wanted More.

A year of that was enough and Otto asked for an increase. His employer told him that he probably was worth no more than the $50 he was receiving so Von Porat quit on the spot, joined the army for six months and after getting out, came to America to begin his career as a boxer.

Von Porat's mother is an American, born in Chicago, and it was to that city Otto steered his course, for he had an aunt living there and he made his American home with her—still does, in fact, and has applied for citizenship papers in Chicago. He is 26 years old.

The young Norwegian has everything necessary to success in boxing. He is 6 feet 4 inches tall, weighs around 200 pounds in fighting trim and bears the reputation of being able to "take it"—that is, take punches without quitting; he also apparently has the ability to "give it," for he has an even .500 percentage in the knockout league, winning 17 of his 34 bouts by kayos.

Von Porat is in St. Louis now, getting ready for his bout with Jack De Mave at the Coliseum Tuesday evening. Due to the fact that he knocked out De Mave in two rounds at Chicago just a year ago, it would appear that Von Porat has a setup here, with little need to worry overly much about it.

Is Serious.

However, the Norwegian takes his training seriously, as he says no heavyweight should be regarded as a pushover. Get careless with one of them, he says, and you may get knocked out.

"Look at Tuffy Griffiths," Von Porat remarked. "I don't know how he regarded Jack Gagnon, but in any event Gagnon knocked him out to the surprise of the boxing world."

So Von Porat is doing roadwork each day and also boxing in preparation for De Mave.

OTTO VON PORAT

De Mave arrived here Friday evening and took his first workout yesterday. Jack, who is only 27 years of age, is on the downward slope of his career, the records indicate. After Von Porat knocked him ont last May he fought five more battles during 1929 and won only one of them. He was knocked out by Big Boy Rawson in October and did not appear in the ring again until January of this year, when he was knocked out by Young Stribling in a round. De Mave, therefore, is trying to make a comeback and hopes to start with the same man who put him on the toboggan, Von Porat.

Every day, new thousands of smokers admit the fallacy of paying 10 cents for cigars when they can get the same solid enjoyment in WHITE OWLS at 3 for 20 cents.

Their judgment is sound.

They get a mild, cool smoke of fine tobacco; made only by super-sanitary machines in model factories. No wonder 10 cent smokers switch to WHITE OWL by the thousands.

BROWNS CANNOT BE COUNTED OUT AS FLAG CONTENDERS, MACK WRITE

MANAGER OF ATHLETICS PICKS HIS TEAM TO WIN PENNANT

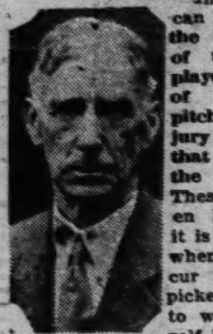
(Manager, World Champion Athletics.)

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—All the American League teams are now at home waiting for the Mayor to make his copyrighted wild pitch to open the season next Tuesday, although in Washington the boys start a day in advance. The exhibition season is at an end and from now on the grim realities of the championship race confront the eight American League managers.

On the eve of the opening of the pennant fight there is no doubt that owners, managers and players have nothing but an optimistic outlook. The seven clubs that failed in the battle for the 1929 pennant all feel that they are starting this new campaign with a more powerful team than they had a year ago.



MACK.

In the American League fight the loss of one of the regular players or one of the best pitchers by injury might put that team out of the running. These things often happen and it is history that when they do occur the team picked by many to win finds itself beaten.

As our own team is expected to start with the same lineup as last season when we won the pennant with many games to spare and topped this achievement with a victory over the Cubs for the grand prize of baseball, I see no reason, bar injuries, why we should not make as good a showing this year as we did in 1929. In fact, our team should play better baseball for the reason the players should have more confidence.

Although we are virtually a standpat team I believe we have strengthened our reserve forces. The Athletics have three young infielders who have looked good all spring in Shortstop McNair, Second Baseman Williams and First Baseman Keesey. My outfield has been bolstered by young Roger Cramer, a natural hitter, who broke the Blue Ridge League batting record in topping the circuit last season. I also have added the seasoned Spencer Harris to my outfield. By exchanging Sammy Hale to the Browns for Wally Schang I have added another excellent catcher, who can also hit, to help out Cochrane and Perkins.

Of my new pitchers, Mahaffey, a sturdy right hander from Portland, Oregon, has shown me a lot this spring. I also have some other promising pitching talent while of my veterans both Rommel and Ehmke never pitched better than this spring and should be a big help and win games along with Grove, Walberg, Earnshaw, Quinn and Shores. So you can see that we have not been idle since the close of the season even if we swept all honors in 1929. No team is so strong that it cannot be improved. All I will say is that we hope to repeat but expect a stern battle every inch of the way down to the wire.

Yanks a Strong Club.

Foremost among the contenders are the Yankees, who finished second last season after winning three straight flags. Partly reorganized and under the management of Bob Shawkey, the Yanks again present a strong front. They still have Ruth, Lazzeri, Gehrig and Combs, the Big Four, which was principally responsible for past successes. That's the base of a powerful attack. They also have developed a wonderful young catcher in Dickey, who can also hit.

Even with this mighty array of hitters, it will be almost impossible for the Yanks to win unless they get good pitching. So much will depend on whether Hoyt, Pennock and Johnson can regain their previous form. Their standing in 1930 will depend on what their pitchers can do.

Cleveland, which finished third last year by burning up the circuit in September enters the race much more highly regarded than it was a year ago. The fans are giving them a sporting chance, to win the pennant because the Indians finished so strong after a poor start.

Can't Count Browns Out.

St. Louis has been making a splendid showing for the last three or four years, the only thing keeping it from a pennant being the lack of two or three real hitters. The Browns have strong pitchers and they shoot a good man against you every day.

Manush is back in his normal batting form and Kress, the young shortstop, came so fast in 1929 that he is now considered one of the most valuable men at the position today for he can both field and hit. With these stars playing their game and Blue and Melillo also helping, it would not be wise to count the Browns out.

Washington was distinctly a better team in 1929 than its position in the race would indicate. This frequently happens to a good ball club. There was nothing wrong with the management but it just seemed that nearly all the players played below their own par. Many had off seasons the same year. This may be reversed this season and the Senators should not be rated on their last season's showing.

Detroit has bolstered its team as much or perhaps more than any other American League club. From what they have shown in the exhibition season, the Tigers are a greatly improved team. They have some promising young players who should speed up the team. This is one of the clubs I consider a dark horse.

Chicago, with a new manager in Owen Bush and a raft of new players, seems to have strengthened all along the line. Last season the White Sox developed four youths who looked like coming players of the country in Shires, Reynolds, Cissell and Watwood and from their training camp comes good reports of other players. This club promises a powerful pitching staff and I rate it as the other dark horse in the race.

Bob Quinn, head of the Red Sox, is one of the best liked men in the profession and there isn't an owner who couldn't be pleased if Boston could get somewhere this year. The management has worked hard to develop a team that will please the faithful Boston fans. Quinn discovered Big Ed Morris, Ruffing, Russell and MacFayden, four first class pitchers and a clever outfielder in Rothrock, not to mention several other good men. If he has more like these for the new season, Boston is bound to see better baseball.

HIGH FOOT.

		1st	2d	3d	Unp.	Won.
HIGH FOOT	Prince Pal .... Belle Fair (High Time)	3	1	2	1	$6,205

Trainer, J. B. Partridge.
Stakes: Won the Derby Trial Handicap at Fair Grounds, New Orleans; Second Bashford Manor Stakes, at Churchill Down.

ONE element of doubt is removed for those who pin their faith in High Foot to carry off the Kentucky Derby. He has already proved that he is a better 3-year-old than he was a juvenile. It is not necessary to guess about his advancement. He has arrived.

Whether the son of Prince Pal will be able to run rings around the stars of the Eastern tracks as he did the Derby candidates at New Orleans remains a question, but it is a certainty that he is a horse of great possibilities.

In seven starts he has won three times and he was out of the money only once.

He is now regarded as the outstanding favorite in the May 17 classic, being quoted at 8 to 1.

Most notable of his conquests is his victory by a margin of six lengths over Michigan Boy in the Derby Trial Handicap at New Orleans. The distance was an even mile and the track was heavy. He showed astonishing speed and not only maintained his early advantage, but increased his lead in the stretch. He carried 114 pounds.

After winning his first start in a short sprint at Lexington in April last year, High Foot was sent to the Downs, where he finished fourth in a field of seven, beaten a length and a half by the winner, All Upset. Six days later, with a change of jockeys and running over the same track with 122 pounds up, he turned in a greatly improved performance, getting beaten only a nose by All Upset in the fast time of one minute flat. That was in the Bashford Manor Stakes. After finishing third to Lost Agnes and Timor at Washington Park in June, he was given a long rest by Trainer Partridge and did not appear on the track again under racing colors until Feb. 20 at Fairgrounds. Then he dropped the decision to Black Cloud and Whileaway, finishing third, a length and a half behind the winner. But that was only a tuning-up effort, for in his next start, over the three-quarters route, he handed the highly regarded Lightning Jones and this same Black Cloud a fancy trimming. He had four lengths to spare at the finish and traversed the six furlongs in 1:11 3-5.

Coming back in the Derby Trial, he won so easily as to make a joke of the opposition.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of High Foot's brief racing career is his consistent improvement. He turns around and beats horses that beat him in earlier races. He can go the distance and he can plough through the mud. His breeding stamps him as a horse of unlimited possibilities for the sire of his mother was High Time and his own sire was Prince Pal. Some New Orleans observers see in him another Black Gold.

This is the eighth of a series on horses eligible for the Kentucky Derby May 17 and their records.

Webster High Trackmen Are Winners, 190-51

The Webster Groves High School track team won its first dual meet of the season yesterday, when it swamped St. Louis U. High, 190 to 51, at Webster. Coach Robert's men took first in 23 of the 27 events and won seconds in 22. The Orange and Black seniors made an overwhelming score of 106 points to 19 for St. Louis U. High. The juniors also made a high score of 84 points to their oppnents' 32.

Paul Sibley of Webster was the outstanding man of the meet, making 23¼ points. He took firsts in the discus throw, broad jump and the javelin throw. He also came second in 220 and 440 yard dashes. The other 1¼ points were made by running on the Webster relay. "Tubby" Harkey came second in high point honors, with 16. He easily outran the junior hurdlers and tied in the high jump. His other points were made in the weights. Bill Freschi was close behind him, with 14¾ points, and Leck was fourth, with 13¼ points.

Frank Fuch, Webster's star hurdler, finished far ahead the second man in both races that he ran in. In the junior 220 Boyd Rogers showed fine sportsmanship by stopping when just about to cross the tape to let Conrad of Webster cross first in order that Conrad might win a letter. Rogers very nearly let the St. Louis U. High man finish second, however.

In winning both the mile and the 880-yard dash, Bob Boler, who has never heretofore done much in the track line, showed fine endurance. When about 50 yards from the tape in the 880 race, Boler stepped out from behind Evans and won, going fast.

STOCKS PUSH WAY TOWARD OLD PEAKS IN WEEK'S TRADE

QUESTION OF USE OF CHEAP FUNDS

Stronger Tone in Business Is Gathering Underneath the Market, but Not Yet Measureable Statistically.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The Eve ing Post in its copyrighted week financial review says:

"Like the inveterate mountain mber ever seeking higher alti des, the market still pushes its ay up toward old peaks that emed far away indeed five onths ago today. When stocks ere at their bottom panic level that day the composite averages ere down 113 points from the rly September top. Now they are points up the slope again. With a surprisingly short time the rket has recovered 59 per cent the ground lost last autumn. despread expectations of a sharp back immediately have been ed almost wholly on the rapidity the recovery. No general dis eement exists on the underlying jor movement of stocks over the re distant future. That, author hold, will be forward. Per in this simple faith is exlana for the market's failure to k when, as it seems, it should. many prospective purchasers lieve in its long-term potential to stand aside when weakness velops. They step up for more ck instead.

Statistical Measure Impossible.

"A stronger tone in business is thering underneath the market t it will probably be another th before any statistical meas e of the pickup will be possible. riously enough, the industry that me months ago seemed most in ubt is now perhaps in the best sition to give impetus in the eks immediately ahead to a re val. The motor industry is en ring its most active selling season th only one month's supply of rs on hand. With production wn more than retail deliveries indication is that the industry keeping a firm control over the pply side. Meantime the stock used cars has been reduced. This a favorable position for the in stry at a time when the volume cars in the hands of dealers is per cent under that a year ago. means that with any substantial asonal pickup in the demand for rs the industry will feel immedi ely the benefits of the expansion. ports from Detroit in the last 10 ys suggest that if the present provement continues the April d May gains will indeed be en uraging.

Progress in Building.

"It so happens that the other ajor industry to which we must ok for a substantial contribution any broad upturn in business is pidly closing the unfavorable gap een the figures now and a r ago. F. W. Dodge reports t the March contracts for ilding and engineering projects 37 Eastern states reached a total rger than any month since last gust. These figures register the ll seasonal increase of 45 per nt over February that normally expected. While the total for arch still was 5 per cent under same month a year ago, this resents progress from Decem , when the disparity was 27 per nt. Residential building still lags recovery in other branches has en sweeping. Taking the first arter building contracts as a hole, the Dodge compilation ows a condition roughly 12 per nt under that for the correspond three months for 1929. How it will take the changed credit uation to give residential build activities new life is a question industry itself professes its in lity to answer.

Question of Use of Funds.

"Each week that the market ntinues its advance on expanding lume makes pertinent the query hether industry will be allowed enjoy the full restorative bene s of the prevailing cheap money whether a grasping market will propriate that stimulant for its n use.

GAINS BALANCE LOSSES ON THE STOCK MARKET

Week-End Profit-Taking Depresses the List Generally for Time—Utilities Bought Late.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Price movements were indecisive, and speculative enthusiasm less pronounced, in today's week-end session of the stock market. Week-end profit-taking depressed the list generally for a time, but strong support appeared for some of the utilities and specialties before the close, and net gains balanced the day's net losses. Total sales of 2,119,160 were the smallest for a two-hour session in nearly a month.

Week-end business news was fairly reassuring, although the March copper statistics appeared, and were rather unfavorable, as expected, showing further piling up of stocks, although average daily production was the lowest for the period in several weeks. The copper shares, however, already thoroughly deflated, held fairly steady. Reports from the steel trade indicated that operations would be well maintained next week, with the Youngstown area experiencing some increase in operations with better demand from the automobile industry. Reports from the automobile manufacturing centers were increasingly cheerful, indicating that dealers are entering their most active season with less than a month's supply of cars.

Allied Chemical a Feature.

Wall street appeared entirely recovered from the momentary uneasiness caused yesterday by the report of a panic on the Tokio Stock Exchange. The exchange there reopened today.

Several important traders were out of town for the week-end today, evidently satisfied with conditions. Continuance of easy money is expected next week, but the three-day closing at the end of the week may cause considerable tightening of accounts.

Allied Chemical was again a buoyant feature, rushing up 12 points to a new high at 342, then losing a few points of its gain. The floating supply in this issue is said to be small. Eastman Kodak rallied 5 points, and International Telephone was sent up more than 2 points to within a point of its 1930 high in heavy buying. American Waterworks reached new high ground.

Steel Prices Mixed.

Apparent success in the move to merge Bethlehem Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube was without visible influence on the stocks. Republic rose 2 points and Bethlehem 1, while Youngstown slipped off 3. Fourth National Investors, National Air Transport, Phoenix Hosiery, Procter & Gamble and Warner Quinlan were among a few specialties to reach new high ground for the year.

U. S. Steel lost about a point, and Air Reduction, Canada Dry, J. I. Case, Lackawanna, Hershey Chocolate, Houston Oil, Ingersoll Rand, Loose-Wiles, Macy, Public Service of New Jersey, Raybestos and Shattuck were among shares closing 2 to 3 points lower.

In the commodities, grains eased on bearish weather reports. Wheat futures lost about 2 cents and corn half as much. Cotton futures showed little change.

Foreign exchanges were dull, easing slightly. Sterling cables rules at $4.86 7-16, off 1-16. The Japanese yen held steady at 49.35 cents.

FINANCIAL NOTES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports that the stock of refined copper in North and South America on April 1 totaled 256,020 tons, an increase of 22,897 tons during the month, and comparing with 203,404 tons on Feb. 1. Total stocks of refined and blister copper on April 1 were 522,581 tons, as against 497,372 on March 1, and 473,613 on Feb. 1.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. announces that a pronounced increase in telegraph orders has been noticed during the past few days, indicating, it says, a sudden upturn in buying.

The F. W. Dodge Corporation reports that the March contracts for building and engineering projects in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains reached a total of $459,119,000, the largest monthly total since August, 1929. The gain over February represented the usual seasonal increase of 45 per cent, and the total was only 5 per cent under that of March, 1929. The total for the first quarter amounted to $1,100,147,200, which was approximately 12 per cent below that of the corresponding peiod of last year.

Nickel Plate Issue Authorized.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Authorization for the Nickel Plate Railroad to issue $12,000,000 of refunding mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds was given today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The bonds are to be sold at not less than 95 per cent of par and accrued interest to reimburse the treasury of the road for capital expenditures already made but not capitalized.

ST. LOUIS MARKET

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, April 12.—Total transactions of stocks on the local board the past week amounted to 13,103 shares, compared with 14,003 a week ago. Total bond sales were $58,000, compared with $51,000 last week.

CHANGES MOSTLY SMALL IN LOCAL STOCK MARKET

Wagner Electric Lower at Close of Week After Recording New High for Year at 36 1-4.

Transactions in particular stocks on the St. Louis Stock Exchange last week, for the most part, lacked significance. Changes, with few exceptions, were but fractional and the volume of business not large. Aggregate sales of all securities were about on par with the previous week.

Wagner Electric continued to lead the trade, transactions in this issue representing about 20 per cent of the total trade of the week. A new high of 36¼ was recorded in first part of the week, but a net fractional decline was shown at the close of the period. Rice-Stix sold between 14¼ and 14⅝.

Hamilton-Brown and National Candy were among issues recording declines. Missouri Portland and Stix, Baer & Fuller showed gains. National Bearing Metal was bid up. International Shoe was unchanged to higher.

Among the other securities which showed improvement at the close of the week were, Eler "A" and common, Key Boiler Equipment, and Pedigo-Weber. There were declines in Scullin Steel preference, Curtis Mfg. and Coca Cola Bottling.

In the bond section Houston Oil 5s sold up over 2 points, while other bond sales were at price declines.

To Open San Antonio Office.

Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co. will open an office at San Antonio, Tex., on May 1. Du Pre R. Dance of San Antonio will be in charge and will be assisted by Jack Scanlon, who now represents the firm on the floor of the local exchange. The company now has an office in Dallas.

Dividend Rate Increased.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Abbott Laboratories increased the quarterly dividend rate to 62½ cents a share from 50 cents. The first dividend at the new rate will be paid July 1 to stockholders of record June 16.

LISTED BONDS SHOW WEEK-END DULLNESS

Few of the Leading Rails Manage to Rally Half a Point or So During Day.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Listed bonds showed routine Saturday dullness today. A few of the leading rails managed to rally half a point or so, but the market was unable to develop much of a trend in the limited trading. No sales of United States Governments were recorded in the first hour; in the second there were small transactions in first and fourth Liberties and the Treasury 4s.

Convertibles slumped on the early dealings, but recovered fairly well. The late rally sent International Telephone 4½s up 2¼ points to the new 1930 high of 128, while American Telephone 4½s turned a point decline into an advance of ⅝. The amusement group was very quiet.

Buying of the rails involved chiefly odd lots in Rock Island general 4s, Santa Fe general 4s, Missouri Pacific "G" 5s, Pennsylvania 4½s and Southern Railway general 4s up ⅛ to ⅝. New York Central general 3½s and Illinois Central 4½s lost a point. In the semi-speculative group, St. Paul adjustment 5s sagged ⅝ to the new 1930 low of 71⅛.

International Match 5s, which have been under steady accumulation in recent sessions, made a ½-point spring to 103, the best price of the year. United Drug of Delaware 5s, Lorillard 7s, Detroit Edison 6s, Pacific Telephone 5s and some of the foreign sugars were heavy.

Foreign bonds drifted irregularly lower, but there were no outstanding changes.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSE UNCHANGED TO LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—An opening decline in cotton here today was attributed to the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and a favorable view of recent weather conditions in the South. It was followed by rallies on week-end covering, but they were not fully maintained and, after selling up from 16.33c to 16.41c, July closed at 16.30c. The general market closed steady net unchanged to 6 points lower.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSE UNCHANGED TO LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—An opening decline in cotton here today was attributed to the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and a favorable view of recent weather conditions in the South. It was followed by rallies on week-end covering, but they were not fully maintained and, after selling up from 16.33c to 16.41c, July closed at 16.39c. The general market closed steady net unchanged to 6 points lower.

The opening was steady at a decline of 5 points to an advance of 1 point, with the more active months showing net losses of about 5 to 9 points during the first few minutes under some overnight selling and local selling promoted by the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and a belief that recent weather conditions had permitted favorable progress with farm work in the South.

There also seemed to be some further nervousness over the situation in Japan owing to the labor troubles reported in one of the leading cotton mills, although the Stock Exchange at Tokio reopened this morning. This may have contributed to the decline which carried May off to 16.28c and the New October contract to 16.23c. Offerings were light, however, and the market steadied up during the middle of the morning on covering. May advanced to 16.38c and the new October to 16.29c, but there was further realizing or liquidation and the improvement was not fully maintained. New crop months were relatively easy, with May closing 113 points over the price of the new October.

There were reports of additions or pending additions to the certified stock and it was said that some cotton was being shipped here from California for delivery next month. The present certificated stock as reported today amounts to 226,977 bales at the various designated delivery points, having increased about 33,000 bales since March 17, but there was nothing in the action of the market that was regarded as suggesting any weakening of the near month situation. Liverpool cables said that Continental liquidation had been absorbed by Bombay buying and covering in that market, but reported depression in Manchester, with the Indian boycott checking business in yarns.

MARKET IRREGULAR ON CURB EXCHANGE

Many Recent Leaders Lose Ground on Week-End Profit-Taking.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Prices on the New York Curb Exchange displayed considerable irregularity today, with many of the recent leaders losing ground as a result of rather heavy week-end porfit-taking. Several of the large floor traders and pool operators were away for the week-end, and their absence was reflected in a smaller volume of trading.

Electric Bond & Share returned to the leadership of the public utility group by advancing 2¼ points to 112 after having sold as low as 109½ in the early trading. American Light & Traction (old stock), which recorded a sensational advance earlier in the week, dropped 4½ points to 335. American Gas & Electric fell more than 3 points. American & Foreign Power warrants advanced in sympathy with the rise in the common stock on the "big board." American Superpower was again turned over in large volume, closing fractionally lower.

Most of the leading oil shares showed moderate recessions on realizing. Derby Oil preferred jumped 13¾ points on one sale to 54 and Margay Oil and Sunray Oil moved into new high ground. Northern Pipe Line broke 12¾ to a new 1930 low at 37.

A sharp drop of 7½ points in Western Air Express on a turnover of only a few hundred shares was the only development of consequence in the aviation group. Aluminum limited dropped 10⅛ points and Driver Harris and Loew's debenture warrants each lost about 4 points.

Among the dozen or so issues to reach new high ground were Associated Rayon preferred, Rich, Inc., Joseph Ryerson and Utah Radio, the turnover in all cases being small.

HOGS STEADY TO LOWER AT THE CLOSE OF WEEK

Higher Prices Prevail Early in Week With Top of $10.65 Recorded.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, April 12 (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Receipts during the past week approximated 12,200; actual receipts previous week, 13,302; a year ago, 9026.

A moderately light run of cattle failed to balance the sluggish effect of the present beef trade, and buyers succeeded in enforcing additional declines on most of the killing classes during the week. A contributing factor toward the bearishness on steers was the presence of too many common and medium grade lightweights affording very little variety. The influx of numerous loads of mixed yearlings and heifers at midweek furnished the basis for hammering prices on these and this was extended to cows later in the week. Bulls were supported by outside competition, which boosted values, but vealers on Tuesday dropped to the lowest point since July 1, 1927. Compared with one week ago, medium and heavy weight steers and better grade light steers and yearlings sold mostly steady, spots 25c lower; lower grade light steers and yearlings largely 25c lower, some 50c off; mixed yearlings, heifers and cows, 25c to 50c lower; medium bulls 25c higher; vealers, $1 to $1.25 lower; stocker and feeder cattle steady. Tops for week: 975-lb. yearlings and 640-lb. heifers, $12.75; 1001-lb. steers, $12.60; 654-lb. mixed yearlings, $12.50; cows, $9.75; medium bulls, $8; vealers, $12.75. Two loads steers averaging 1315 lbs. went at $12.10, with one load scaling 1200 lbs. at $12.50. Steers averaging 1101 to 1197 lbs. ranged from $10.50 to $12.60, bulk $11.15 to $12.60. Lightweight steers spread from $8.50 to $12.75, bulk $9.50 to $11.25, with bulk of all steers $9.50 to $12.60. Most fat steers went at $12.10 to $12.60; fat mixed yearlings and heifers largely $11 to $12; medium kinds $10 to $10.75; most cows $7.25 to $8.75; low cutters, $4.50 to $5.50. At the close of the week top medium bulls registered $8, good and choice vealers $12.50.

Hogs Steady to Lower.

Receipts of hogs this week approximated 78,800 compared with actual arrivals of 80,655 last week and 61,305 corresponding week last year. Hog prices started upward at the opening of this week and continued until the top reached $10.65. Shippers and packers then refused to support the market and a reaction appeared which erased the entire advance and left values on a steady to 10c lower level as compared with the close of last week. Improved trends in lard trade proved a supporting factor for weighty butchers and packing sows early in the week but declining dressed pork prices more than overcame this influence during the latter half of the week. Pigs and light lights showed little net change while packing sows were the only exception to the general trend and maintained a gain of 15 to 25c. The weekend trade was of narrow proportions and demand was limited. General prices ruled 5c to 10c below the average of Friday, only packing sows and pigs reflecting no change. Most 160 to 220-lb. weights turned at $10.25 to $10.35, latter price top, and scattered loads and part loads of 225 to 250-lb. butchers went at $10 to $10.25. Plain quality 260 to 270-lb. weights on the bacon order earned $9.85. Most 130 to 150-lb. light lights cashed at $9.75 to $10.25 and 100 to 130-lb. pigs went at $9 to $10. Packing sows bulked at $8.80 to $9.10, a few up to $9.15 and above.

Sheep and lambs receipts approximated 9800 this week, compared with an actual count of 12,525 last week and 5044 corresponding week last year. Marketings around the livestock circuit declined materially this week and sellers were able to boost fat lamb prices a full 50c in the face of slight losses to Eastern dressed lamb trade. A more liberal sprinkling of spring lambs appeared, but sales were too uneven to definitely fix quotations. Sheep continued to arrive in very small numbers, but demand was only moderate and no price change was apparent. Packers paid up to $10 for good to choice wooled lambs, but majority of offerings graded medium or lower and sold around $9 to $9.25, with a liberal number around $8.50. City butchers paid $9.25 and $9.35 for choice clipped lambs, while sales to packers were mostly $8.50 to $9. Throwouts were salable around $7 to $8. Odd lots of spring lambs sold early in the week to fill special orders as high as $20, but most sales were recorded around $12 to $15. Fat ewes sold up to $6.25 for better handyweight wooled kinds and down to around $3 for common descriptions.

Copper Stocks Increase.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—A substantial increase in stocks of copper in North and South America for March was reported today by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Although daily output was the lowest in several years, copper shipments showed a large increase and production was somewhat larger, due to the three additional production days over February.

Total stocks of blister and refined copper in the two Americas on March 31 totaled 522,581 tons, against 497,372 tons at the end of February. Refined stocks were up 22,807 tons and blister stocks up 2312 tons.

Shipments of the metal during the month were 104,167 tons, an increase of 12,091 tons.

Refined copper production totaled 127,064 tons, an increase of 5000 tons, of which 114,899 was primary production of refined and 12,165 tons was scrap. Daily production was 4099 tons, a decrease of 229 tons daily. Output of crude copper was 61,091 tons, an increase of 1895 tons.

Steel Market.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Steel prices unchanged.

RAIN EXPECTED NEXT WEEK, GRAINS LOWER

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 12.—Forecast of probable rain next week was followed by down turn in wheat futures at close of week. Slack export demand for North American grain also exerted influence. Fine weather for field work was a factor in lower corn range.

In the cash grain market soft wheat was steady to ½ higher. There were orders in the market for choice No. 2 and selections cleared readily. There was also a demand for garlicky grain, but ordinary wheat was neglected. Ordinary No. 2 was offered after the close of the session at $1.19 and No. 3 at $1.17. Sales of selections of No. 2 were on a basis of 9½c to 10c above the Chicago May figure. Hard wheat was 1c to 1½c lower. Discounts narrowed. Supplies were light and the demand was good. Sales from store in considerable volume were reported. Offerings cleared well except for some No. 2 firmly held at 1c below the Chicago May figure. Sales from store of No. 1 winter were on a basis of the Chicago May figure to ½c below and No. 2 yellow at ¾c to 1c below. Corn was down 1c and 1½c. The demand was active at the downturn and the available supply cleared closely. The basis was ¾c to 1½c higher on the lower grades and ½c to ¾c better on the choicer grain. About 40 cars went to store and the remainder was taken by mills, industries and shippers. Oats were off ¼c to ½c. Offerings were light and met a good demand from local trade and shippers.

Declines of cent to more took place in May and July wheat early following unchanged openings. Winnipeg sold off a cent early after unchanged start. Liverpool closed ¾d lower on three deliveries. Corn showed fractional setback following unchanged to higher initial sales.

May wheat opened at $1.10⅝, July wheat $1.11¾, September wheat $1.14⅜. May corn 84⅜c and July wheat 86⅜c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 90,400 bushels, compared with 56,000 a week ago and 51,800 a year ago, included 65 cars local and 6 through. Corn receipts, which were 137,200 bushels, compared with 74,200 a week ago and 91,000 a year ago, included 92 cars local and 6 through. Oats receipts, which were 50,000 bushels, compared with 46,200 a week ago and 143,000 a year ago, included 16 cars local and 7 through. Hay receipts were 14 cars local and 9 through.

WEEKLY METAL REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Demand for copper tapered off somewhat. Weakness of the London market led to rumors of possible price recessions here and may have restricted buying, although producers continued to quote electrolytic at 18 cents delivered in the Connecticut Valley. This price will have been in effect for a year on April 16. Domestic consumers restricted purchases to light tonnages for immediate delivery. Some improvement in automobile and building industries is partially offset by slackened activity in wire trade.

Prices of lead reacted to new low levels for the year and the more attractive selling schedules to consumers failed to bring in any special volume of demand.

The market for zinc turned slightly easier toward the end of the week but there was a fair buying interest noted. Smelter stocks at the end of March increased. Ore was reduced.

New York Coffee.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Coffee futures showed further declines today, under a continuation of yesterday's selling which seemed to come partly from trade interests. No. 7 contracts opened at a decline of 6 to 13 points and closed at a net decline of 9 to 21 points. Sales estimated 44,000. Santos contracts opened 2 to 10 points lower and closed at a net decline of 15 to 22 points. Sales 20,000. Closing quotations: No. 7 contracts: May, 8.52; July, 8.24; September, 8.06; December, 7.91; March, 7.78; Santos contracts: May, 12.70; July, 12.28; September, 11.98; December, 11.80; March, 11.65.

Spot coffee quiet. Rio 7s 9⅞ to 10; Santos 4s 14 to 14¼. Cost and freight offers included Bourbon 3s and 5s at 12.75.

WHEAT HAS SHARP SETBACK ON PROBABILITY OF RAIN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Unable to stand up under increased selling, the wheat market today broke sharply. An official forecast of probable rain or snow next week proved the undoing of immediate hopes of higher prices, and led the execution of many stop-loss orders. Toward the last bear speculators pressed their advantage and the market failed to show much strength.

Wheat closed spineless at virtually the bottommost level reached, 1⅞ to 2⅜c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅝c to ⅞c down, oats ⅜c to ⅝c off and provisions showed 5c to 10c drop.

Despite numerous large buying orders from Eastern sources during the price setbacks, purchasing power was inadequate to absorb the rush of offerings that overwhelmed the pit. Even before the weekly forecast was issued pointing to likelihood of general moisture relief, the market was groggy because of scattered showers and possibilities of more prior to Monday. Unusual prominence given to news of "bread days" observed in Italy as a measure to reduce wheat imports tended to have an unsettling influence on wheat holders, serving to emphasize nearly complete absence of export demand for wheat from North America.

Another disturbing factor was word from a leading Chicago crop authority at Salina, Kan., that good rains soon would not only check crop punishment, but would repair some of the drouth damage already done to wheat throughout the Southwest. Some friends of higher prices displayed unabated confidence, however. Also the United States wheat visible supply since Jan. 1 has been decreasing at a rate seldom [illegible] and even a larger decrease was expected Monday than was the case a week ago.

Corn values receded owing to fine weather for field work and liberal receipts. Oats sympathized with downturns in other cereals. The season's first purchase of new oats was recorded.

Provisions reflected the weakness of grain.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.39c for spots duty paid. Buyers showed interest at this level, but holders were generally asking 1-32c more. The only sales confirmed was 30,000 bags of Cuban to an outport refiner at 1.41c for [illegible] shipment.

Raw futures were quiet and prices were partially lower under liquidation in the near positions and some selling by houses with Cuban connections, promoted by the continued liberal offerings in the spot market. The trade at large were inclined to limit fresh commitments, and there appeared to be a disposition to hold off and await the results of Monday's meeting in Cuba, where the dissolution of the single selling agency will again be discussed.

Opening prices were unchanged to 2 points lower and there was little variation thereafter, with final prices net unchanged to 3 points lower, with the near months relatively easy. Approximate sales were only 8850 tons. In the No. 2 contract closing prices were 1 point lower with no sales reported. Closing prices: No. 1, May, 1.62c; July, 1.68c; September, 1.73c; December, 1.82c; January, 1.84c; March, 1.89c; No. 2, July, 3.54c; September, 3.63c; December, 3.72c.

Sugar futures closed steady; approximated sales, 8850 tons; May, 1.62; July, 166@67; Sept., 1.73; Dec., 1.82; Jan., 1.84; March, 1.89.

Unusual Dancing Costumes For Junior League Ball

COLORFUL and unusual costumes will be worn by the feature entertainers at "A Night in Montmartre" the Junior League Easter ball to be given at Hotel Jefferson the night of April 25. The opening chorus will wear robin's egg blue taffeta sprinkled with circles of black and silver. The frocks are to be quaintly old-fashioned with tight bodices having short puffed sleeves and long full skirts revealing ruffled Colonial pantaloons. Touches of black velvet will adorn their hair and the waistlines of their frocks, and they will wear black lace mitts. Blue parasols will complete the effect.

A feature not before announced, will be a valse caprice by Mrs. David Randolph Calhoun and Junior Boehmer, with Mrs. Calhoun in chartreuse chiffon embroidered in scattered rhinestones. It is a dancing gown with long flaring skirt and bell-shaped sleeves.

The costumes of the tap dancers, Mrs. Calhoun, Miss Katherine Sipple, Miss Janet Wallace, Miss Anne Farrar Semple, Austin Leland, Junior Boehmer, Ben O. Clark and William Candy, will represent flames. The young women will wear orange and yellow, slashed to the knees into bits of flame-like color, and sleeves, tight to the elbows, similarly cut. Their hair will be covered with caps having wired Machiavellian spears. The young men will wear dark trousers and striped red and yellow skirts with full sleeves.

The climax in unusual costumes will be worn by the Finale Beauties, whose attire will depict the evolution of the dance through the centuries. These young women, who are being coached by Rosalind Mahler Pufeles, are Miss Mary Merwin Shepley, Miss Elizabeth Douglass, Mrs. Wallace Herndon Smith, Mrs. William Francis Niedringhaus, Mrs. Ira E. Wight Jr., Mrs. Oliver J. Anderson, Mrs. Donald Bixby and Mrs. Martin Lammert III.

Alternating costumes of red and black will be worn by the finale chorus. They will have tiered skirts with large bows and streamers covered with pictured music notes attached at one side. Matching berets will be worn in lieu of hats.

A bevy of girls selling cigarettes will wear evening gowns and carry gilded baskets laden with their wares.

James H. Platt is to be master of ceremonies; Wade Turner Childress will have charge of tickets at the door, and Marion

WASHINGTON, April 12.

THE East Room of the White House has undergone several changes during years of service under its several mistresses. Mrs. Hoover will soon add 50 Louis XV gold chairs to emphasize the dignity of the stately room where once Abigal Adams dried the family laundry.

The chairs are to be upholstered in blue silk damask, with richly hand-carved woodwork. The chairs will be used on all occasions to serve as seats of the mighty, at musicales and receptions of state.

Social Washington entertained a distinguished French flyer during the week—Count de la Veaux, famed for his record flight from France to Africa. He is the president of Aeronautiques Internationale. The French Ambassador and Mme. Claudel gave a dinner for him, and the following day the Assistant Secretary of War, F. Trubee Davison entertained him at luncheon at the Metropolitan Club. Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham and Maj. Georges Thenault, air attache of the French Embassy, also entertained him.

Five little Japanese school maids will arrive in Washington Monday morning—messengers of good will from Japan to the United States for aid given to earthquake sufferers in 1923. They are Misses Kimi Ashino, Sumiko Tokunda, Yoshika Sato and Yoshika Matsudaira of Tokio, and Misses Keiko Nakamura of Yokohama.

Judge John Barton Payne, director of the American Red Cross, will entertain the envoys on Wednesday, at which time the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Debuchi, Col. and Mrs. Ernest Bicknell, Mrs. John K. Caldwell, Mrs. Henry C. Corbin and others will meet the visitors. Lars Anderson, one-time Ambassador to Japan, and Mrs. Anderson of Brookline, Mass., will hold a reception for them at their home on Massachusetts avenue. They will be received at the White House.

Vice President Curtis and his sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, find their date book filled with dinner engagements, and almost every night they are dined by Washington friends. They were guests at a dinner party at the home of the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Ray Lyman Wilbur; Mrs. Harry Clay Ransley and Miss Elizabeth Ransley wife of Representative Ransley of Pennsylvania, came from Philadelphia to extend invitations for luncheon in honor of Mrs. Gann; the Attorney-General and Mrs. William Dewitt Mitchell recently entertained at dinner for them.

Lieutenant Commander G. C. Hoover, one of the President's aids, played an important role in the all-society cast of "The Fur Coat"—a play staged by the Italy-America Society in which there also appeared several members of the Italian Embassy staff. The entire personnel of the Italian diplomatic staff attended the performance. Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas was also found in the audience.

Rainbow Ball Heads Gaieties in New York

NEW YORK, April 12.

FROM fantastical rainbows to whimsical three-ring circuses, from a party peopled with silhouettes to a festival of English folk dances, the socially prominent of New York flitted this week.

The rainbow ball, flashing all the colors of the spectrum, given for the benefit of the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children, capped the gaieties of the week tonight. The staircase leading to the grand ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton was lined with black and white balloons. Hundreds of varicolored balloons decked the ceilings and walls. Large iridescent balloons, each flashing all the rainbow tints, floated from the chandeliers, clusters of silver balloons drifted from the balconies and blue balloons lined the railings.

Across the stage at the end of the ballroom were painted three rainbows against which Broadway stars will perform in a midnight entertainment. Rainbow floodlights playing across the dancers, and palm readings by a fortune teller circulating among the supper guests featured the evening's gaiety.

The silhouette ball, given by the Society of Illustrators drew other members of the fashionable ranks to the Plaza tonight. The silhouette tableaux, producing "Bow Bows"; Louis Hanlon, "Fickle Fame", and John Sheridan "Oui Oui," featured the entertainments. The frolic closed with supper and dancing.

"A Night Under the Big Top," a three-ring circus supper dance, found many of society's leaders thronging the grand ballroom of the Commodore last Sunday evening. The ballroom was transformed into a huge circus tent, with red and white-striped canopy and yellow walls ornamented with a painted circus parade of elephants, clowns, bare-back riders and gypsies.

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture.

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair, and how to darken it, with a home made mixture.

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

TWO NEW COURSES FOR SCOUTMASTERS

Astronomy and Nature Study Added to Subjects for Training Classes.

Two new special courses, in nature study and elementary astronomy, will be added this week for scoutmasters' training classes conducted by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, according to William Puffer, educational director. Both courses are intended for scout leaders who have previously completed one of the standard training courses in elements of Scout leadership.

Both subjects are entirely new in the local training curriculm, the only special courses being given heretofore having been in first aid and swimming.

Dr. F. H. Staley will have charge of the nature study course, which will be conducted in Room 3 of the Michael School. The first meeting will be held at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, but a vote will be taken at that time to determine whether the class will continue on Wednesdays or change to Thursday nights. The course will cover all general phases of nature study, but will concentrate on those included in the Nature Study Merit Badge requirements.

The astronomy group will be headed by Dr. C. E. Colgate, deputy commissioner of the Suburban District. Classes will be held at the Barnes Children's Hospital on Tuesdays at 7:30 o'clock.

The other classes included in the training series will meet as usual this week. The elements course will deal with first aid at its meeting at the Michael School tomorrow evening. The principles of first aid course will meet at the Washington University Medical School, tomorrow, and the swimming class will assemble at the Principil pool Tuesday evening.

Troop Notes

WEST DISTRICT.

A Boy Scout Night, to dedicate Troop 9's new Scout room at the Masonic Home, where the troop meets, was held at the home a week ago last night. Members of the troop gave a program, starting at 7:30 o'clock with a short play by the Scouts and Scoutmaster Burrell L. Pickering. After a talk by Samuel R. Freet, Grand Master of the State of Missouri, prizes were presented to the winners of individual and inter-patrol contests during March. The prizes were donated by Troop Committeeman Drehman. First prize, a lariat, went to Scout Chester Duvall, while second, a compass, was given Scout Charles Grissom. Each member of the Fox patrol, which had won the inter-patrol contest, was presented with two handkerchiefs.

The meeting night of Troop 26, which has headquarters at the Delmar Baptist Church, has been changed from Friday to Saturday. Patrol Leaders Thayer Damon and Tom McConnell served as color-bearers at the City Court of Honor Thursday evening, while four other members of the troop participated in the Oregon Trail parade and pageant that afternoon.

Contests in bandaging and the various ways of carrying injured persons were held between the patrols of Troop 30, of the Y. M. H. A., at the meeting last week.

The Scouts of Troop 60 performed a troop good turn yesterday afternoon by distributing circulars for three churches in the vicinity of the Union Avenue Christian Church, where the troop has its headquarters.

Plans for a field day and practice for the Camparall are being made by Troop 101, of the West Park Baptist Church.

Six promotions were made among the officers of Troop 113, of the Church of Messiah, at the meeting last week. Senior Patrol Leader Bob Miller and Patrol Leader Joe Hemker of the Tiger Patrol were advanced to Junior Assistant Scoutmasters, while Patrol Leader Hugh Harris of the Silver Foxes was made Senior Patrol Leader. Assistant Patrol Leader Bill Casey became leader of the Tigers, Assistant Patrol Leader Charles Solomon became leader of the Silver Foxes, and Assistant Patrol Leader Sam Schwartzberg of the Beavers was made patrol leader of a new patrol, the Wild Horses.

Troop 128 of the Fountain Park Congregational Church, was presented with a red streamer denoting accomplishment of two parts of the 1930 Achievement Roundup, at the meeting of the troop March 28. The troop incorrectly had been awarded only a green streamer, signifying one achievement, but through the efforts of one of the troop committeemen the error was corrected.

NORTH DISTRICT.

Senior Patrol Leader Thompson gave a talk on merit badges, and Troop Committeeman Knott of Troop 206 spoke on his own troop, at the meeting of Troop 3 at the Grace Holy Cross Church Monday evening. Two officers of Troop 206 were visitors. A contest in second class Morse code will be held at the meeting tomorrow evening.

The S. H. P. patrol won two inter-patrol contests, and the Unknown patrol won one, at the meeting of Troop 205, at the Bates School last week. Scout Winston Carter passed one of his second-class tests. Scoutmaster Hunt gave a talk on the Camparall, and plans were started by the troop to work toward winning the district event. Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Henry Harrington spoke on the Pony Express. Troop Committeeman Stroker and his two sons were visitors.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

Three new Scouts were invested with the rank of Tenderfoot at a ceremony conducted at the meeting of Troop 105, of the Church of the Assumption, last week. A talk also was given by Field Executive L. C. Case.

A new inter-patrol contest, which will last until June 20, was started by Troop 160, of the Immanuel M. E. Church, at the meeting last week.

A Parents' Night, which was attended by a large group of parents and friends of the scouts, was conducted by Troop 167, of the Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church, at the meeting last week.

Scoutmaster Charles Hollweg received a wrist watch and Assistant Scoutmaster Traber a tooled leather billfold, at a Parents' night conducted by Troop 130, of the Rose Fanning School, a week ago Friday evening. A pantomime program, directed by Eagle Scout Schaumberg, was given by the scouts, dramatizing the requirements of scout advancement.

SUBURBAN DISTRICT.

With the half-way point reached in an inter-patrol contest, the two patrols of Marvin Park 1 are only one point apart. The Lion patrol, under Patrol Leader Hanish, has 115 points, while the Eagle patrol, headed by Patrol Leader John Moore, has 114.

The Camparall squad of Webster Groves 8, which meets at the Webster Groves Episcopal Church, held its first outdoor practice for competition in the Camparall last Sunday.

To Head Traffic Club.

Edward Clemens, traffic manager for the Terminal Railroad Association, has been nominated without opposition, for president of the Traffic Club. Election of a full slate of officers will be held April 23.

"I ALWAYS GO GREAT NORTHERN"

"I like the hospitable air of Great Northern trains. It's like coming into the home of a friend who really enjoys making you comfortable.

"Come into the sun-room, in the observation car. Here's a comfortable davenport—inviting armchairs. And every afternoon at four, there's tea for all, without charge.

"And it's all so clean, too. No dust—much of the roadbed is washed gravel, they tell me, and oiled. And no smoke or soot—for more than twelve hundred miles they use oil-burning and electric locomotives . . ."

The new Empire Builder and the luxurious Oriental Limited serve you all the way between Chicago and the Puget Sound Country—to Glacier Park, to the Mount Baker and Rainier National Park Playgrounds, to Portland and the Columbia River Country, Alaska and the Orient. Colorado Wants You to Enjoy a PERFECT Vacation

Rugged Summits in Rocky Mountain National Park

COLORFUL

WHY "shop around" for a vacation place? Colorful Colorado (103,948 square miles of it), the Vacationland Supreme, has the goods—and will deliver! SOME vacation claims can be made in any neck of the woods—but Colorado makes them ALL and PROVES every one of them!

Recreation? Try to think of something you can't do in Colorful Colorado. Yachting, you may say. Colorado's Grand Lake Yacht Club competes each year for a cup given by Sir Thomas Lipton. Swimming? Dozens of plain and mineral water indoor and outdoor pools and beaches. Health Spas? Hundreds of mineral springs, unexcelled therapeutically. Scenery? Forty-eight peaks above 14,000 feet, with ranges and streams and gorges and forests mounting up to them. Game and fish? Thousands of miles of trout streams, hundreds of lakes, restocked annually with millions of fish; small game in abundance, deer, bear, mountain lions and coyotes for the rifleman; elk, mountain sheep and rare birds to attract the hunter-by-camera. Novelty? An annual Ski Tournament on July 4, for example. Economy? Colorado vacations cost very little.

Overnight from half the nation, two nights from almost anywhere—Colorful Colorado is the place for even a short vacation. It takes years to enjoy ALL Colorado—start enjoying it your next vacation.

What Are Your Vacation Requirements?

Jot them down: What you want to do; what sort of scenery you would like; what kind of hotel, camp or cottage accommodations you prefer; how long you can be gone from home; what you want to spend; what degree of cool weather you want. Then mail your specifications to The Colorado Association. You will receive suggestions of several delightful places and be told all about getting to them, with costs, routes, lists of accommodations and amusements, etc. The more specific your questions, the more helpful will be the reply.

The only record is the manuscript, which bears this inscription: "Johann Sebastian Bach, 1729, Soli Deo Gloria"—to God Alone the Glory.

Next Wednesday, the "Pot of Gold" period, in which ways of making money at home are taught, is to be revived in the Magazine of Air broadcasts over the Columbia chain, beginning at 9 a. m. the first five days of the week. The circumstances of Bach's creation of this work, generally regarded as the noblest example of devotional music, are unknown. The only record is the manuscript, which bears this inscription: "Johann Sebastian Bach, 1729, Soli Deo Gloria"—to God Alone the Glory.

Next Wednesday, the "Pot of Gold" period, in which ways of making money at home are taught, is to be revived in the Magazine of Air broadcasts over the Columbia chain, beginning at 9 a. m. the first five days of the week. Members of the staff of WTAM, Cleveland, are to take part in an Evening Stars broadcast over KSD at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday. Percy Grainger, famous pianist-composer, is to be soloist in a Mobiloil concert over KSD at 7:30 Wednesday evening. He will play the Grieg Concerto in A-minor and several of his own works. "Tris" Speaker will be interviewed by Grantland Rice in a Coca Cola period at 9:30 Wednesday night over KSD.

Lawrence Tibbett and Richard Crooks will sing in the production of Stainer's cantata, "The Crucifixion," in the R. C. A.-Victor hour at 9 o'clock Thursday night over KSD.

Charles Sanford Skilton, composer of the opera, "The Sun Bride," which is to have its premiere over KSD at 10 o'clock Thursday night, is professor of music at the University of Kansas and an authority on the music of the American Indian. Among his musical works are a

Wave Length Of KMOX to Be Changed May 1

KYW, WTAM, WHAS and Other Stations Affected by Shifts in 1020-1180 Kc. Band.

The shift of stations in the 1020-1170 kilocycle band that was decided on some time ago by the Federal Radio Commission is to go into effect May 1, unless KYW, Chicago; WHAS, Louisville, Ky., and WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind., are able to get the courts to hold up the changes.

KMOX, St. Louis, is among the stations affected, being moved from 1090 to 1110 kc, while WTAM, Cleveland, will be separated by one more channel than now from KMOX, moving from 1070 to 1080 kc.

If the courts do not intervene, the line-up in that part of the broadcast band after May 1 will be as follows:

1020—WHAS, Louisville.
1040—WBT, Charlotte, N. C.
1050—KNX, Hollywood, Cal.
1060—WTIC, Hartford, Conn.
1070—KTHS, Hot Springs, Ark., and KRLD, Dallas, Tex.
1080—WTAM, Cleveland.
1090—KSL, Salt Lake City.
1100—WPG, Atlantic City, N. J.
1110—KMOX, St. Louis.
1120—WCOA, Pensacola, Fla.
1130—KVOO, Oklahoma City, and WAPI, Birmingham, Ala.
1140—KYW, Chicago.
1150—WRVA, Richmond, Va.
1160—WHAM, Rochester, N. Y.
1170—KOB, State College, N. M., and KEX, Portland, Ore.
1180—WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind.

WCAU, Philadelphia, Pa., is to have WHAS' present channel, 820 kc.

One result of the changes probably will be that WTAM, Cleveland, and KTHS or KRLD, depending on whether the Hot Springs or the Texas station is using the 1070 wave at the time, will probably "smear" all over each other for listeners in this part of the country. This would be a distinct loss, for the 50,000-watt Cleveland station comes through strongly hereabouts and broadcasts a number of fine programs that are likely to be lost to listeners.

Intimations from Washington are that there will be no more power increases above 5000 watts for some time, to say nothing of the possibility that stations now using 50,000 watts may have their power reduced. Opinion in Washington is that the commission is likely to deny the applications of the following 500-watt stations for power increases to 50,000 watts: WHO-WOC, on 1000 kc; WSM, Nashville, Tenn., on 650 kc; WSB, Atlanta, Ga., on 740 kc, and WRVA, Richmond, Va., now on 1110, but to be moved to 1150 kc, after May 1.

That the commission will authorize several experimental duplications of stations on cleared channels before June 1 is also believed

AVA, Mo., April 12.

A NEW highway is ranging over the ridges and through the valley between Bryant and Fox creeks, connecting Ozark and West Plains. It is Missouri Highway No. 14 and how it was obtained for the "east end" district of this section is an interesting story. Ava was scheduled to be the culmination of No. 14 until the "east enders" began to clamor for a smooth highway. Ava has long wanted a new stone courthouse. At present it has an ancient wooden structure, built in 1886.

In consequence of the combined desires of these two communities in Douglas County, both factions agreed to support the aims of the other—one for the new highway, the other for the new Courthouse. As a result, the road has been built and next spring the Courthouse will be erected.

And so, when No. 14 goes out to the Vera Cruz and Burchart neighborhood, crosses at the forks of Bryant and Fox Creeks, it will be well for the traveler to pause for a moment and learn of the longest and bitterest feud ever waged in the Ozark hills.

50 Years of Open Warfare.

For here in the east end of Douglas County was the original Ozark feudland. Here the Alsup and Fleetwood families lived and fought each other in open warfare for half a century. Here is where more than 200 lives were sacrificed to the lust of these two clans for each other's blood. In the old graveyard at the forks of the two creeks are stones marking ancient graves where Shelt and Lock Alsup were laid away. Others of the Alsup clan also were buried there, and in the same cemetery lie the bones of many of the Fleetwoods, the Bransons and the Spurlocks—all pioneer families of Douglas County who participated in the battles of long ago.

Historians have devoted many pages to this feud, a popular novelist made it the basis of a novel and the drama was so colorful that $10,000 was offered and refused for the motion-picture rights. Authors and playwrights in pairs and singly have visited Ava numerous times to gather material for stories and dramas, based on this reign of terror which began in 1820 and did not end until long after the Civil War.

"There have been many sporadic neighborhood quarrels, some of them resulting in bloodshed," says the Missouri Historical Review, "but there was one inveterate quarrel which pursued its bloody course for more than 40 years, held one of the largest counties in the Ozarks in deadly fear, cost scores of lives and was at length submerged by the bloody waves of the Civil War."

Says It Was "Alsup Versus Field."

This report is only partially correct, according to Charles Alsup, Clerk of Douglas County, who says there never was a real feud between the Alsup and Fleetwood families, but it was a case more or less of the field against the Alsups. He says the vendetta did not end with the war, but lasted until about 1875.

Historic Blue Ridge Mountains in Virginia Included in Motor Trip East From St. Louis

Matt F. Morse, Automobile Club Manager, and Party Find Three Good Routes to Washington, One of Which Passes Through Kentucky Blue Grass Region and on Into Virginia—Highways Are in Fine Condition and Are Well Marked, he Reports.

THE Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, wrapped in the mists of all their storied romance and beauty, and affording a remarkably fitting background for our national history, offer an inspiring objective for the eastward bound St. Louis motorist. If he can afford to devote but one additional day to a motor trip arranged, let us say, primarily for business purposes, the swing down through the Blue Grass country of Kentucky and back north through the Appalachian range, winding in and out through the Cumberland, Blue Ridge and Allegheny Mountains, will pay big dividends in scenery and motoring thrills.

And as for the motorist who is seeking a pleasure trip, and wants to do his driving on good roads, none could be better.

Matt F. Morse, secretary and general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, and a party of motor club attaches recently completed a tour of the Blue Ridge section while in the East to attend the annual American Automobile Association Secretaries' Conference at Washington. He reports highway conditions vastly improved since last year in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Fast, wide, smooth, paved roads, supplemented with ample facilities for taking care of his needs, greet the motorist all along the line, according to Morse. There are three distinct ways to drive to the capital. The one most commonly used and most familiar to drivers, of course, is United States 40 or the National Old Trail.

Another Route Southward.

The second route suggested is by way of U. S. 50 and U. S. 60, passing through Vincennes, Ind., Louisville, Frankfort and Lexington, Ky.; Huntington and Charleston, W. Va., and Lexington, Staunton and Winchester, Va. This route leaves U. S. 60 at Lexington, Va., and goes northeast down the Shenandoah Valley over U. S. 11 to Winchester, Va., where a turn to the right is made on U. S. 50 and on into Washington.

The third suggested route, known as the Asheville route, goes even further south after passing through Lexington, Ky., barely touching Tennessee as it follows the trail over the Cumberland Gap and then veers north and east, following the line of the mountains to Roanoke, Lynchburg and Richmond, Va. The trip into Washington is then made

ONE of the points of scenic interest to be visited on the motor tour from St. Louis to Washington. It is the Chief Bluge Falls near Bristol, Va., which is near the Tennessee line.

3 Hangars, Runways Completed At Curtiss-Steinberg Airport

THE completion of runways and of three hangars at the new Curtiss-Steinberg Airport, south of East St. Louis, marks the beginning of operations by Curtiss-Wright Flying Service here following a year's preparation.

Work was begun last April to put the 569-acre tract in shape to conform with plans for one of the finest airports in the country. There is now ready for active flying an excellent field nearly a mile long and three-fourths of a mile wide. The ground is so nearly level that engineers report less than 1 per cent grade. Fifty miles of drain tile have been laid under the surface throughout the area to carry off the water into a larger channel which in turn flows to the Mississippi River. Two electrically driven pumps are available in an emergency to drain the field if for any reason the Levee Board's pumping installation should fail. Concrete runways 100 feet wide extend from a common starting point one-third of a mile in each of three directions, enabling large transport ships to land under any ground conditions in any of six directions. An additional concrete taxi strip 60 feet wide extends from these runways to the hangars.

To provide for the storage, repair, and servicing of planes, and for offices, three hangars are now complete and in use. Of matt brick construction with steel trussed roof, 120x120 ft., these hangars represent the latest developments in buildings of this type. The interior is of glazed tile with floors of concrete. In smaller buildings of the same construction are housed the offices of Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, a photographic laboratory, ground school for flying students, complete mechanical equipment, and spare parts department.

The boundaries of the field are marked with boundary lights. A 2,000,000 candle-power revolving beacon has been delivered and is ready for installation. A Sperry flood light of 4,000,000 candle power, the most powerful unit built in America, was installed last week. The airport is six miles from downtown St. Louis and may be reached by way of the Municipal Bridge and Illinois Highway No. 3 in 15 minutes.

Early next month T. A. T.-Maddux Airlines will transfer local operations of their transcontinental service from Lambert-St. Louis Field to Curtiss-Steinberg Field. It is expected that subsequently other air transportation companies will take advantage of the new facilities offered on the East Side.

Cuban Road Penetrates Sections of Scenic Charm

Arterial Highways Long Needed in Island Republic — Rainy Season Has Made Soil So Boggy That Transportation Has Had to Rely on Ox Teams — Auto Traffic Tied Up.

By HAMILTON M. WRIGHT.

ONE who is familiar with tropical conditions, and more especially with tropical conditions as they are found in Cuba, cannot imagine how greatly modern arterial highways have been needed in that republic. The summer rainfalls are heavy and as large areas of the country have been almost completely deforested, the run-off of water from the hills is very rapid. The result is a sudden rising of streams and the creation of great ponds and lakes, barring communications for days at a time, to all communities except those so fortunate as to be situated on the railway lines.

During the rainy season the soil becomes so boggy that only the great ox teams can be relied upon for interior transportation. Even in winter, which is not the rainy season, a single night's rain may halt completely all automobile traffic. Within the last two weeks I found all traffic stopped on a short detour around an incompleted section of the Cuban Central Highway between Havana and the City of Pinar del Rio. An obliging Cuban maintained a team of huge oxen which were kept ready to haul the cars of those who had been so venturous as to attempt to drive by the detour after a heavy rain. Similarly, in Eastern Cuba, I found the Cauto River has risen overnight so that it was impossible to make the ford 18 miles west of Bayamo. Within the past year El Cauto, which is the largest river in Cuba, is known to have risen 30 feet in five hours. A Cuban engineer informed me its highest known rise was 60 feet.

Development Impeded.

The result of these conditions has been to greatly impede the economic and social development of Cuba. Organized agricultural activity has been principally confined to the large sugar centrals and tobacco plantations which are located on railway lines or spurs. Diversified agriculture and small industries among the mass of the people have been hindered by poor communications.

Accordingly, some years ago, President Gerardo Machado and Minister of Public Works Cespedes inaugurated a comprehensive plan of good roads, sewers, irrigation and drainage ditches, and public and vocational schools.

The Cuban Central Highway, which is the principal road feature of the plan, is 705 miles in length. It extends between Pinar del Rio in Western Cuba to Santiago de Cuba in the East, and passes through the capitals of the six Cuban provinces. The contract for this highway was the largest single road contract ever awarded. It amounted to $75,880,000, but extensions have added $25,000,000 to the original cost. Five hundred miles of the highway was allotted to Warren Brothers Co., international road engineers and contractors of Boston, Mass., and 200 miles to the Associated Cuban Contractors, Inc.

Road Serves Sugar Sections.

The highway, as a rule, leads down the "backbone" of Cuba. Subsidiary roads will connect the highway with all the principal ports not reached direct by it. A total of 135 sugar centrals, it is estimated, will be reached by the highway or its branches.

The writer has visited almost all parts of the highway and can truthfully say it is the finest piece of arterial road construction he has ever seen. Construction has gone ahead faster than was expected. The subgrade of the highway is now, practically speaking, 100 per cent completed. The surfacing is 70 per cent completed. About the 20th of May, the anniversary of the founding of the Cuban republic, it should be possible to drive from Havana to Pinar del Rio City in the west, and to Santa Clara in the east. By midsummer it is expected cars will drive to Camaguey, and by the end of the year, or a few months thereafter to Santiago de Cuba. Here and there great bridges, under process of construction, remain to be completed, and various sections of the highway to be consolidated. Owing to the fact that construction is dependent upon quarries and supplies of many sorts, the road [illegible] when Shelt Alsup, Sheriff at the time, was shot from ambush. His relatives did not take up the task of punishing the assassins. Alsup said that some of his relations were "among the meanest that ever lived," and some were the "best citizens of the county." His grandfather was appointed by the Missouri Legislature to choose the site of a county seat and he caused a filing to be made on the present site of Ava. A square in the center was donated to the county and the remainder of the lots sold to early settlers. The Alsups took prominent part in the Civil War for the North, while the Fleetwoods were on the side of the South.

The first of the Alsup clan came to Douglas County in 1812, from Eastern Tennessee. Tom Alsup was head of the clan, which consisted of about 12 families, all large. A few years later a large number of Fleetwoods came into this backwoods Eden from Kentucky. One family lived along Bryant Creek, the other on Fox Creek. At the forks of the creek is a level plateau and this was common ground for both families and their branches.

Quarrel Started With Children.

The trouble started between the children. A young Alsup was taking his sweetheart home from church one evening. Out of pure deviltry the Fleetwood boys separated him from his girl and gave him a threshing. The boy's father went over to call on the Fleetwoods and have the fracas adjusted, a quarrel followed and Alsup shot a Fleetwood dead. The battle was on. News quickly spread through the hill country and every man on either side made the quarrel his own and swore vengeance.

"Years passed on, each seeing the bloody results of the feud," continues the Historical Review. "Occasionally some of the older and cooler heads on either side made efforts to end the troubles, there would be an armed truce for a period, but for some trivial violation, feud fires would blaze afresh and with redoubled violence. Probably in the 40 years to 1860 200 lives were offered up on the altar of that bloody Moloch."

In October, 1860, it was mutually agreed to meet and fight it out in regular battle formation. The level plateau between the two creeks was chosen. It was a typical post oak flat and here the two clans met—about 100 to each side—and fought in true Indian fashion, from behind trees.

Pitched Battle a Draw.

The fight was a draw, but more than 20 lives were lost in the single battle. A Circuit Judge and Prosecuting Attorney brought the matter before a special grand jury and 50 men were indicted. They were scheduled for trial in the spring of 1861. Then came the war, and the Fleetwods immediately volunteered with the Confederacy, while the Alsups went with the Federals.

When the Alsups came back from the war they were all heroes and at once got into the official saddle, holding most of the county offices. They made good officials but were very dictatorial. Once, when the County Court did not agree with Sheriff Shelt Alsup, he came into the courtroom, threw his official reports on the table, shot once into the ceiling, once into the floor and said:

"I have got a third bullet here for the first damned County Judge that turns down my report."

And his report was then and there adopted as correct without the trouble of checking it.

For 20 years the Alsup faction reigned in Douglas County politics after the war; then all of a sudden they were ousted by official ballot and the reign of the feudists had ended forever.

St. Louis Oil Company Manager Formerly Played Shakspeare

It is not such a far cry from an early ambition to play Shakspeare to be manager of the St. Louis division of an oil company, according to Fred Cordell, who holds such a position with the Phillips Petroleum Co.

At his office at 6291 Suburban avanue the other day, Cordell recalled the histrionic urge that led him to leave his home in Holdenville in search of fame and fortune. "I was looking for a way to make a dollar grow where none had grown before," he said. Continuing, he remarked:

"In those days, before the radio 'mike' had ever been heard of, the play was the thing—the drama, melodrama, Shakspeare. Road companies were barnstorming through the sticks, playing to rural audiences which gaped at some of the big words and gestures.

"It looked like easy money to me. But once in it, it wasn't long before I realized that on the stage, selling something, selling one's personality, was as necessary as in the business world. I decided to leave the business of selling King Lear or Anthony (and these fellows got all the credit) to some one else. I wanted to sell something more tangible.

Decided on Oil Business.

"I had looked around and couldn't help noticing the progress of the then young automobile industry. I figured that every car and truck had to have gasoline to run, that there would be a steady and increasing demand for fuel, that the latter satisfied a basic need. Why not get into it?

"The rest can be told briefly—gaining the necessary experience, finding a progressive company with a good product, and organizing to give service. That is what I did and I am happy to be here today."

FRED CORDELL

Cordell opened the district headquarters of the Phillips company in St. Louis in November, 1929. He had previously been in charge of the division at Springfield, Mo., which was consolidated with the Kansas City division later. The local district comprises the Eastern one-third of Missouri and the Southern half of Missouri.

He is one of the company's oldest and most experienced employes. He has surrounded himself with men who are thoroughly familiar with the wholesaling and retailing of motor fuels and lubricants. An active expansion program is being pushed in St. Louis and the nearby territory. Additional outlets are being acquired to handle the company's products, which are Phillips 66, Phillips 66 Ethyl and Phillips 77 aviation gasolines and Phillips motor oils.

March Automobile Output 36 Per Cent Lower Than in 1929

March automobile production is estimated at 400,000, according to reports submitted to the directors' meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce last week. The chamber states that, in view of the early date of the meeting, data is incomplete and subject to revision.

The total is 18 per cent higher than February production, and 36 per cent lower than the total of March last year.

Low-Priced 'Six' Built Under Ideal Factory Conditions

When the signal was given that started the first new Chrysler six down the final assembly line, production experts of Chrysler Motors had realized their ambition to build a motor car under ideal plant facilities for manufacturing, assembly and final test.

Every recent development in production work had been focused on the new Chrysler six to maintain quality and control cost so the car could be marketed in the lowest price field that the Chrysler Sales Corporation ever offered a six-cylinder car, according to officials.

Road Building to Aid Jobless.

In an effort to give work to thousands of men in the United States, upwards of $1,681,167,455 is to be spent this year by States and counties in road building. This amount is an increase of $250,000,000 over 1929. Highway officials of 45 States estimated 32,582 miles of roads would be improved. This Costly Accidents.

The cost of automobile accidents in the United States is estimated at about $2,500,000 every 24 hours. The 1929 cost totaled more than $900,000,000.

Hints to Automobile Drivers

If the car will run very slowly in high gear without bucking but reveals marked loss of power on hills the indications are that the spark timing has become "late."

One of those annoying rim squeaks often can be cured by running a few miles with the lugs loosened. The rim then has a chance to readjust itself.

Not all ammeters read the same way, and it is because of this that drivers sometimes borrow a lot of trouble when taking possession of a new car. If the needle points to the left for "charging" when you have been accustomed to having it point to the right, it is easy to be misled into thinking the generator is working properly when, as a matter of fact, it may be in trouble.

With many engines it makes a difference which cylinder is cut out when a spark plug goes bad. In that event it is a good plan to try switching the plugs around, just as one changes the tubes in a radio set.

We are entering a season of greater variations in temperature with the result that more water condenses in the gas tank. Empty out the bowl of the gas filter more frequently.

Before filling up the rear tank for a trip be sure the gasoline gauge has been checked for accuracy. After a winter of cold and contraction gauges of the pressure type usually register less fuel than the tank holds.

If your car carries a valve lubricator always let the engine idle a few minutes before driving into the garage and putting the car away for the night. This will prevent valve stickage in the morning.

Ever since chromium plating became the fashion and owners have not had to wipe off the headlights after a rainstorm, there has been a tendency to forget to clean the lenses of the lamps. This accounts for much of the poor lighting owners so often complain of in winter driving.

Why do so many owners drive fast when they intend charging a weakened battery? The ammeter tells very plainly that the charging rate commences to drop after a certain speed is reached.

When driving around well-lighted streets at night in the rain, it will save the battery, and give just as good visibility, to switch to the auxiliary lights at this season of the year.

Running a short distance with the brakes lightly applied is a good way to stop them from screeching, but great care should be taken to avoid overdoing it. Very often the normal application of the brakes will be sufficient to cause them to operate quietly.

Traffic Over Free Bridge.

To the Automobile Editor:

ONE of the most vexing traffic conditions in St. Louis is on the Free Bridge and it grows worse each year, especially during the spring and summer months. As a daily user of the Free Bridge, it is my opinion that the following suggestions would materially improve conditions.

Repair the north side of the roadway so that westbound traffic will not be forced to drive in the middle. Regulate traffic, especially on Sundays and holidays, keeping motorists from driving two abreast and otherwise driving as their fancy dictates. Eliminate left turns at Piggot street in East St. Louis and Seventh boulevard in St. Louis.

Remove the sidewalk on the north side of the approaches, as there is hardly enough pedestrian traffic to warrant a sidewalk on both sides of the bridge. The bridge approaches are approximately one mile long and the bridge proper is approximately six-tenths of a mile, so that time would be saved over a considerable distance, even if traffic is forced to pass more closely together.

COMMUTER.

Drives Through the Country.

To the Automobile Editor.

IS it a gorgeous day and are you longing for a look at spring in the country? Then hop in your car and drive out Clayton road to the Carson road, then south to the Manchester and then west as far as your time limit will allow.

I suggest going out the Clayton road because on it, just beyond North and South road is the country. It is a Tarvia road and in very good condition at present. If you are fortunate, as you approach Carson road, you will see a pastoral scene of exquisite beauty. The prize cattle of a large dairy farm are sometimes allowed to graze in the pasture on the right side of the road and this picture itself is well worth the trip.

If you wish to picnic, after you have driven about 30 miles beyond town on the Manchester road, you may turn off on the Wild Horse Creek, the Melrose, the St. Albans or any other of the many crossroads about that distance out and each one will lead you to entrancing spots of beauty in the foothills of the Ozarks, or you may buy your dinner at one of the many roadhouses along the way.

EIGHTS and SIXES

It is natural to want the best. Public preference invariably follows the arrival of a superior product.

And there is a best. Always, there is some manufacturer unwilling to be satisfied with an average result.

In motor cars, one manufacturer who insists upon a superior product is Nash.

No manufacturer has finer facilities to produce fine cars than Nash. None lays down any more rigid standards for materials and craftsmanship. None has learned how to build with more skill and precision, or with less waste.

This must be very evident to anyone who knows fine motor cars and who studies the Nash "400."

The Twin-Ignition Eight, the Twin-Ignition Six, and the Single Six represent three cars in three popular price fields as fine as money can build or buy, designed by an engineering staff recognized by the motor car industry as one of the most capable in the profession.

$431,636,454 in Gasoline Taxes Collected in 1929

Average State Fee Was 3.22 Cents, as Compared to 3 Cents in 1928.

The 48 States and the district of Columbia collected $431,636,454 in taxes on the sale of 13,400,180,062 gallons of motor fuel in 1929, the Bureal of Public Roads reports. This includes a 12-month collection in 46 States and the District of Columbia, a five-month collection in Illinois, and the collections of eigtht months in New York. Illinois and New York were the last states to adopt this method for part payment of the highway bill. The pioneer states—Oregon, Colorado, North Dakota and New Mexico—led the way in 1919. Now all the others have followed, but the tax did not become effective in New York until May 1 and in Illinois until Aug. 1.

The average fee per gallon was 3.22 cents as against 3 cents in 1928. In the course of the year 20 states increased the rate of taxation either one or two cents. The highest tax per gallon was 6 cents, the lowest 2 cents. At the close of the year, three states had a 6-cent tax; eight a 5-cent tax; 19 a 4-cent tax; one, Utah, a 3½-cent tax; 10 a 3-cent tax; and seven states and the District of Columbia a 2-cent tax.

In 1929 the rate per gallon was increased one cent in Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Kansas, Minnesota, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Vermont, Washington and Wyoming; 2-cent increases became effective in Georgia, Louisiana, Montana, Nebraska, Tennessee and Texas.

Comparison of the total number of vehicles registered in 1929, with the total tax collected and with the taxable gallonage in all states (except New York and Illinois) and in the District of Columbia shows an average tax revenue of $17.72 per vehicle and an average purchase of 532 gallons of gasoline.

Historic Blue Ridge Mountains Included In Eastern Motor Trip

from Richmond over U. S. Highway No. 1, the historic Lee Memorail Highway, marked every mile or so with roadside tablets readable by the passing motorist describing the historic phases of the region through which the visitor is passing.

The great improvement in the mountain roads, the spectacular view in the gorge of the Kanawha River, the scene of Cabin Creek and other West Virginia coal-mining activity, the rolling bluegrass meadows of Kentucky and the marvelous state of agricultural development of the aristocratic Shenandoah Valley were outstanding features of the trip the St. Louisans took, to say nothing of the northwest blizzards that mired them in snow in Central Illinois on the way home.

Thrills in Cumberland Gap.

On the trip to Washington the party got its first Appalachian Mountain thrill as they climbed to the notch of Cumberland Gap, just a few miles out of Middlesboro, Ky. A light rain had been falling since early in the morning and the roads were still a little slippery. The ascent wound steadily in and out among the shoulders of the Cumberland range and finally came to the divide between two peaks that towered high in the sky.

The gap itself was shrouded in rain clouds and it was possible to see up the slope on each side only when an occasional rift in the cloud would lighten up the horizon. The feeling of great height was intensified on the trip downward and similar openings in the cloud through which the cars were moving disclosed views of the valley below. A slow moving freight laboring over a heavy grade, the precipitous drop over the side, the narrow ribbon of road discernible far below, here and there a distant mountaineer's home all contributed to a sense of adventure fraught with a note of danger.

This adventure was repeated time after time as the Alleghanies and Blue Ridge Mountains were traversed. One received a different sensation as the route passed over ground hallowed by historic events of the Civil War.

At Appomattox, Va., where the war came to an end with the surrender of Lee to Grant, April 9, 1865, are tablets marking the position of the armies. The McLean House stands there, where Lee surrendered his sword.

Lee's Famous Retreat Marked.

Position after position of Lee's famous retreat are marked on the Jefferson Davis Memorial Highway from Roanoke to Richmond; and north of Richmond itself are marked the progressive steps of Lee's strategy where he defeated the Armies of the Potomac, making military history, which Richmond is replete with objects and buildings of historical interest. The Capitol of the Confederacy is there, now the State Capitol of Virginia, in the rotunda of which stands the only statue of George Washington, which was viewed and approved by Washington himself.

The historic road markers excite the curiosity and admiration of everyone. One marks the spot near which the battle of Yorktown was fought in the Revolution, and in the vicinity of the James River, crossed by the Lee Highway, one of the markers even mentions the original John Smith of Colonial history.

The Missouri party decided before leaving Virginia to take photographs of some of the markers. Imagine their surprise on stopping their car near Winchester to find themselves on the spot in the Shenandoah Valley where Gen. Sheridan uttered his famous "Turn, boys, turn; we're going back."

On the whole, road marking in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky does not equal the standards set in Missouri and Illinois. However, the markings are sufficiently adequate to prevent the driver from missing his route. Mountain roads are wide, in many critical places wide enough for three and even four cars abreast, and a further improvement has been the elimination of many dangerous turns. Necessarily, there are abrupt turns as the highways follow the contour of the divides, but their sharpness has been lessened by many cuts and fills, contributing materially to the safety and comfort of driving. Road engineering has likewise reduced the grades of the mountain routes, so that with few exceptions it is possible to make most of the journey in high gear. At places, where experience has shown second gear to be advisable, there are signs warning the motorist to be on the alert.

Peerless to Build European-Designed Front-Drive Auto

THE Automotive Daily News, a trade publication, says that exclusive rights to manufacture a front-wheel drive automobile of European design, in the United States, have been acquired by the Peerless Motor Car Corporation.

Commenting on the announcement, James A. Bohannon, president of Peerless, is quoted as saying: "The major features of this design permit an unusual adaptation to American motor car manufacturing requirements."

Other American companies were said to have competed for the United States rights to the European front-drive, which is understood to be of French make.

Army Moves on Trucks in Drill At Motor Scool

The ancient maxim that "an army moves on its stomach" should now be changed to read, "An army moves on its trucks." Not only foodstuffs, but all other munitions and supplies, as well as the men themselves, are made mobile in time of war by the motor transport, the importance of which is emphasized by the school of truck maintenance now in progress at Detroit for 20 motortransport officers of the Army Reserve Corps.

Every phase of motor truck efficiency and dependability is being carefully taught and demonstrated in the service school, which is under the direct supervision of Capt. O. M. Brede, who is director of service for General Motors Truck Company. The company's two plants here are being used as vast laboratories for the service men and every resource of the company is utilized to make the course of instruction complete and thorough.

There is a distinct military atmosphere about the school, even to the program itself which announces daily assembly and recall. Each officer was given physical examination upon his arrival, exactly as he would receive when reporting for any other kind of duty.

The school will close with a banquet for officers in attendance and visiting army officers, at which diplomas certifying the proficiency of the student officers will be distributed.

ash Distributer Declares Week-Day Repairs Save Motorists' Time.

Education of the motoring pub to the advantages of week-day tomobile servicing and the econ y of using authorized service ations for all maintenance work the object of a campaign start by Frank C. McDonald, presi nt of the Southwest Nash Co., stributer, among the 10 Nash ealers in St. Louis and the 39 ash dealers in the territory served y his company.

McDonald estimates that if all the time wasted by drivers on undays and holidays waiting to n their cars on wayside greasing acks and "alley repair shops" ould be saved, everyone could ke a good vacation.

"How many scores of cars have ou seen on a nice Sunday, stand g in line at dirty greasing sta ons while the occupants swelter the waiting cars?" he asks. Most people do not realize that hey are spending the most valu ble thing they possess—their leis re time—and at the same time re taking the chance of having heir maintenance work done im roperly and their cars ruined, by mploying this costly and haphaz rd type of service. There is no ay of checking up the amount it sts owners every year to use ayside "facilities as a makeshift r proper automobile servicing, ut the actual cost is enormous.

Urges Service by Specialists.

"It seems logical that the few inutes required to drive a car to good service station on a week ay, and to have the work done xpertly, are used to a better ad antage than precious half hours wasted on holidays. It should be pparent, too, that service work one by specialists is of greater alue than work done by men who ave no interest in the individual utomobile.

"In the case of Nash, for xample, there are 49 specially quipped service stations scattered hroughout the territory, and con enient to every Nash owner. At he Southwest Nash Co. we have eveloped one of the most com plete service clearing houses in he country to supply genuine Nash parts, materials and central zed maintenance, and to supply it more swiftly and expertly than any independent station. Every man employed, both in the central sta ion and throughout the Nash ter itory, is factory trained in his work, uses factory-made Nash pre ision tools in all operations, is supplied constantly with carefully roved methods of procedure and improvements in operation, and his work is checked after each op ration. Traveling supervisors are n the road at all times instruct ing Nash dealers and mechanics in approved Nash maintenance meth ods. Parts experts have as their sole job the inspection of dealer stocks and making certain that every authorized Nash service sta ion has a sufficient supply of genuine Nash parts, the proper tools and facilities.

Facilities of Southwest Nash.

"Nowhere in St. Louis can service operations be cared for more swiftly and the car owner returned his car more quickly than at the Southwest Nash building. Facilities are so arranged that the owner nee is only to bring his car inside the service entrance, where he is met by a ourteous doorman, who records his aintenance order and reads it back to him aloud to prevent any mistakes. The car is then turned over to one of the service salesmen, who tests it swiftly, and in a few minutes gives the owner an exact estimate, under the 'Nash Standard Rate' system, of the cost. The same quick service applies when the owner calls for his car or when, after waiting in the comfortable customers' waiting room, he receives his car from the quick service department. The station is so arranged that all cars on the floor can be moved freely and all unnecessary delays are eliminated."

The modernized equipment in the Southwest Nash station includes complete machine shop, lathes, drills, presses, blacksmith shop and metal and paint departments, McDonald pointed out.

Use Authorized Service Stations McDonald Urges

Nash Distributer Declares Week-Day Repairs Save Motorists' Time.

Education of the motoring public to the advantages of week-day automobile servicing and the economy of using authorized service stations for all maintenance work is the object of a campaign started by Frank C. McDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Co., distributer, among the 10 Nash dealers in St. Louis and the 39 Nash dealers in the territory served by his company.

McDonald estimates that if all of the time wasted by drivers on Sundays and holidays waiting to run their cars on wayside greasing racks and "alley repair shops" could be saved, everyone could take a good vacation.

"How many scores of cars have you seen on a nice Sunday, standing in line at dirty greasing stations, while the occupants swelter in the waiting cars?" he asks. "Most people do not realize that they are spending the most valuable thing they possess—their leisure time—and at the same time are taking the chance of having their maintenance work done improperly and their cars ruined, by employing this costly and haphazard type of service. Change Your Oil Filter Cartridge Every 10,000 Miles

After this mileage the filtering unit ceases to function as it has become filled with dirt, sludge and abrasive material taken from the oil. Replacing the cartridge every 10,000 miles means saving in wear, less frequent repair bills and real oil economy as the motor oil can be used for 2000 miles or more.

Southern Firm Buys Trucks for Local Operations

Chevrolet Head Sees Expansion Of Auto Market

W. L. Knudsen, on Visit Here, Declares Buying Limit Has Not Been Reached.

Of the many officials of automobile companies who have visited St. Louis since Jan. 1, none perhaps has taken a more optimistic view of conditions in the industry than W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co., who, with H. J. Klingler, general sales manager, were in St. Louis yesterday.

W. S. KNUDSEN

Contrary to reports that have been current since the stock market crash early last winter, that automobile production would be limited sharply this year, Knudsen declared that the market is still expanding.

"Any notion that the annual absorptive capacity of the public will remain at 5,000,000 cars or thereabouts does not take into full consideration the vital position of the automobile in modern life," he declared. "Neither does it reckon with the steadily increasing buying power of a larger number of persons."

H. J. KLINGLER

Klingler, in direct contact with the market, said: "We expect to sell more cars this year than last. According to our schedules, 1930 will be the fourth consecutive year to see Chevrolet produce and sell more than 1,000,000 units."

Knudsen and Klingler conferred with A. W. O. Gilpin, regional manager of Chevrolet here, and C. E. O'Meara, zone manager. He also called on several dealers in St. Louis. They have been on a tour of Middle Western states.

Studebaker Roadster Establishes Record In German Run

Studebaker's famous President eight supplied further evidence of its championship performance recently by establishing a new record for the run between Riga, Latvia and Koenigsberg, Germany, according to A. R. Lindburg, Studebaker-Erskine distributer here.

Driving a stock President roadster, Peter Auseklis, Studebaker-Erskine dealer in Latvia, made the journey between Riga and Koenigsberg over rough roads in four hours and 50 minutes, 25 minutes faster than the previous record. Both time of departure and arrival were carefully checked at Riga and Koenigsberg.

In recognition of this feat, the International Association at Paris, European high court on automotive records, officially certified this new record of the car, while local automobile clubs also accorded their recognition.

Milstrand Appoints Dodge Dealer in West Florissant

The appointment of the West Florissant Motor Sales, 5617-19 West Florissant avenue, as a new Dodge and Plymouth dealer is announced by Joseph A. Schlecht, secretary of the Milstrand Motor Co., Dodge Brothers distributer.

William Steinbruegge, the proprietor, has been in the automobile business for the last nine years, during which he has sold other makes of cars, developing a considerable clientele in his community.

Within the next few weeks, he expects to break ground for a new building at the same address, which will be provided with a large show room, shops and garage for the convenience of Plymouth and Dodge owners.

Grim Warnig to Motorists.

A big "accident meter" has been erected at a busy intersection of Wilmington to assist in a campaign to "Make Delaware Safe." On the sign is recorded the number of fatal accidents in the State for the previous day, the week, and the year, carrying a warning to automobile drivers to slow down.

Success of Newest Marmon Product Seen in Demand

First announced nationally less than a month ago, the new Marmon-Roosevelt straight eight has met immediate public approval and acceptance, according to many reports received at the Marmon factory from Marmon distributers and dealers.

The Marmon-Roosevelt is a new model of the first straight-eight ever produced to sell in the $1000 field, having been improved and refined after a close analysis of the performance of the car and the experience of thousands of owners over a period of a year.

Little more than a year ago, Marmon had the distinction of presenting the first straight eight in the low-price classification. Unusually successful not only from the standpoint of sales volume but from the standpoint of service and performance, this car proved the feasibility of offering straight-eight advantages to a vast number of motorists who previously found price an obstacle to the purchase of an eight.

Concrete Highway Will Aid Development of Cuba

ARCHITECTURALLY attractive and built to resist tropical freshets, this bridge was constructed by a firm of American road engineers in the foothills of Oriente Province in Eastern Cuba. The task of constructing the Cuban paved highway is one of the most formidable of its kind in the history of road-making.

Cuba Is Fertile Country.

Cuba is a land of great beauty and fertility; almost every feature of the republic is disclosed by a tour of the highway. When Warren Brothers Co. took hold of the job, it was necessary to develop new rock quarries or enlarge existing ones, providing owners of Cuban quarries with increased funds and equipment. It was necessary to import sand from various parts of the island, to bring in from the United States bout $2,500,000 of mechanical equipment, including heavy trucks, gasoline shovels, dragline tractors, rock crushers, road rollers, concrete mixers, paving plants and other accessories. The operation of these machines required vast fuel supplies.

In the eastern half of Oriente Province approximately 25,000 gallons of gasoline was consumed each week in operating Warren Brothers Co.'s machinery there. In the whole province the consumption of gasoline amounted to probably twice as much. But a big gasoline shovel does the work of 200 men and is kept going night and day. The wear and tear on trucks and machines is enormous. Hence large modern machine shops where almost every part of a truck, automobile, or huge gasoline shovel can be rebuilt or made new were established. About the only parts of a big truck which cannot be made right on the ground are the steel gears used in the transmission. The highway is death on machinery of all sorts; immense masses of hard rock must be transported from the heavy cuts into the hills, while the heavy fills across depressions often demand great rock embankments. But under the present system it is unnecessary to wait for days or even weeks before a broken part can be secured from the United States or Havana.

The greatest advantage of the highway will undoubtedly be the improved communications between the country districts and Cuban towns. Even now bus lines, perambulating grocery stores, school busses and light trucks are seen on completed sections. Heavy trucks are now plying into Havana from the completed sections near Pinar del Rio. Cars filled with American sightseers on a day's jaunt are a familiar sight.

The road is expected to attract many tourists. Already cars with license plates of many American states are seen on the highway out of Havana and Matanzas. Duty on touring cars spending three months in the islands is free: a bond is required for an additional three months.

Automobiles can be transported from Key West, terminal of the Atlantic Coastal Highway, in 6 hours, for $17.50 one way or $32 round trip when accompanied by a chauffeur or owner. The Cuban Government is planning to install its own ferries and lower this rate. The road will introduce Americans to an unknown land.

In the Eastern section, in the Cobre Mountains, I found the climate invigorating. Double blankets were required at night. I have always found cool nights in Cuba due to the condensation of moisture evaporated in the daytime. Here are unsurpassed vistas for 30 or 40 miles: wild oranges, annonas and other fruit trees; thousands of blossoms fill the air with fragrance. One sees dozens of wild guinea hens and gaily colored parrots. Coffee plantations are established in the hillside forests without ever cutting the larger growth. Sometimes when you think you are gazing above a primeval mountain jungle, the bushes will move and a Cuban child will be staring at you. The mountain people live in small thatched shacks. In some of these the floors consist of compacted earth. The roofs are made of the fronds of the royal palm which is protected by the Cuban Government.

Santiago de Cuba is so interested in the new highway that many of the principal citizens, backed by one of the leading newspapers, are planning a great suburban resort on the picturesque bluffs overlooking the entrance to the harbor, near the famous old fort, which was bombarded by Admiral Sampson's fleet during the Spanishritory through which the road

Post-Dispatch Highway Maps Made Available

THE Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch has for distribution an excellent 50-page auto trails atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada, showing the condition and numbers of highways and mileage between towns. The price is 50 cents and 60 cents, if mailed.

St. Louis and vicinity maps show all towns, roads, rivers, streams, lakes and other details within a radius of 50 miles of St. Louis. They sell for 20 cents, 24 cents if mailed. Individual State maps are 10 cents, and 12 cents mailed.

City guides giving the location of streets and street car and bus lines, churches, hospitals, theaters, office buildings and containing a map of the city, sell for 25 and 30 cents.

Maps of St. Louis and the suburbs, showing the streets of St. Louis, East St. Louis, Madison, Venice, Clayton, Ferguson, Kirkwood, Webster Groves and University City, sell for 40 and 45 cents.

American War. They have already built a road and cleared the site.

Contrary to a general impression the highway does not traverse the vast expanses of jungle and forest with which interior Cuba is supposed to abound. The country is mostly open with beautiful valleys filled with royal palms and sugar and tobacco estates, or pasture lands dotted with live oaks and palms. Even the wild country often has the look of a beautiful park; sometimes hundreds of thousands of royal palms skirt the ter-passes. The land is almost always rolling and most of the time hills or mountains are beheld in the distance. Only in the mountains do you ordinarily find the great forests of gigantic trees. I saw railway ties of mahogany of which there are several varieties. The small towns have been greatly improved, with concrete sidewalks, sewers and culverts. The highway which forms the main street is widened as it passes through the town. Stores and houses have been painted and rebuilt. In some of the larger towns side streets have been paved. Near one town Warren Brothers Co. have built a drain of concrete, four feet square and ¾ of a mile long to carry away surface water which otherwise might cover the streets.

In Eastern Cuba one sees old-fashioned towns where all the homes are constructed with thatched roofs and heavy walls of sun-dried brick. Very substantial and picturesque are these settlements set off with profusions of climbing roses and flowers.

As soon as the "job" in one section is completed the machines leave for the next. Often concentrated effort is applied to short areas. There have been short spots along the highway in Eastern Cuba where the ground expands and contracts 25 per cent. There are other spots of thick gumbo clay, which becomes an almost impenetrable elastic muck under rain, and parts into huge cracks in the dry season. The right of way in these areas has been excavated down to bedrock, sometimes 25 feet, and filled with rock and gravel. The approaches to the bridges I inspected in Oriente Province were of solid reinforced concrete extending clear down to bedrock. The massive piers also extended down beneath the surface soil to bedrock. All the highway bridges less than 100 meters are of reinforced concrete and those in excess are of steel.

Predicts Every Motor Car Body Will Be All-Steel in Two Years

Within the next two years all automobile bodies will be built entirely of steel, in the opinion of R. T. Hodgkins, general sales manager of Durant Motors, who paid a flying visit to St. Louis Thursday.

"The reason for this is the mile-a-minute speed that has come into vogue," he declared. "Cars must be built to meet this requirement of speed. Safety is essential, and the all-steel body is one of the greatest safety factors now present in motor cars. We all know it isn't right to go so fast, but we all do it, and the factories are trying to meet the situation.

"Durant engineers built the first all-steel body while with Dodge Brothers, and have made many refinements since."

Hodgkins was optimistic over business conditions, particularly the automobile business. American people, he asserted, have learned to depend on individual transportation, and consequently automobiles will continue to be sold in ever-increasing numbers.

"In New England business is excellent. We have sold more cars in Boston in the past month or two than ever before. Washington, D. C., is prosperous, what with huge sums being built for Government buildings and departments being expanded. In Pittsburg I found the best condition that has existed in four years. There is no great depression in Cleveland and Cincinnati. St. Louis, so far as I can tell, is not suffering greatly.

"The farmers are getting back to normal, after several bad years. This is shown by increases in the sale of implements. More roads are being built, and the farmers must have automobiles."

April orders for new passenger cars, Hodgkins declared, are surpassing factory capacity. Of the total number of Durants made, he said, 25 per cent are exported.

He was informed by W. S. Cook, Durant district manager here, that the St. Louis territory has shown a decided improvement in the last few weeks, several strong distributors having been added to the organization. The percentage of demand for de luxe models is running way ahead of last year's demand, he said.

A. B. Clapp, Memphis, Tenn., distributer, was here to confer with Hodgkins, who is making a general tour of the Middle West.

'Red Rocket' Cars To Be Demonstrated To Driving Public

A number of new series Pontiac big sixes will be placed at the disposal of St. Louis mortor car drivers on Thursday, the first day of an informal demonstration campaign, which is to continue through April 30.

The demonstration Pontiacs are identified by large, red rockets painted on their sides. Daily these cars will be stationed in front of all local Oakland-Pontiac show rooms, with a driver at the wheel ready on a moment's notice to demonstrate the eager response, exceptional flexibility and improved riding comfort of the new series Pontiac.

The plan is sponsored on the theory that the average motorist, although greatly interested in the capabilities and performance of various automobiles, hesitates to ask for a demonstration.

"The average motorist frequently imagines that he is contracting some sort of obligation when he accepts a demonstration ride," E. A. Hatfield, president of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., Oakland-Pontiac distributer. "This is not the case, and in order to prove this fact to such individuals, we have placed the Red Rocket Pontiacs at their disposal. All they are required to do is to step up to a Red Rocket driver and say, 'I want a ride.'"

Light Warns Airmen.

A vertical safety headlight for trains has been proposed in Columbus, O. This light, the beam of which would extend perpendicularly for 700 or 800 feet, would be visible in the sky for a long distance.

Window Wings Keep Out Dust

Whirling blasts of air, draughts, dust, insects and rain, heretofore troublesome to occupants of closed cars, have been eliminated by window wings of plate glass, adjusted to swing outward, laterally. Fixity of position is maintained by tension screws. This accessory—Bifiex Window Wings — was introduced this season by the Bifiex Products Co. of Waukegan, Ill. It is distributed locally by F. S. Wiemeyer Co., Inc., 2625 Locust street.

Tax High in China.

A tax of $100 per month is imposed on all owners of motor vehicles in Shensi, one of the interior provinces of North China. The monthly license is good on only one of the three roads; if two roads are to be used by the same car an additional license must be taken out. Gasoline costs more than $17 a gallon.

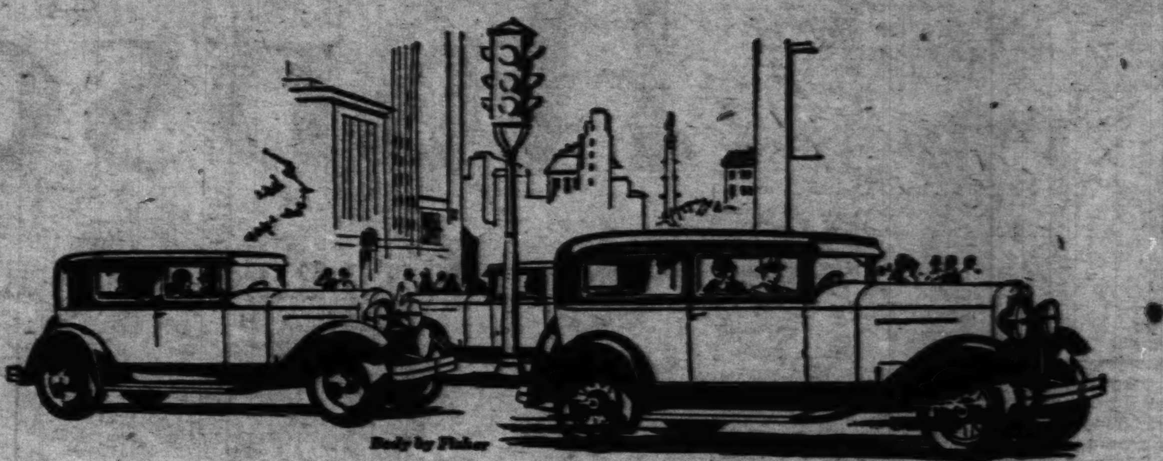
ALL 'ROUND
PERFORMANCE



So many owners say that one of the greatest things about Oldsmobile is its superb all 'round performance—the efficiency, ease, and smoothness with which it does everything they require.

And these owners know. They know from long experience in driving Oldsmobile over all roads, under all conditions. They know from having placed their confidence in Oldsmobile and finding it worthy.

Why not check this important quality for yourself—to substantiate what owners have told you?

Get behind the wheel, and put Oldsmobile through the hardest tests. Try it on the hills. See how smoothly, eagerly, and capably it takes every grade—how readily it responds to the controls at all times.

Try it on the straightaway—some long, level stretch where you can open the throttle wide—if you are enthusiastic about keen, exhilarating speed. Note especially the remarkable smoothness with which Oldsmobile's big high-compression engine delivers its power.

And then, going to the opposite extreme, try Oldsmobile in congested traffic. See how quickly it answers a touch on the accelerator. How easy it is to turn and stop. How comfortable to drive under the least comfortable of conditions.

Having tested Oldsmobile in every phase of performance, you will know why Oldsmobile owners speak of their cars with such real appreciation. You will know why Oldsmobile has earned a reputation for doing all things well. You will know that here is a car you can depend on to serve you capably and faithfully—always.

At St. Louis Airfields

LAMBERT-ST. LOUIS FIELD is rapidly taking on the appearance of a first-class airport. With the grading and filling practically completed there is now available approximately 360 acres of level landing area. Cold Water Creek, which formerly bisected the landing area, is in a new channel and the former creek bed has been filled and leveled. The newly graded section at the far side of the field is still unavailable in wet weather, but is rapidly being worked into shape under the direction of Field Manager Parks.

25,654 by Air in Year.

During the first year of operation terminating March 31, Southwest Air Fast Express, the St. Louis to Dallas airline, carried 25,654 passengers without a fatality, according to a report by Erle P. Halliburton, president of the company.

The 10 tri-motored planes of the company were flown a total of 84,649 miles during the period. The daily distance flown at present is about 3800 miles. Property owned by the company is valued at $1,000,000, and its personnel numbers 100, including 30 pilots. The increase in traffic under the new cheap rate is shown by the company's record of 223 passengers during the first month of operation, and 4313 last month.

Maj. Robertson Returns.

Maj. William B. Robertson returned home last week from a trip to Washington and Montreal, Que., where he demonstrated the new twin-engined Kingbird, which is made at the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co. here. The Kingbird was enthusiastically received in Canada, where in a test flight it displayed an ability to climb with but one engine in operation, and attained an altitude of 5,000 feet with a normal passenger load. At Washington the ship was flown by Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison, Gen. James Fechet, Chief of the Army Air Corps, Commander R. K. Turner of the Navy and Col. Turner of the Marines.

Flying Student to Enter Army.

Carl R. Kaye, a transport student in the Universal Flying School, has been selected by the school management as a candidate for appointment to the army's advanced flying school at Kelly Field. The appointment comes as the result of an experiment started by the War Department to accept as cadets 10 transport graduates from approved schools. Kaye expects to go to Kelly Field within several weeks for a four months' course in military aeronautics. If he successfully completes the course, he will be permitted to apply for active duty as Second Lieutenant of the Air Corps. His home is in Milwaukee.

Mechanics Course Lengthened.

Billiards 296-Foot Shot.

That airport runways may be put to other uses than takeoffs and landings was shown last Wednesday, when Charles Peterson, billiard expert, drove a billiard ball a distance of 296 feet along a runway at the new Curtiss-Steinberg Field. Peterson used a regulation cue and made the long shot to settle a dispute among customers at his billiard hall.

Building Racing Plane.

Ben Howard, pilot for the Universal Aviation Corporation, is building a small racing plane, which he thinks will attain a speed of 200 miles an hour with a light Gipsy engine. The plane will have a wing span of 19 feet and will weigh 900 pounds loaded. It is being built by Howard during his spare time at the Von Hoffmann Flying School. He expects to test the ship in July.

Erskine on Record Run Lubricated With Pennzoil

That lubrication is an important factor in test runs was demonstrated again when a five-passenger Erskine sedan established a new stock car record of 10 minutes, 44 seconds, up the twisting 7.1-miles course of Mount Baldy, near Pomona, Cal. The Erskine's speedy ascent shattered by 56 seconds the fastest time ever made by any other stock car over the course, and in recognition of this feat it has been awarded the Pomona Progress Bulletin Trophy for the fastest time up the mountain by a strictly stock automobile. The Erskine was lubricated with Pennzoil.

ELMER McDONALD, the "Old Timer," is back with KMOX after two months touring 14 states and singing over 26 stations. He and Jacquinot Jules, organist, are broadcasting a request program daily, from 12:30 a. m. to 1:30. The Vagabonds will assist in this program, which is slated for 7:45 p. m., Tuesdays and Sataurdays. After several weeks on KMOX, the plan is to put it on the Columbia Chain. • • • Margo Clark, pianist, and Lydia Lee, "blues" singer, will do a "Cracker Box" program from 4 to 4:15 p. m. Fridays. • • • France Laux, who announced the ball games from KMOX last year, will again be at Sportsman's Park, beginning Tuesday • • • "The Village Choir" travesty, broadcast last week at 9:30 Wednesday night will be heard at the same hour Thursday nights. • • • William Garrison, tenor of Marion, Ill., who has been singing over WEBQ, Harrisburg, Ill., has joined the station staff. • • • Andy McKinney, a singing organist formerly at the Grand Central and other movie houses, is another station staff member. The signature songs for three programs on NBC networks have given up because of demands by copyright owner. The A. & P. Premiere of Opera By Kansas Man On KSD Thursday

"Suite Primeval," "American Indian Fantasie," "The Guardian Angel," and an opera, "Kalopin," the libretto for "The Sun Bride" was written by Mrs. Lillian White Spencer of Denver, author of several books on Indian poetry.

"The Sun Bride" is based on the religious beliefs of the Indians of pre-historic Pueblo Bonito, in Arizona, who were sun-worshipers. The story concerns the loveliest of the tribal maidens, set aside as the bride of the Sun. She is kept in seclusion in a sacred building, and is seen only by the cacique, or chief priest, and her attendant maidens. At nights she is permitted to walk on the flat roof of the sacred building.

Bluefeather, a Navajo, expelled from his tribe for gambling, wanders into the Pueblo early one morning and hears the Sun Bride pouring out her heart in song. He becomes infatuated with her, though she does not see him, and he invokes the aid of the Chameleon, the god of gambling, to win her.

Bluefeather leaves the Pueblo unobserved, but returns later in the day and is welcomed by the tribe. A peal of thunder, is interpreted by the Cacique as a good sign, and Bluefeather is accepted as an honored guest.

The Navajo invites the other Indians to gamble with him. He is lucky and soon wins everything of value in the Pueblo. Then he demands the Sun Bride. She appears on the roof of the sacred building and warns him to depart. as she is sacred to the Sun God. He disregards the warning and climbs the steps to reach her. As he reaches out his arms, a flash of lightning strikes him dead. The Sun Bride returns to seclusion and the opera ends with the Sunrise Hymn.

The solos and choruses of the opera are based on tribal melodies of the Southwest. Included in the opera is the "Hymn to the Rising Sun," the "Song of the Corn Grinders," and the "Dance of Welcome."

Astrid Fjelde will sing the title role, and Bluefeather will be sung by Judson House. Earl Waldo will sing the part of the Cacique, while Theodore Webb will take the role of a young chief. The role of the girl has been assigned to Rosalee Wolfe, and Devora Nadworney will sing the part of a woman of the Pueblo.

The broadcast of "Parsifal" is to be directed by Cesare Sodero, and is scheduled for 9 o'clock Friday night over KSD. Lewis James, tenor; Theodore Webb, baritone, and the Ealon Singers are to take part in this broadcast. "Parsifal," which is generally regarded as the greatest flowering of Wagner's genius, is full of gorgeous music, among which is the "Good Friday Spell," familiar to concert and radio audiences the world over. One of the finest arias is "The King's Prayer" from this opera, a sonorous song written to bring out the beauties of a baritone voice. It was in the role of Amfortas in "Parsifal" that Clarence Whitehill, the American baritone, won his greatest success at the Metropolitan Opera.

The broadcast of Du Bois' cantata, "The Seven Last Words of Christ," is scheduled for the Armour period over KWK at 8:30 Friday night. The cantata, portraying the last moments of Christ, employs a narrator to describe the scene of the crucifixion. Following this, the Christ begins the seven words with "Forgive them, Father, for they know not what they do." The chorus depicts the crowd and is heard constantly in the background. Barre Hill, operatic baritone; a narrator, and a chorus of 40 voices will present the cantata. Music written by Josef Koestner for this presentation will be heard during the interludes under the composers' direction.

Reinald Werrenrath, the baritone, is to direct the production of Bach's "German Requiem" in a broadcast over KWK at 6:30 Friday night. Astride Fjelde, soprano, and Walter Preston, baritone, will be in the cast. This requiem is not a setting of the mass for the dead, but consists of texts taken from the Old and New Testaments and the Apocrypha. It consigns the departed to peace and glory and comfort and assurance for the living.

A new star, Thelma Kessler, is to sing the role of Musetta in the radio production of "La Boheme" at 6:30 Saturday evening over KSD, when the series of Puccini operas will be concluded. Frances Alda will sing the leading role of Mimi, while Mario Chamlee, Pasquale Amato, James Davies and Frank Chapman will have the other principal parts. Thelma Kessler made her debut as a full fledged star without a previous public performance. Only 19 years old, a Juillard Foundation honor pupil, she won enthusiastic praise from musical experts, gained an audition with Genaro Papi, director of the Puccini opera broadcast series, and was immediately cast as Musetta. Like Marian Talley, she comes from Kansas City.

Winnie Lightner and Joe E. Brown will be starred in a radio adaptation of their latest movie, "Hold Everything," during a Del Monte broadcast over KSD at 7:30 Saturday evening.

Walter Damrosch's orchestra is to play this music in the General Electric Hour over KSD at 8 o'clock Saturday night:

Overture to "The Bartered Bride" .... Smetana
Adagio from "Symphony No. 3 in C" .... Saint-Saens
Istar .... d'Indy
The Garden of Live Flowers, from "Through the Looking Glass" Suite .... Taylor
In Praise of Women—Polka Mazurka .... Johann Strauss

Helen Kane is to be starred in a Paramount-Publix Hour at 9 p. m. Saturday over KMOX.

Unveiling of Statue To 'Pioneer Woman' Will Be Broadcast

Ceremonies at the unveiling of a monument to "The Pioneer Woman" at Ponca City, Ok., on the afternoon of April 22 will be broadcast over an NBC network from 1:30 to 2 p. m.

Among speakers scheduled for the program are Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, Will Rogers, Bryant Baker, who conceived and executed the statue of "The Pioneer Woman;" the Rt. Rev. Thomas Casady, Episcopal Bishop of Oklahoma; Gov. W. J. Holloway of Oklahoma, and E. W. Marland, donor of the monument.

In 1925, Marland commissioned 10 sculptors to prepare models of a statue interpreting the spirit of the pioneer woman of America. Internationally known sculptors submitted models, which were put on exhibition in the art centers of the United States so that the country's opinion could be obtained. Of the 500,000 persons who cast ballots, a majority indicated their preference for Bryant Baker's model and he was commissioned to complete the statue in a 20-foot bronze.

Jessica Dragonette who is singing in the Cities Service concerts over KSD on Friday nights, was born in India. She is five feet two inches tall, weighs barely 100 pounds, has soft blond hair, "plaid" eyes, as she says, and a vivacious expression. She is not tempery, makes books her hobby and writes verse. Several of her poems have been printed and she has written the words for some of the songs she sings over the air.

Davenport, Iowa.

Gentlemen:

I am a Buick Fan. I say this in honest tribute to the memory of that great old Buick sport model 1925 which served me so faithfully in all my years of hard driving until finally with its top tattered and its paint gone, I sadly realized that there was nothing left to do but start looking about for a new car.

On October 12th we bought a Marquette four door sedan. A painstaking check-up had convinced us that the Marquette had the qualities we sought.

The Marquette has all, and more than the qualities claimed for it. It has smooth flowing speed, a brilliant pick-up, is easily handled, and carefully as we have checked it over, shows nothing but the best of material and workmanship. I am more than ever a Buick Fan.

Cordially yours,
Victor V. Allen
Scout Executive.

What's New in Radio Industry

Warner Brothers to Continue Making Brunswick Sets and Beck & Corbitt Will Continue as Distributer—New Small Trav-Ler Set Made in St. Louis —Henshaw-Dudley Co. to Distribute It and Perryman Tubes—Trade Notes.

Making of Brunswick Sets on Larger Scale Planned.

The following telegram has been received by the Beck & Corbitt Co., distributer of Brunswick radio and phonograph products: "On Wednesday, April 9, we acquired the radio, panatrope and record division of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., together with Brunswick trade mark and good will. The present sales, advertising and manufacturing policies will be continued as heretofore, only on a much larger scale, and there will be no change in merchandising or distributing methods."

Another telegram stated: "In the acquisition by Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc. of the radio and music division of Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. there occurs a combination of interests with kindred objectives which, in the nature of things, can not result otherwise that advantageously for our distributers and dealers. The manufacture of radio, panatrope with radio and records will continue aggressively in the same plants, with the same personnel as before. Personally wish to assure you as our distributer and, through you, each of our dealers that this will cause no interruption or interference with your status."

Small Trav-Ler Set Has Big Receiver Performance.

A new small AC radio receiver is being put into production by the Trav-Ler Manufacturing Corporation, of which Harold J. Drape is president. It will be distributed by the Henshaw-Dudley Co., which has moved from 3434 Lindell to 6653 Enright avenue, at the Delmar loop.

This new Tray-ler model is a small, compact AC set, measuring only 16 inches tall, 15 inches wide and about eight inches deep. It has six tubes and a built-in speaker which reproduces with excellent quality. The set can be carried around as easily as any portable, for it weighs only 20 pounds, but it has big set performance. It can be placed on a mantel, on a small table anywhere, and can be used any place where there is AC current. It also may easily be used in an automobile.

The set is solidly constructed, the chassis being on a base of pressed steel, and the cabinet is attractive and well made. The circuit uses three 201a tubes, a 27 type heater tube, a 171a power tube, and a rectifier tube. Production on a large scale and national distribution of the new set are planned.

Henshaw-Dudley Co. Distributes Perryman Tubes.

The Henshaw-Dudley Co. has been appointed distributer of Perryman tubes in the whole Missouri-Illinois territory centering in St. Louis. These tubes, which have been established for some years, have an unusually rigid type of construction. The filament, plate and grid are held in permanent alignment at the point of greatest efficiency by two bridges, at top and bottom.

In addition to the regular line of AC and DC tubes, there are a series of special Perryman tubes designed especially for the use of radio amateurs, including a 210a type for oscillator, and two high voltage mercury vapor rectifying tubes.

Says Suit Does Not Involve New Majestic Speaker.

Commenting on a news dispatch from San Francisco about a decision of the Federal District Court at San Francisco in a suit by the Magnavox Co. for patent infringement involving a certain type of dynamic loud speaker, William C. Grunow, vice president of the Grigsby-Grunow Co. said: "The San Francisco suit was brought against the Frederick H. Thompson Co. of that city, a distributing firm handling Majestic products. Grigsby-Grunow Co., however, is not a party to the suit. We understand that the Thompson company will appeal the decision to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals immediately and obtain a stay of further action pending the appeal. No injunction, however, has been issued against Grigsby-Grunow Co. The suit by the Magnavox Co. was based on an alleged violation of their patents on a certain type of dynamic speaker. The Majestic Colotura dynamic speaker is of an entirely different principle and its design in no way conflicts with that of the Magnavox type speaker."

Radio Bulletin for Schools.

With the idea of helping to increase the value of radio in the schools, the Van Ashe Radio Co. is preparing a weekly bulletin of programs which have an educational value. It is free to schools on request. The firm has transferred John Devereux from the city sales staff to the schools installation department.

Two Homes Without Radio for One With a Set.

"Everybody has a radio set; radio is universal, is the commonly accepted statement heard every day. But it isn't so," says F. E. Basler, general sales manager of the Atwater Kent Co.

For every home equipped with radio, there are two homes without radio. By careful survey, 22,000,000 home owners in the United States are potential purchasers. These facts emerge from statistics presented by Bresler at a recent convention in Philadelphia of Atwater Kent distributers.

Ohio School of the Air Will Close on April 15

Second Year of Broadcasting Over WLW Has Covered More Subjects for More Hours Than Any Other in World.

On April 15 the Ohio School of the Air will complete its second year of broadcasting through WLW. More than 300,000 school children have been authentically reported as regular listeners, and thousands of other children and grown people have listened whose attendance was not officially checked.

During the past school year which began early last October, the Ohio State Department of Education through WLW has furnished an hour of radio education from 1 to 2 p. m. (St. Louis time) every school day and has notified listening schools all over the country of events of national importance that would be broadcast.

The Ohio School of the Air, young as it is, already has broadcast more subjects more hours than any other similar school in the world, Dr. John L. Clifton, State Superintendent of Education, has determined from a study of radio education efforts in England, Germany, Holland and Mexico.

Several Radio Courses.

In the year of broadcasting now being completed, the Ohio School of the Air has presented instruction in chemistry, physics, French, drama, geography, appreciation of art and of literature, and plays, games and stories for little folks.

Advance preparation was urged by the Department of Education for all radio lessons. It was made possible through the Ohio School of the Air Courier, a loose-leaf book of illustrated leaflets with lesson outlines, pictures and biographical sketches of the instructors, sent free in advance to any school in or out of Ohio that desired them.

"In 10 years, what we did in the past two years may look as queer as a 10-year-old dress," Dr. Clifton said once in commenting on the experimenting that his department had done through WLW. "We hope to do much better in the next 10 years. Some schools, too, need better equipment. There are many problems—so many that we employ a research specialist to study them. But the fact that we can solve these difficulties, and are solving them gradually, gives us every faith in the future of radio for schools."

That the teachers of Ohio are of like mind is evidenced by the statement of one superintendent who declares he is convinced that his school gets more returns from its investment in radio receiving sets than from any other piece of equipment in the school.

This view was held by teachers all over Ohio who were questioned in a survey by the Department of Education last summer. They testified that the radio helped children learn more quickly and easily, increased their interest in all school work, added variety to the school day, and gave the teachers many new ideas.

"Uncle Ben" Its Director.

The Ohio School of the Air has been directed throughout its two years by B. H. Darrow, known to the radio audience as "Uncle Ben." Darrow traveled the country for months at his own expense early in 1929 trying to interest educators in broadcasting, and broadcasters in education. Powel Crosley Jr. agreed to give him time on the 50,000-watt station, WLW, when the Ohio State Department of Education agreed to sponsor the series and to supervise the instruction.

The first lesson was broadcast Jan. 7, 1929, by WLW. For several months the School of the Air got along on donated money. At the end of the first semester, the Ohio Legislature unanimously voted an annual appropriation of $20,000 for two years.

Cost Is Low.

But this amount is only a part of the annual expense. WLW's donated time, at station rates, of more than $400 per daytime hour, is worth more than $60,000 for the school year. The Ohio State University station lends its studios for part of the week, and the radio teachers contribute around $10,000 for lower rates for their services.

It has been estimated that the taxpayers' bill for broadcasting amounts to 40 cents a year for each child in Ohio now listening. Incidentally they benefit children in all other States for that price. In time, the Department of Education hopes to have so many radio-equipped schools that the cost will be reduced to eight cents per child.

"The cost of radio education always wil be small in comparison with the hundred dollars the taxpayers now give for a year's school for an average child."

"Perhaps the most significant thing about this contact with big personalities and events," Dr. Clifton said of the school, "is the breakdown of provincialism it makes possible. It gives the children something more than a township mind. It lifts them into the stream of world progress."

First Entrant in Radio Song Contest

Miss Margaretmary Durnin, soprano, daughter of G. M. Durnin, 7447 Cornell place, again is the first Missouri entrant in the Atwater Kent National Radio Audition, according to Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, state chairman, George Junkin, director of KMOX over which the Missouri finals will be held, and state manager of the audition, says Miss Durnin, to his knowledge, is the first 1930 entrant in the United States.

Miss Durnin, who has attended Rosati-Kain High School, the Sacred Heart Convent and Fontbonne College, was the first Missouri entrant last year, was third at the Coliseum in the fall.

Yolande Langworthy, producer of "Arabesque" dramas over the Columbia chain Sunday nights, plays the roles of "Zuweida," "The Duchess" and "Miriam." Frank Knight, a CBS announcer, plays "Dr. Gilbert," while Georgia Backus is the "Myra Loring." Miss Backus also plays "Aphrodite Godiva" in the Nit Wits series. The Arabesque programs draw 2500 letters a week to CBS headquarters in New York.

Radio Checking Station Will Be Completed Soon

With It, Federal Board Will Be Able to Watch 'Wandering' Transmitters.

The Federal Radio Commission's constant-frequency monitoring station near Grand Island, Neb., is soon to be completed. The station will be able to tell any station if it is operating exactly on its assigned frequency.

The measuring apparatus will make measurements accurately to one part in 1,000,000. The primary source of frequency will be that of the earth's rotation derived through the standard time signals of the Naval Observatory at Washington, used as a check upon a master clock at the station, operating in a heat-controlled chamber under vacuum.

An electrically driven tuning fork, controlled by the clock, will serve as a basis for the establishment of the ultimate radio frequencies to be developed. As an alternate, a piezo-electric oscillator will be supplied to perform the same service as the tuning fork. The tuning fork will produce frequencies in such a way that harmonics will be available to every 10 kilocycles throughout the radio frequency spectrum.

The station will be the only one of its kind in the world, and its operation is planned to be of the greatest service to broadcasters and other transmitting stations, 24 hours a day. A long-distance telephone call to the station from any part of the United States will be all that is necessary to get a measurement.

"That First Little Sweetheart of Mine," words and music by Phillips Lord, creator of the Sunday at Seth Parker's radio playlets, has just been published.

THE NEW HUPMOBILES

The skilled mechanic who repairs motor cars has very little reason, professionally, to love Hupmobile. He sees it but seldom . . . in a business way. But this man, who knows the inside of cars better than any other man save the engineer, invariably says of Hupmobile, "It's a great boat!"

He knows its parts are built with watchmaker care. He knows that its materials and workmanship have passed the most rigid engineering standards.

There are some thrilling facts about the new Hupmobiles. Colossal excess power. Dazzling speeds. Performance that makes mountains seem like down-grades and travels through mud and sand as suavely as it runs on macadam.

But the greatest story of Hupmobile is still . . . as always . . . the extra years of faithful service that are under its hood. The mechanical excellence that has ever been the "unwritten trade-mark" of Hupmobile.

Read Why

Smart truck operators never count their costs on purchase price alone—they let miles and time and tons tell the story. And there's where the Special Delivery shows its stuff. Not only low in first cost, but remarkably economical in upkeep and operation. Read the evidence at the right.

These trucks have all the speed and power you'll ever want to use; and they are as good looking as they are sound and sturdy.

The ¾-ton Special Delivery is the popular truck throughout the entire light-hauling field; it is in demand by the bakers, painters and decorators, plumbers, laundries, dry cleaners, candy shops, haberdashers, florists, and fast-delivery men in general. This good-looking, sturdy truck is thoroughly modern in every detail, and you can have it equipped with any kind of body.

Other International models and sizes: the 1-ton Six-Speed Special; Speed Trucks 1¼, 1½, 2 and 3-ton; and Heavy-Duties 2½ to 5-ton. Whatever your hauling needs, come in and give the complete International Line a thorough going-over.

A Typical Testimonial

"Having purchased six competitive trucks previous to the purchase of our seven Internationals, we have had occasion to make a very literal comparison.

"Without hesitation we can say that we have found operating cost at least 20 per cent less, since Internationals have almost entirely eliminated service. After eighteen months of experience with Internationals, we can assure you that our fleet will in a short time be 100 per cent Internationals.

"Yours for continued success,"

Ambassador Dawes Seen Through English Eyes

Unaccountably the Most Inconspicuous American at the Naval Conference, the Ambassador Impresses London With Rough and Ready Efficiency, but Has Yet to Make His Mark as a Polished Diplomat.

LONDON, April 12.

(Copyright, 1930.)

ON one of those blue days of the London Naval Conference, with the chief French delegates gone to Paris for the week-end and nobody knowing whether they would ever come back, visitors to the outer portals of the American headquarters at the Ritz Hotel were astonished to hear sounds of merriment from a distant room. They were strange noises in what had been for the past several days a chamber of gloom. Over the laughter rose a high-pitched voice and the crash of a fist on a table. A shudder of pain crossed the solemn face of a lift attendant. Those Americans!

The American Marine Sergeant on guard duty grinned. "General Dawes," he explained, "is telling the other delegates a story."

On another occasion, when hope for a five-Power treaty flickered at its lowest, the spokesman for the American delegation assured the reporters that General Dawes remained optimistic. Dawes in New Role.

At one time or another every other American delegate has ventured into the conference pool. Stimson, Morrow, Reed and Gibson have repeatedly gone in up to their necks or, as unfriendly critics are saying, over their heads. Joe Robinson, the lone Democratic member, has been in waist deep, and even the retiring Adams has dampened a tentative toe. But General Dawes, who had been expected to make one of the biggest splashes of all, appears to have hung his clothes on a hickory limb and not gone near the water.

Dawes may have felt that the opening of the conference, which followed hard upon the completion of his conversations with Prime Minister MacDonald last year, was the signal for him to efface himself and leave the stage to the new principal negotiator, Stimson. Whatever the reason, he has been throughout the conference the most inconspicuous American participant.

This temporary role of shrinking violet which Dawes has elected or has had thrust upon him by the exigencies of diplomacy is not the role which Londoners, any more than Americans, associate with the name of the former Vice President. Neither social London nor that vastly greater group symbolized by "the man in the street" has yet decided just how to appraise him.

Table Pounding Annoys.

There is general liking for what they call his sturdy Americanism, but some of the more critical will tell you—if you can break through the crust of native English reticence in such matters—that he has not always expressed this Americanism in the happiest manner. These critics are likely to contrast the General with such former Ambassadors as his immediate predecessor, Alanson B. Houghton, and John W. Davis, both of whom, without surrendering any of their character as Americans, were models of impeccable diplomatic deportment.

You will learn that a great many Englishmen, and some Americans, considered that General Dawes' first public speech as Ambassador, delivered at a Pilgrims' Club dinner soon after his arrival, would have been better if accompanied with less table-thumping, and you will hear the opinion in some quarters that his refusal to wear knee breeches when appearing before the King to present his credentials, was an unnecessary gesture of independence.

The view of the average thoughtful Englishman regarding the ebullient General is typified, I believe, by the comment of a shrewd old lady who knows America almost as well as she knows her England. "I like your General Dawes," she said, "but why does he talk so loud and pound the table so hard?"

Errol's Dinner Humor.

General Dawes has introduced into the American Embassy not only a rough-and-ready efficiency which has cut through a deal of red tape, but also some new methods of entertaining his guests. His fondness for showing them moving pictures has become as well known in London as it is in Evanston, Ill. Now and then one of his actor friends does a turn. Will Rogers, for example, was a star attraction during the naval conference. So also, it has recently transpired, was Leon Errol, whose act appears to have been the masterpiece of the General's producing season.

Errol was at an Embassy dinner in his familiar role of a drunken waiter. Some of the British aristocracy's "stickiest" members (as the London expression has it) were among the guests, and another was Princess Beatrice of Spain. Errol's acting was highly realistic; according to one possibly exaggerated version of the story, he gave the final artistic touch to his performance by spilling soup down one of the most aristocratic backs of the company. Princess Beatrice knew of the joke in advance and enjoyed it hugely. Some of those who had not been let into the secret were decidedly not amused, and, even when the joke was pointed out, failed to see it.

"Toned Down a Bit."

Dawes used to be seen frequently at lunch with other Americans at the Cheshire Cheese, a tourist mecca, in Fleet street. He himself was by way of becoming one of the major attractions of the place, like the chair of Samuel Johnson. He has stopped going to the Cheese, and in other respects as well, according to American newspaper correspondents, has "toned down a bit." He still uses, of course, the famous underslung pipe, and at more than one dinner where he has been a guest the chairman has thoughtfully proposed the toast of the King very early in the proceedings. It is the rule over here that smoking may not begin till after this traditional formality has been complied with.

The General has perennially on hand, like all American Ambassadors to Great Britain, the vexatious problem of picking out the American women who are to be presented at court. For each of the limited number of presentations available to the Ambassador, there are twenty or more eager applicants. Many of them have the importunate backing of prom-

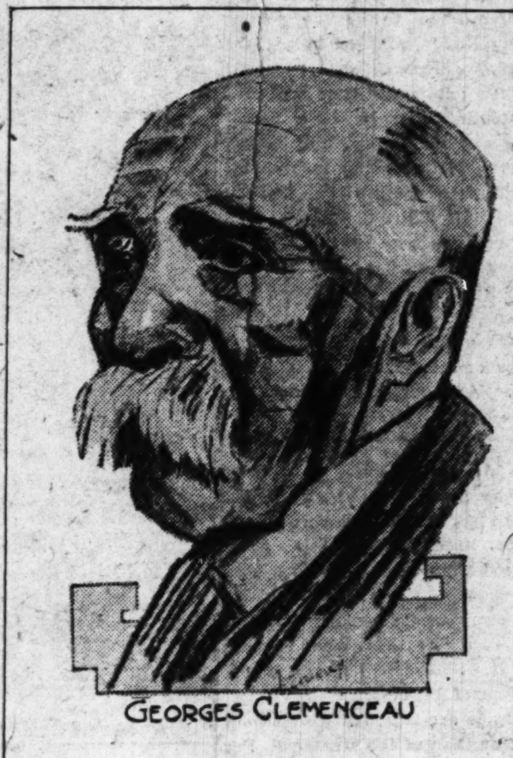
Georges Clemenceau Censures Foch, Chides America, in Farewell Book

"Tiger of France," Racing Death to Complete His Memoirs, Preserves in Them His Savagely Nationalistic Spirit—His Story of Pershing's Disagreement With the High Command Over Immediate Use of U. S. Troops—Friendly Treatment for President Wilson —Former Premier's Views on Post-War Germany and England.

By CARLOS F. HURD
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.



GEORGES CLEMENCEAU

TO THE last moment of his long life, Georges Clemenceau was the Tiger of France.

His book, completed a short time before his death last November, and issued yesterday, voices the savage and single nationalistic spirit which marked the aged Premier in wartime and at the Peace Conference.

"Grandeur and Misery of Victory," a literal rendering of the French title, "Grandeur et Miseres d'Une Victoire," is the name under which the book is issued to English-speaking readers. The translator is F. M. Atkinson, and the American publishers are Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.

Writing in his eighty-ninth year, and in a day-of-judgment mood, Clemenceau has cast up his accounts with contemporary leaders of France, with the world's statesmen whom he knew at Versailles, and with the nations nearest to France in her past vicissitudes and her future problems.

First, Marshal Foch, whom Clemenceau survived by eight months. Here is a strange mingling of affection and resentment. The affection goes back to the time when Foch, selected by Clemenceau to head the War College, frankly informed the implacable old anti-clerical that he had a brother in the Jesuit order. Clemenceau uses a long dash to signify the expression of indifference with which he met this announcement.

Recalls Foch's Promise to Fight All the Time.

And he is grateful to Foch for his deeds in wartime, at the Marne and the Yser. He vows that he cannot forget his gratitude for Foch's words, to a discouraged and hesitant group, "I would fight in front of Amiens, I would fight in Amiens, I would fight behind Amiens, I would fight all the time."

For establishing unity of command, with Foch as Commander-in-Chief, Clemenceau assumes sole credit. No one else would have been considered, he says, but it took insistent pressure to get the consent of the English, Gen. Haig avowing that his only chief was his King. There seems to have been no objection on the part of the Americans, "our excellent Gen. Bliss" approving the move in the name of President Wilson.

Soon after the unification of command came the French disaster of Chemin des Dames, with its implication of neglect on the commander's part and resultant complaints in the Chamber of Deputies. Clemenceau's defense of Foch, at the Chamber's meeting of June 4, 1918, was successful, but, "had I faltered for a single moment, the High Command would have been swept away."

All this gave the Premier a proprietary interest in the High Command, and he deemed it his duty to see that the command functioned properly. The test came when Clemenceau found himself in "a rather serious disagreement with Gen. Pershing." This was about the immediate use of American troops. Clemenceau records that he "laid siege to Gen. Pershing with all my might," and that the General, "with his tight-lipped smile, kept putting things off."

The Power to Order U. S. Troops to Action.

So Clemenceau demanded that Marshal Foch, as Commander-in-Chief, should exercise the full power of his position, as the Premier understood it, to order American troops into action. This matter was in discussion between Foch and Pershing through May, 1918, the Abbeville conference on this and kindred subjects being held May 2. Foch, at this conference, put forth a statement of the matter with which Clemenceau was in full agreement. The difference came afterward, when Clemenceau demanded, and Foch did not make to his satisfaction a complete test of the power of the supreme command.

Nowhere, it is to be noted, does Clemenceau show a disposition to blame Pershing. He recognized Pershing's task and duty to form a self-contained American army; it is not difficult to infer that, were he in Pershing's place, he would have taken the same position which the American commander took. But he was not in Pershing's place—he was acting for France, and seeing the daily appalling losses of the French army, and he expected Foch to see with him, eye to eye. Some of the passages in which Clemenceau describes the Foch-Pershing episode are:

> Pershing persisted in not acting, and Foch in not commanding. And so, to help our soldiers, I had to take it upon myself to say the decisive word to the chief whose will seemed paralyzed. That was the situation summed up in my apostrophe: "Commander, it is our country's command that you command." This might be the decisive word, the word of salvation to bring Foch back to the grim reality. But it frightened M. Poincare, who refused his consent, yet had no advice to give me. I might just go on watching our soldiers fall.
> "The sole command," Foch would say, "is just a phrase. You have to know how to lead the Allies. You must not command them. You must deal with some differently from others. You don't give orders, you make suggestions."
> Who could believe that it is a professional soldier who shows so openly this total failure to grasp the meaning of the supreme command? Where shall we be when, following this wonderful example, officers give up commanding in order to suggest their military views to their subordinates? It seems a dream.

Gen. Pershing Did Not Remember the Order.

> As I never ceased to urge the "sole commander" to give Gen. Pershing the order to put at his disposal one of the American divisions that were ready to go into the front line, he finally told me that he had given a written order to Gen. Pershing, and that the latter had formally refused to obey. I have taken the liberty of consulting Gen. Pershing on this point, and he replied that he had no recollection of it. I have read in a newspaper that Foch went so far as to say that nobody had disobeyed. That is not what he told me of Gen. Pershing. Before forming an opinion we should have to know to what extent he had commanded — I carefully do not say, suggested.
> I did my very best to make everything easy for the organization of the Americans. I do not in the least deny that in a terrible emergency I endeavored to obtain from them the utmost possible total of military output, and that, thanks to the higher authorities, I failed. That is the whole matter at issue between Pershing, Foch and myself.
> The Marshal had the power to command. On his own admission he preferred to suggest. Hence the conflict. * * While Gen. Pershing shut himself up in a passive resistance, Marshal Foch, requested by me to give an order to his subordinate, feared, if he were not obeyed, to find himself embroiled with the American Government. He preferred to make difficulties with me, against whom he would have M. Poincare's support.

In a more irascible tone, Clemenceau chides Foch for published utterances of later years, particularly an interview on the eve of Clemenceau's American tour, with its assertion that Clemenceau had lost the peace, as Wilhelm II lost the war. But throughout, the writer keeps in memory the days when, after tilts of discussion, he and the Marshal would stroll to tea together. Nor has he lost his admiration for Foch as a soldier.

Very different is Clemenceau's attitude toward Raymond Poincare. Here no love had been lost, for on Clemenceau's part there was none to lose. A sardonic chapter tells of the ill-starred plan of Poincare, seconded by Foch, for an independent Rhineland Republic, a scheme in which, Clemenceau relates, he did not concur, even incurring censure by his indifference to it.

Briand "Leading Light of French Defeatism."

Briand is pictured as "the leading light of French defeatism," in its post-war development of "abandoning the treaty, a policy that has deprived us of the boon of reparations," and Poincare as his abetter. Caillaux and Malvy, in disfavor in wartime but since rehabilitated, are the subjects of contemptuous expressions.

In discussing the Versailles Treaty, and the attitude which he thinks necessary toward Germany, in distinction from the concessions made to that country, Clemenceau takes an attitude of implacable French nationalism. But first, apparently, he seeks to forestall the criticisms of those who will say that he is living in a past atmosphere of hatred, and that he is insensible to modern movements for world fellowship and understanding.

To meet this inevitable charge, Clemenceau seeks to show that he is quite familiar with the outward form, at least, of the movement for international friendship. He would join in its spirit, he says in effect, if his com-

Striking Phrases From Memoirs of Clemenceau

WHEN Col. Stanton, arriving to join the fight, hastened to the graveyard of Picpus to utter the far-reaching cry, "Lafayette, we are here!" it was a sword he brandished in the sunlight, and not a schedule of payments.

I desire nothing so much as a state of stable equilibrium in Europe. But I must be able to preceive some sign of favorable response to the good will that I am asked to manifest. Judge then of my surprise when I find that Germany goes on arming and France disarming.

America has broken us in the economic sphere for an indeterminate time. What can we expect from an ideologist whose ideology has run dry, who most generously gives his blood and then seeks compensations in cash?

America, prodigiously enriched by the war, is presenting us with a tradesman's account that does more honor to her greed than to her self-respect.

The winning of the victory prompted your President (Wilson) to try to insure a universal peace forever. All or nothing, he seemed to say. Friends, that is no motto for human creatures.

It must be clearly recognized that it was the collapse of the German soldier's resistance that brought about the revolution in Berlin, with all its consequences, and not the civil revolution that brought about the military revolution, as it has vainly been attempted to establish.

Britain Needs Firm Leadership At Home in Crisis of Empire's Destiny, Lloyd George Declares

Garrison for Suez Canal Only Real Obstacle in Egyptian Independence—Palestine a Statesman's, Not a Soldier's Job.

By David Lloyd George,
War-Time Premier of England.

(Copyright, 1930)

LONDON, April 12.

THE great empires have been laboring heavily in the swelling seas which have followed the war. France has had to undertake two considerable expeditions to quell insurrections in her territories in Syria and Morocco. Russia has by methods of barbarism restored order out of turbulence and distraction. The British Empire is still steering its barque through the broken seas.

At home there is chronic unemployment—Ireland has settled down under the treaty—but far across the seas there is trouble in India, Egypt and Palestine.

In facing these riches of embarrassment—to invert the phrase—the grit and resources of the British race will be put to such a trial as it has hardly ever yet been called upon to endure. It is true that the sacrifices entailed for Britain in working a way through this sea of trouble will not be comparable to those it has only just made in a quarrel which was not its own. But they come when the Empire has not yet recovered from its exhaustion and when the burdens of the last effort are weighing down its strength. Still I feel assured that the spirit of the nation is quite equal to the demand made upon its courage and resourcefulness. Everything will depend on the lead which the Government at home gives in this crisis of the Empire's destiny. The people of all parties will respond without hesitation to any call however stern. If the men at the head of affairs are firm, the nation will not shrink whatever the cost may be. The British people have no intention of dropping the reins of empire because some of the steeds are restless. This generation at least means to cling to its imperial chariot and drive it right through.

Egypt and the Canal.

Egypt presents no insuperable difficulties. It has always been understood that our occupation of that country was to be temporary. Gladstone, when he overthrew Arabi Pasha in 1882, promised that the British army would remain no longer than was necessary to restore order and establish the Government of Egypt on a sound basis. His successor, Lord Salisbury, solemnly repeated the undertaking. The delay in fulfilling the pledge has been due to special difficulties which had to be surmounted, some financial and economic, others attributable to the Mahdist rebellion in the Sudan which was at one time so formidable as to constitute a grave threat to the frontiers of Egypt itself. And then came the great war with its menace of a Turkish reconquest itself. The Turks, under German direction, marched their forces almost to the banks of the Suez Canal. Had they succeeded in establishing themselves on that vital waterway, our communications with India through the Mediterranean would have been cut off. The peril of such a catastrophe has been impressed deeply on the British mind by this Turkish raid, and no settlement of the Egyptian question will be acceptable which does not provide for an adequate garrison for the protection of the canal. Subject to this provision, there ought to be no invincible obstacle in the way of arranging a treaty which will guarantee the independence of Egypt.

Egypt has prospered greatly under the British rule. It has not enjoyed such a prolonged period of tranquillity and leaping prosperity since the greatest days of the Roman government of the famous land. If the negotiations now pending are successful, Egypt will enjoy the first experience of national independence since the days of the Pharaohs. It will certainly be the first time in a long and varied history that it will ever have attained a free and democratic self-government. Britain has by successful administration and development to Egyptian resources during the past half century given the kingdom a fair and favorable start.

Firm Hold on Sudan.

As to the Sudan, Britain has no intention of abandoning its hold of this vast territory. It was conquered by British troops. It has been administered since by British brains. The Sudanese contend that the Egyptian occupation was a record of oppression, rapacity, cruelty and ineptitude. Hence the Mahdist rebellion. It was an insurrection against Egyptian misrule. The Sudan has prospered enormously since Britain took it in hand. If it were handed over to the Egyptians, the virile races of the Sudan would rise in revolt and I am doubtful whether the Egyptian army alone would be equal to the task of quelling such a rebellion. It certainly could not permanently keep in subjection the tribes whose fighting prowess has been immortalized by one of Rudyard Kipling's most attractive ballads. However, the question will not arise.

I feel certain that the British Government will not abandon the Sudan. They will no doubt give every reasonable guarantee that there will be no such interference with the Nile in its flow through the Sudan as will diminish the supply of its life-giving waters to the thirsty lands of the Egyptian fellaheen down the river. Without the Nile, Egypt would be as barren and worthless as the Sahara. So to Egypt the government of the Sudan means the control of the Nile. That is, it means life and death to Egypt. But any civilized empire can be trusted not to inflict so irremediable an injury upon its neighbor as the Egyptian Nationalists seem to apprehend. And I do not doubt that words will be inserted in the treaty now being negotiated which will safeguard the riparian interests and rights of Egypt.

A Statesman's Job.

The Palestine problem is difficult but not dangerous. The total population is under a million. A small mobile force can easily keep order. The recent disturbance would never have occurred had the highly efficient body of police which was created in or around 1921 not been improvidently disbanded in 1925. The problem is not one for soldiers but for statesmen. How is a Governor in Jerusalem to induce members of three rival religious sects—all for special reasons rather fanatical specimens of their respective creeds—to dwell in peace if not in harmony side by side in the same small country? It is a land that throbs with religious fanaticism. Pilate found it difficult to do justice against its impetuous clamour. His successors have always experienced the same difficulty. There were constant alarms and excitements in the days of the Turk. Under Turkish rule we heard periodically threats of impending massacres of Christians. The Turk had no conscientious objections to the massacre of Christians but the pilgrims involved in the slaughter were in this case not all Armenians. Many of them came from countries which had an equally conscientious objection to permitting their subjects to be massacred and possessed powerful armies and navies

Why Drug Addiction Is Increasing.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE large pharmaceutical companies, which are the natural sources of supply of narcotics, long ago devised a sensible system for the control of these drugs. The plan was simply to sell them at cost, all pharmaceutical companies being obliged to sell at the same price. Since there was no profit in the product, there was no interest in the sale of it. Every pharmaceutical traveling salesman dodges a narcotic order. He gets no commission on it. The sale of narcotics is not permitted to count in his sales total.

Along came the Harrison narcotic law. The illicit dope peddler soon found a chance for a big profit. He could build up a sale of morphine knowing the doctor or druggist could not cut in on his trade, even were he so minded, for the doctor and druggist are held down by red tape and must keep a legal record. This record must show how much narcotics was ordered, and the name and address of each person to whom a tablet was given. The two must balance. So the morphine victim was denied a supply from legitimate channels and the dope peddler, by the act of a well-meaning legislative body, was provided with a protected industry.

One-grain morphine tablets sell for about $30 a thousand. If the peddler gets a dollar a grain, then his $30 investment nets him $970 profit. Is it any wonder that the dope peddler goes to all the time, trouble and expense in converting his dupes to the use of the drug? It is only necessary to leave a generous sample with a victim. Once it has been consumed one more dope fiend has been created who will beg, borrow or commit crime for money to buy the dope peddler's product. Few are ever cured of the habit. Once a customer always a customer is only too true in this case. The ever-increasing army of dope users is evidence of the activity of the dope peddlers' energy in making converts to the habit.

Now the average drug store business is highly competitive and pays only a small profit. If morphine were sold openly it would be sold at such a narrow margin of profit that no one would be interested in retailing it, let alone go out and convert people to its use. That is because the user could buy it anywhere for a few pennies and any man giving his time to the sale of it would starve. After the present large army of addicts had died off, the use of morphine would go back to its old, small field—its legitimate use in alleviating the suffering of those with advanced cases of cancer and other incurable diseases.

A PHARMACEUTICAL SALESMAN.

Why Leave the Fathers at Home?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I THINK Congress made a grave mistake when the fathers of soldiers buried in Europe were not included in that trip for the mothers to the graves of their sons in Europe. I was, during the war, engaged in delivering casualty messages from thhe War Department. On one occasion I walked three miles at night in order to deliver a war message to a family I saw and have felt that not all the burden fell on the mothers. Fathers wept bitterly. The real cause of my criticism is this: Most of the mothers are at an age when they need the companionship of the husband or some member of the family on this trip, so different from any other trip that many of them have ever taken. Why not let the mother choose a companion from her family and let the Government pay the expense?

Back to the Constitution.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

GOV. CAULFIELD, addressing the Bar Association, commended them for advocating repeal of the eighteenth amendment rather than nullification. Regarding nullification he remarked: "God help America when we start nullifying any part of the Constitution. We owe it to America to preserve and protect the Government left to us by the fathers."

With all of which I agree, except the implication that the entire Constitution, including the prohibition amendment, was left to us by the fathers. The framers of the Constitution never dreamed that such an amendment as the eighteenth would ever be tacked on to it. Certainly, all true Americans wish to preserve the original form of government, but not any such monstrosity as prohibition. To repeal that is a step toward restoring the form of government left us by the fathers, and until it is repealed we shall not have the pure form they created in founding the nation.

END OF THE LONDON PARLEY.

After laboring three months and devoting most of that time to a futile effort to get the French and Italians to participate in a five-Power treaty for limitation of naval armaments, the London conference is coming to an end.

The conference gained what was perhaps its only practicable objective. It established theoretical parity between the fleets of Great Britain and the United States, an event which Mr. Hoover truly says has no precedent in history. It also extended the battleship holiday among the three principal naval Powers for five years beyond the life of the Washington treaty, and it has stopped competition among the same three countries in cruisers, destroyers and submarines, none of which was regulated by the Washington treaty.

The rivalry between France and Italy in the Mediterranean proved too hard a nut for the conference to crack. It was thought for a time that France might be conciliated by an agreement upon the part of the other Powers to consult with her in the event that a disturbance of the peace of Europe threatened, but the effort came to nothing. The British were afraid that any guarantee to France might involve them in the difficulties of the Continent, and the United States was of course unwilling to make any concession in which she was not joined by Great Britain. So that in most respects France and Italy would as well have refused to participate in the conference, as they did when Mr. Coolidge's disarmament conference met at Geneva.

The London parley was not a failure. If it was a disappointment, that was because the rest of the world had not altogether realized the seriousness of the Franco-Italian rivalries in Africa. The discovery that the situation over there is as serious as it proved to be almost took precedence over the conference itself. It made more understandable warnings that have been coming out of Southern Europe ever since the World War. The French demanded security, which neither Britain or America would grant. The Italians, in turn, demanded parity with France, which France refuses.

The conference has left the United States free to approximate, if she cares to, the cruiser strength of Great Britain, which has in turn receded from the 70 cruisers demanded at the Geneva conference to 50. Approximate parity in naval strength with Great Britain would cost the United States about $850,000,000. Our big navy people will of course want to jump in and spend this money instanter, as they insisted on doing after the failure of the Geneva conference. As Mr. Coolidge ordered the Admirals to pipe down then, Mr. Hoover will have to order them to pipe down now. The necessities of the United States do not necessarily commit her to what she could do under the permissive features of the London treaty. Her cruiser program will remain modest as long as that of the Japanese remains modest, and as long as the British do not say too much about Britannia ruling the waves.

Mr. Hoover says the conference has saved the world some $2,500,000,000 that would otherwise have gone into naval armaments, and as to our own potential savings he has this to say:

> The cost to the United States of replacements and new construction during the next six years until the further conference will be (under various estimates) from $550,000,000 to $650,000,000 as compared to a sum, as I have said, of between $1,400,000,000 to $1,640,000,000 to attain parity on the Geneva basis. To this latter would need be added the additional cost of maintenance and operating which would make the saving upon the present basis as compared to the Geneva up to $1,000,000,000 in the next six years.

Whether or not the saving of this great sum materializes will, of course, depend upon the peace of Europe. Meanwhile, Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald have every reason to be gratified over the result of the conference. It is inevitable that they should have regrets, but all such aspirations have their regrets. The Washington conference ended the competition in capital ships among the three principal maritime Powers. That was a good beginning. The London conference has similarly ended competition in lesser warcraft among the same nations and gained the admission of Great Britain that hereafter she and the United States are naval equals. That is a good second step.

LEARNING.

One by one the little cities of the United States are learning that it is rather by their own fault than that of state utility commissions and courts if they are imposed upon by the public utilities.

Belleville, Ill., is the latest addition to the ranks of the sophisticated. Following the example of Salem, Mo., which recently put in an electric utility of its own because rates of the private company were too high, Belleville is looking ahead to 1932, when the Insull-Studebaker franchise expires. Mayor Stegmeyer is not saying that Belleville will build her own lighting plant, but rates are too high and she has been unable to get relief from the Illinois Utility Commission.

On the days the cities and towns of the country quit granting franchises, their deliverance will come. Until then they will writhe in the clutches of the Power Trust, with holding company piled upon holding company, with all sorts of charges imposed upon operating expenses, and public officials powerless. The cities and towns have only to discover, as Salem discovered, how they can recapture control over rates and service to enjoy home rule.

NEVER-HOMES AND THE CENSUS.

The census takers were not the first to discover that Americans are not a stay-at-home people, but they have abundantly verified the fact. Absentees are the sharpest thorn in the enumerators' path, and not much can be done about it. Police and Federal attorneys are ready to help count the occasional rebel who slams the door in the enumerator's face or otherwise shows his disinclination to be interrogated. In New York, the canvassers have been resourceful enough to tabulate the Bowery floaters, the speakeasy owners and the elusive Chinese. None of their methods will work with absentees, however, for the police can't make them stay at home to be counted. There is no way of catching the never-homes short of staying up all night, and census takers have to sleep some time.

The choice of the date, when summer is just coming in and it takes real will power to stay at home, has much to do with the difficulty, of course. Census taking in the bleak November might offer less trouble. Even at that season, however, the downtown crowds show that homebodies are few. More than ever before, whole families have work outside the home. Morning hours no longer are sacred to housewifely duties, for women find them an ideal time to shop. The number of diners-out shows that census takers can't make much headway by pounding on doors at the dinner hour. They would have better luck if they could poll tea rooms, department stores, bridge parties, autos and picture shows. As it is, returning to people's houses time and again until chance favors them is their only resource.

This busy civilization crowds the populace into small apartments, and then offers so many interesting things outside that they just can't stay at home. It all proves that the American people are energetic, tireless and always up and going—out.

THE HOLDING COMPANY EVIL.

Congress has been called upon by Commissioner Eastman to devise some means by which railroad holding companies, typified by the Pennroad Corporation and the Allegheny Corporation, may be brought under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Pennroad is controlled by directors of the Pennsylvania railroad, and Allegheny by the Van Sweringen brothers. They are both engaged in the acquisition of railroad securities in defiance, so Eastman charges, of the commission's recently announced plan for railroad consolidation.

Pennroad, for instance, is said to be buying heavily into Boston & Maine and New York, New Haven & Hartford, whereas, in the commission's judgment, the Pennsylvania system should have no connection with New England roads. Pennroad is also supposed to have acquired Henry Ford's old road, Detroit, Toledo & Ironton, which was grouped by the Commission with the Baltimore & Ohio. Allegheny is said to control the Missouri Pacific, which is designed by the commission to be the parent road for proposed System No. 18, and not be a mere link in a Van Sweringen transcontinental network.

As in the case of other public utilities, the railroads are using the holding company as a device to escape the supervision and regulation under which operating companies must work, and to form pyramidal financial combinations whose future is fraught with danger. In the case of power and light companies, for instance, operation is regulated by state commissions, but ultimate financial control is exercised by holding companies which are beyond the commissions' jurisdiction.

Congress has been inexcusably laggard in turning its attention to this economic phenomenon, and we trust Commissioner Eastman's striking presentation of the problem will speed corrective action.

CRUSADING AGAINST PANTS.

Masculine Britons, who never will be slaves, are again restive under their servitude to haberdashery, and the dress reformers have scheduled a great spring offensive, with today as the zero hour. Two thousand devotees are scheduled to go rambling about the country all day unencumbered by collars or studs, braces or belts, weskits or dickies and, what is more stirring, without trousers. Shorts will be the substitute worn by these lovers of liberty.

The ideals of this crusade are fine, but its methods savor more of the dreamer than of the strategist. For instance the date, despite what the poet said in his longing to be in England now that April's there, falls in a season of chilling gusts and showers most disconcerting to knees that have been encased in worsted all winter. Again, one of the leaders, Dr. Saleeby, is going to make a speech for the talkies about the matter; but unfortunately "for professional reasons" he will be forced to keep his archaic trousers on. The well-intentioned doctor will find many of his disciples fully agreeing with him in principle, but compelled by business reasons or political reasons or social reasons to continue wearing pants.

The offensive against sartorial subservience, in trying to make sans culottes of all men, will be up against a powerful kickback, for it is aiming a blow at the firmest foundation of masculine dignity. The pictures broadcast last year of zealots standing about in reformed tuxedos and track pants show what a hopeless task it is to wear such garb with suavity and aplomb. If the reformers went at it gradually they might have some luck. It would be possible to rally a great wave of sentiment and perfect the organization with a cry of "Down with collar buttons!" With that sector won, the movement would sweep on irresistibly to stiff collars, then to crocheted neckties, later to derby hats, and so on. Pants should be viewed as the ultimate goal.

CHARLEY NODS.

This is Charley Becker season in the United States mails. As each year the sap rises in the trees and the heart of man takes on renewed hope, Charley yearns to soar from the Secretary of State's chair to the Governor's mansion. In this ambition he has the hearty approval of a great many rural editors, among whom Charley dispenses the State printing. It is only meet and fitting that in return ye editors should twang the lyre in Charley's praise, and it is only human that Charley should reprint the nice things that are said about him and broadcast them far and wide. So just now the mails are freighted with editorials from the rural press telling the voters what a great man Charley is.

One of these, from the Taney County Republican, is entitled "Charley Becker—Public Servant." It says the usual things about Charley, how "the mighty voice of the common people will rise to call Charley Becker to the Governor's chair," and so on. But it also contains a stirring tribute to Fenton Stockard, head of the Blue Sky Department in Charley Becker's office. "Fenton Stockard," says the Taney County paper, "saves the honest men and women of Missouri millions of dollars every year by keeping the beasts of prey out of our State. If he were doing this work for a private corporation it would pay him at least $25,000 per year. And every word of praise given to Fenton Stockard is a word of praise for the man who keeps him—Charley Becker."

As it happens, Mr. Stockard is not in good favor at the present time, especially among those who lost their money in the Young brothers crash. Last year the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis warned the Blue Sky Commissioner against the Young brothers, not once, but repeatedly. Stockard himself admitted he knew the Youngs were skating on thin ice, but failed to act in the interest of "the honest men and women of Missouri." Instead, when the first of the year rolled around, he presented the Youngs with a renewal of their license.

Under the circumstances, it looks like something of a tactical error for Charley to let Fenton Stockard in on the ballyhoo. Charley is usually cleverer than that.

Jefferson and Religious Freedom

Services at Monticello today on 187th birthday of third President stress his work for cause of religious liberty; his great contribution was Virginia statute of 1786, which was largely influential in separation of church and state in U. S.; also led to first amendment, forbidding Government to establish or place curb on faith.

A Bulletin of Editorial Research Reports.

TODAY is the one hundred and eighty-seventh anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson. His former home at Monticello is the scene of special exercises, stressing his services to the cause of religious freedom. Yet Jefferson is the only one of our Presidents who did not belong officially to any religious denomination, if we accept the claim that Lincoln may be classed as a Presbyterian.

Jefferson was in no sense hostile to religion, nor a disbeliever in it—he merely held no definite credal opinions. He called himself a Christian, said he believed in the doctrine of Jesus above all others, and compiled the so-called Jefferson Bible, a collection of the teachings of Jesus. Nevertheless, in the campaigns of 1796 and 1800, voters were urged to cast their ballots against him on the ground that he was an atheist as well as a French libertine.

Of our Presidents, Washington and seven of his successors were Episcopalians. There have been six Presbyterian Presidents, four Methodist, four Unitarian and two Dutch Reformed. President Garfield was a member of the Disciples' Church, Harding was a Baptist, Coolidge a Congregationalist, and President Hoover is a Friend.

Jefferson's great contribution to the cause of religious freedom in the United States is the statute for religious freedom, which he drafted and which was passed by the Virginia Legislature in 1786. It provided:

"No man shall be compelled to frequent or support any religious worship, place or ministry whatsoever, nor shall be enforced, restrained, molested or burdened in his mind or goods, nor shall otherwise suffer on account of his religious opinion or belief; but all men shall be free to profess, and by arguments to maintain, their opinions in matter of religion, and the same shall in no wise diminish, enlarge or affect their civil capacities."

The original charter of Virginia had excluded Catholics from the Colony, and later Quakers were also banned. Catholics and Jews were discriminated against in some of the other colonies which gave freedom of worship to other denominations. During the Revolution some of the states disestablished the Church of England, but in Virginia, the Anglican clergy retained special privileges until the passage of Jefferson's statute.

Although Congregationalism was to remain the established religion in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Connecticut for some years after the Revolution, yet the Virginia statute for religous freedom aided mightily in the ultimate separation of church and state in the United States. It was largely instrumental, also, for the passage of the first amendment to the Constitution, which forbids Congress to "make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Many historians consider this service of Jefferson for religious freedom, and his services to political thought, scientific agriculture and popular education, his chief claim to rank as one of the great liberal leaders of all time. At all events, the epitaph which he composed for himself, and which now adorns his grave at Monticello, describes him only as "the author of the Declaration of Independence, of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and father of the University of Virginia."

He Is Still the Dean

From the Dallas (Tex.) Morning News.

NEWSPAPERDOM, no doubt, will be moved to protest at the installation of Dean Walter Williams, founder of collegiate instruction in journalism in mid-America, as president of the University of Missouri. For newspaper men will unite in the belief that the change is a demotion for the distinguished dean. Dean he is by title, dean by service and dean by seniority in that service, and dean by rights he will remain.

The presidency of the University of Missouri is a tenure of few days, and these full of trouble. At least Dr. Brooks, outgoing incumbent, probably feels that way. But there has been but one Dean Williams, and journalism, therefore, is justified in protesting at this sacrifice of an eminent man on the altar of turmoiled pedagogy.

Dean Williams came near to being the first man to institute classes in journalism in a college course. But he has done more than bring journalism to the college. He has sent the college out into the newspaper business and convinced hard-bitten city editors and Simon Legree advertising managers that a lad out of a school of journalism can produce what a real newspaper man is supposed to produce. Dean Williams could not have done that if he had not known how to do it himself.

As a matter of fact, Dean Williams has no Ph. D. to his name—not even a B. A. Nor would he be one whit more of a personality if he had degrees sufficient to empty the upper case of a two-bushel font of nonpareil. Born in a day when the printshop was reckoned the poor man's college, he took its every course, stood its every examination, gathered all its honors summa cum laude, and then bent his talents to systematizing its lore so that other young men might learn what he had learned more swiftly and with less labor.

There are scores of college presidents in this country—nay, hundreds of them—some with jobs and some without. But Dean Williams is not an addition to their number. He may function as one, and do it well. He may masquerade as one and deceive the very elect. He may draw the pay of one and reap the plaudits of patron and student alike. He may rank as one in polish and culture and sound educational policy. But down in his heart he will still be the dean. He will fool neither himself nor the newspaper boys about that.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, April 12.

THOSE long, tiring months of tariff debate which the United States Senate went through left their mark. It was no idle thought that prompted Jim Watson to suggest that Senators take a week's vacation after the final vote on the measure. The big-hearted majority leader knew full well that there was not a man whose nerves were not frazzled—whose mind and body were not simply fagged out.

Watson himself had to get away months ago when the battle was at its most critical stage. And though he returned, after the shortest of vacations in the South, the big Hoosier "limped" through the remainder of the fight. He is far from being fit physically.

There were many others on the casualty list at the end. Sessions starting at 10 o'clock in the morning and running into all hours of the night, week after week, were a tremendous strain. Possibly the tariff bill was not wholly to blame for those Senators who were stricken ill, but there is no doubt but what it was a powerful contributing factor.

AT ANY rate, Bill Borah was so worn out that he contemplated going over to nearby Baltimore for a visit to Johns Hopkins. Duncan Fletcher was on the sick list, and Hubert Stephens was too ill to be present for the final vote. Jim Couzens was under the care of a physician toward the last. Brock, the freshman Senator from Tennessee, was in bed.

Even Pete Norbeck, that hale and hearty Scandinavian, who boasts that he is a well digger by profession, was ailing.

Senator King was forced to quit the floor weeks before the finale. The Utah Senator not only fought in the battle on the floor, but, as a member of the Finance Committee, in that body as well. That congressional veteran, Fred Gillette, heeded the warning of his physician and struck out for Florida about a month ago to rest. Shipstead of Minnesota was too ill to be much in attendance.

GEORGE MOSES, while not ill, has seen fit to take a vacation. Soon he will sail for Europe for two months. The New Hampshire Senator will be forced to stay on the job throughout the summer preparing for the autumn congressional elections, so he is taking a vacation at the first opportunity.

But it was remarkable how the three Senators who bore the brunt of the fight from the very first stood the gaff—Reed Smoot, Furnifold Simmons and George Norris.

The 68-year-old chairman of the Finance Committee, the 76-year-old Democratic tariff chieftain, and "Old George," leader of the insurgents and 69 years old, were still going strong at the end. Smoot, harassed at every turn; Simmons, bearing the brunt of his party's fight against high tariff, and Norris, engineering one of the most daring combines in congressional history—their endurance never ceased to be the wonder of all.

Wilkins' Story of Antarctic

Unable to Get Base By Wireless Expedition Is Cut Off From World

On New Flight Two Giant Penguins Are Mistaken for Men — Plane Falters in Squall Over Unknown Area.

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS,
Commander of the Wilkins Antarctic Expedition.

NEW YORK.

WHEN it was arranged with the Colonial Office and the Discovery Committee of London for the Royal Research Ship William Scoresby to proceed to the Falkland Islands, refuel and provision and return immediately so we might again go to the edge of the pack ice, we realized any delay would jeopardize the possibility of success. The season at the time of starting would be almost too late for us to expect any long period of fine weather.

For two days the vessel was delayed at Deception Island by bad weather before it could start north. Then, although we expected to return by Jan. 15, it was not until Jan. 25 that it was once more in the harbor.

In less than 12 hours our machine and supplies were on board and we were ready to put to sea. It was almost too late to go forward with our flying plans, but conditions in the Polar regions are so uncertain that it is never wise to give up hope without exhaustive trials. In any case, we could be sure of doing a great deal of new and useful oceanographical work.

Riding Angry Waves.

We had scarcely left Deception Island when the break in the weather came and high, continuous winds came in from the East. We had shaped our course from Deception to a point a little south of Peter First Island.

With our plane, the Los Angeles, fitted as a seaplane and lashed firmly to the deck of the William Scoresby, we rode before the angry seas. The Scoresby pitched and rolled. Most of the flying crew were badly under the weather and seldom seen on deck.

We saw no ice until reaching latitude 69 degrees 20 minutes, longitude 90 west, a position about 30 miles south of Peter First Island.

Even at the edge of the pack there was no improvement in the weather. We followed the edge, which ran between latitude 69, 20 and 69, 30 until reaching longitude 99.50 west. Then we turned south into what appeared to be a small bight in the pack.

We then found frequent changes in temperature had set up much condensation in the fuel tanks and the water which had formed had frozen solid in the fuel lines. We had to remove fuel system and heat it to melt the ice.

By the time that work was done, the weather was almost calm. We put the machine overboard and made ready to fly south. By taxiing into a snow squall coming in our direction we managed to get into the air.

Flying Blind Over Pack.

We soon saw that the way to the south was barred; the snowstorms in that direction became thicker and thicker. Even when flying right down low over the ice it was not possible to see far ahead.

It was an extremely dangerous condition in which to fly, and no good service could be done by flying blind over the pack.

We swung back toward the edge of the pack. Then we discovered the ice edge a little way west of where we had launched the plane turned sharply south. We returned to the ship, hoisted the plane on board and followed the edge of the ice.

The calm spell lasted only an hour or so, and the wind rose again. We crept along the edge of the pack ice until reaching latitude 70 degrees 10 minutes south at longitude 100 degrees 45 minutes west. At that point the pack turned northward again. We decided to wait there for better weather.

Day after day we waited, rolling in the swell.

Wireless Fails Them

Our wireless failed to penetrate the obstacles between us and Deception Island, and while it was possible for me to pick up the stations throughout the world and to hear broadcasting over the short wave, it was not possible for us to communicate with our base.

At noon on Feb. 1 the wind swung more to the west. Fearing thick weather might set in, I decided to attempt a flight in spite of the choppy sea. Again we had trouble, due to condensation in the fuel lines. The pipes once more had to be removed, heated and cleaned.

It was 2 in the afternoon when the machine was ready to be put in the water.

It was just about 12 minutes from the time we started to remove the lashings which held the machine to the deck until we were in the air.

The air was so rough that day that it was impossible to keep the machine on an even keel. This made it difficult to check our course with the speed and drift indicator.

When we had hove to with the ship beside the pack we had thought we were at the foot of a bight, and that the main pack ran far to the north and west of us. But from the air we could see that it was only a narrow tongue that projected northward and that the main trend of the pack was to the southwest.

In a line with latitude 71, the southern trend of the pack ceased, and it spread out due west as far as the eye could see. The ice over which we passed, until reaching latitude 71, was of such a character that a strong ship might have forced a way through. But beyond that latitude the floes were larger and only slightly scattered.

Snow Squall Across Path.

The weather ahead looked black and forbidding. A big snow squall lay across our path. It would have been wise, probably, to have turned back then, but since we were in the air, and it was perhaps our last chance of flying South this season, it was worth while to try to push through. We hoped to find better weather ahead.

As we ran into the frozen cloud we experienced a peculiar condition. The temperature increased three degrees, it was 27 degrees fahrenheit at the edge of the pack. The warmer, damper air filled the cabin and cockpit of the plane as if with the smoke of many cigarettes.

The engine also felt the change and I worried as the revolutions died slowly down. It seemed as if the machine was choking. The exhaust, instead of giving its clear staccato roar, dropped to an ominous throaty sound.

Cheesman replied to my inquiry that he had not changed the throttle. Even when he tried it in several different positions the engine failed to recover. We began to sink in the misty air. It seemed that we must turn back and that we would be forced down.

Clear of Storm.

But I was reluctant to turn back and decided to go on for at least 10 minutes and see what happened.

Gradually we flew clear of the storm and the damp air cleared away. The engine picked up and we plugged on southward.

Beneath us a few seals lay like dead flies upon a huge white sheet. But as we passed over them they would roll lazily over on their backs and watch us as we passed. With their flippers flapping as they rolled, it looked as if they were waving us a lazily-executed, friendly greeting, and the sight of these living things upon the forbidding ice pack somewhat relieved it of its terrors, and gave us comfort.

After we had been flying for 50 minutes Cheesman excitedly drew my attention to a long, dark-looking mass looming through the gray mist southwest of our course. It was exactly in the direction in which lay Captain Cook's "strong appearance of land," which was so marked on our charts. Because of it, I had set our course a little west of south.

At first we were positive we would be able to corroborate the earlier explorer's discovery, and we were doubly thrilled.

"Shall I make for it?" Cheesman shouted.

I had had time to reflect and decided to exercise a caution born of many disappointments after hurriedly judging polar conditions in poor, hazy light.

"Let's keep our course for a few miles farther," I said. "If there is any doubt at all about it being land, you can almost be sure that it isn't."

I was astonished to find our forward speed had increased without advancing the engine throttle. We had run through the wind which had been interferring with our progress. The plane now sped straight ahead without drifting.

I looked again at what we believed were great dark land masses. The prospect was still hopeful. Traveling at 125 miles an hour, we expected to reach the nearest mass soon and know for certain whether it was land.

About that time, I looked below and was much startled by what I saw. There, it seemed, were two men—running for their lives. The shock was instantaneous and over almost as quickly. They were great Emperor penguins, of course. Yet from the air they looked exactly like those wild Siberians we hado seen running helter-skelter from the shadow of the Graf Zeppelin as we crossed the northern wastes on the Zeppelin 'round-the-world flight in the summer of 1929.

The Comic Penguins.

The shock of suddenly sighting those giant birds waddling upright on the ice was soon over and we could not help but laugh loudly at the comic figures they cut.

Never once did they hesitate. With their broad backs towards us, their bodies swaying like pendulums, they hurried from the thundering noise of our whirlwind engine and the flash of our orange-colored monoplane.

Then we looked again for the supposed land ahead. On both sides, in the distance there were strong appearances of land, but the closest dark area we could see soon took the form of a long, low iceberg. From a distance we could not imagine why in the peculiar light it looked so uniformly dark in contrast to the smaller bergs, which were almost lost in the haze of the sunless day.

As we neared the berg, the problem was solved. Beside the iceberg, on the side next to us, was a narrow strip of open water, black in comparison to the dull gray of the other openings between the pack ice, which were thinly covered with young, gray ice. The clear, dark water reflected on the sheer side of the crystal berg made it resemble, when viewed from afar, a low, snow-covered land mass.

In a few minutes we could see that the objects on each side of us were also icebergs, not land. The conditions which had fooled us are probably similar to those which have led to so many reports of land in the Antartic, which have proved later to be erroneous.

Deeply disappointed, we continued south.

Ahead, we could see that a great wall of snowcloud barred the way. It was too wide for us to go around. There was no use trying to get on top, and we were afraid it would prove too thick for us to fly through. At best it would hide the conditions we had come to study.

But, hoping we might fly through it until reaching landfast ice, we pushed on. The haze quickly increased such a thickness that we lost sight of everything except that immediately beneath us.

Would Fly in Circles.

To fly long in such thick haze as we were in would mean we would soon be flying around in circles and losing all sense of direction. Then we would fail to find our way out of the snow storm or back to the William Scoresby.

We kept on as nearly south as possible for a full 10 minutes. It was then an hour and a half after we left the ship. In that time we should have reached at least latitude 73, where, judging by the soundings taken farther north, we expected to reach land. But still I could see the faint outline of fractured ice floes dimly beneath us.

Our later discoveries, some distance farther east, might have some bearing on the fact that the land in the longitude and latitude in which we flew was some distance farther south than we expected. To the east, we found that sea bottom shallowed to less than 500 meters and then got deeper again. This may be the case in longitude 100.

There was no sign of an opening in the gray, misty snowstorm. It had closed us in completely.

To make a right about turn and steady our compass was not an easy matter, but Cheesman finally managed it successfully and after 20 minutes' effort we emerged from the snow cloud to clearer atmosphere. We set our course for the edge of the ice pack, now far out of sight to the north.

CAPT. WILKINS' narrative of his adventures in the Antarctic will be continued in a later issue.

inent persons at home. General Dawes very wisely leaves the selections, as far as possible, in the hands of his permanent staff, but he can't hope to persuade the disappointed hundreds that he is not the man to blame. The Congressman's problem of handing out political patronage without making more enemies than friends is simple by comparison. It is no wonder that when a Western woman called on him recently and said her sole desire in London was to see the Royal mews, the Ambassador gave a whoop of joy:

Ability to Make Friends.

It would be regrettable if any account of the Ambassador's mannerisms should leave the impression that he is not a man of ability. He has shown his ability in many lines. He is, moreover, a man of general impulses, with a gift for making friends. It will be recalled that when he took the chair of presiding officer of the Senate he rubbed most of the Senators the wrong way with his theatrical tub-thumping speech, in that falsetto voice of his, demanding a change in their rules of procedure. He never receded from that position ,but when he left the vice presidency he had the respect of all the Senators and the genuine affection of many. Even Senator Reed of Missouri, who had been his harshest critic at the beginning, paid a handsome tribute to his fairness.

As Ambassador he is still a new man. He is yet to be fully tested. The first few months of his service were devoted largely to preparations for the present naval conference, and since its opening he has been working in the ranks under the Secretary of State. Judgment on the character of his ambassadorship must therefore be suspended, but if his career in the past is any criterion, it is a safe prediction that he will do no hurt to the present good relations between the United States and Great Britain and will leave London with a largely augmented store of personal friendships.

And if, as some say, he is still running for the presidency, the fact that he has effaced himself at the naval conference may turn out to be a distinct political asset rather than a liability.

Clemenceau Chides America In His Farewell Book

mon sense, and his knowledge of what is actually going on in Europe, would let him.

"A Europe Founded Upon Right" is the heading of the chapter in which he discusses these points. Through the greater part of the war, he says, the Allies bore the reproach of Russia's absolutism, as opposed to their general professions of democracy. But Russia's collapse and the Brest-Litovsk treaty changed all this, and made the war truly one of liberation.

And Clemenceau defends the Versailles Treaty as a treaty of liberation. Comparing it with the Treaty of Westphalia and the Congress of Vienna, he finds that Versailles created new and free nations with boundaries as fair as they could be made. "It is not our fault in the complications were such that we sometimes had to resort to shifts. Actions of historic justice have been resented by those who had been flourishing on the ancient wrong, and by some others who only wanted to be left alone."

The treaty firmly carried out, and supplemented by a guarantee pact bearing the signatures of England the United States, would have satisfied "the Tiger," so far as the reader may judge. But the guarantee pact was withheld by the United States Senate, by a majority of six votes, though the British House of Commons passed it unanimously and without debate—an action which, the author declares, France will never forget.

Expression of Distrust of Germany's Intentions.

And enforcement of the treaty has been slipping—slipping. So the book relates bitterly, in chapters on "Mutilations by America," "Financial Mutilations," "Germany Arms—France Disarms," "Defeatism" and "The Retrograde Peace." Inter-allied debts and distrust of Germany's intentions alternate as themes of such passages as the following:

> What are we to say, what are we to do, on the day when Germany looks us in the eye and lets us know that she can no longer continue her installments under the Young plan, and that it is a happy opportunity for us to found and seal our friendship in a pact based on unselfishness?
> Then we shall merely have to furnish Germany with new colonies, and to carve up for her benefit Poland and the other partition countries, in order to learn the borders within which Germany will allow us to retire and die.
> * * * The abyss is in sight. England in her new manner thumps a fist on the table, like Germany, to wring extra payments out of us. And when Herr Stresemann gravely declares that "the path is prepared for a close co-operation between Germany and her neighbor," he is the spokesman of the most criminal nation in history, who, having failed to drain us of our last drop of blood, pays us the ironical compliment of replenishing her strength at our expense. Her claims in the matter of colonies are by this time all prepared. The work of close co-operation will begin at the first opportunity!
> Grown rich on the war, America is, if we can believe the experts, setting out to ruin us by intercepting, for the extravagances of her budding new-rich, the sums that we are to receive as reparations for the damage caused by Germany. All the new Central Europe is in turmoil as the result of the recrudescence of violent activity on the part of a Germany who, with the unwitting help of the English and the Americans, is preparing to start on another criminal venture before she has expiated the last. Thus the Americans will have come to Europe merely to establish the Danzig corridor for the benefit of the Poles, and then go back to the banks of the Mississippi, there to wait in sheltered calm and see what will be the result for France. What will be left of America's pristine chivalry then?

Praise for Wilson; Love for Col. House.

The references to President Wilson are on the whole friendly, and in some cases manifest admiration. Clemenceau feels that Wilson's early wartime utterances were frightfully inapt, but that later declarations atoned for this fault. Of the senatorial group which repudiated the Wilson program, only passing mention is given to Henry Cabot Lodge. Herbert Hoover, as seen at the conference, had "the stiffness of the man whose nerves are at the end of their tether."

But the one individual whom the grim ex-Premier kisses on both cheeks is President Wilson's friend, Col. Edward M. House. Every reference to the Colonel is an admiring one—"a supercivilized person escaped from the wilds of Texas," "a good American, very nearly as good as a Frenchman, a sifting, pondering mind—above all, the traditional gentleman."

A noticeable passage, in the discussion of American debt claims, is the statement that it was "Col. Stanton" who made, at the tomb of Lafayette, the brief and apt utterance which has been commonly attributed to Gen. Pershing.

Through his bitter chapters on the sequels of the peace, Clemenceau does not let his French readers forget that the French, after all, with their post-war letting down, and their acceptance of men formerly branded as traitors, are chiefly responsible, in his view, for what has befallen and may befall them. His final chapter, on "The Unknown Warrior," sums up the author's appeal for full responsibility and full reparations. "France," he says in closing, "will be what the men of France deserve."

Appendices to the book are Lord Milner's memoranda on the establishment of unified command, and Clemenceau's letter to President Coolidge on war debts.

Lloyd George on England's Need For Leadership

ready at all times to give effect to their scruples. So nothing serious ever happened.

Moslem animosity seems now to have been transferred from the Christian to the Hebrew. Under the Turkish regime, the Jews were a comparatively poor and submissive population, a large proportion of them crowded into the poorer quarters of Jerusalem. The war was responsible for the Zionist declaration issued by the Allies in 1917. This promised a national home for Jews in Palestine. Arab rights were to be respected and there was no thought of expropriating the Arab population. But it was assumed that the land which at one time provided milk and honey for millions could if properly developed and cultivated maintain at least twice the population which found a living of sorts under the Turkish misrule.

Jews Enrich Country.

Since the war the Jewish population has increased by 100,000. But so have the Moslems increased. Since 1919, the Jews have raised 25,000,000 pounds for the development of Palestine. The Arabs have undoubtedly benefited indirectly by this expenditure. The Jewish emigration has enriched the country not only with capital but with intelligent, skilled and industrious people. Lands which provided a meager livelihood for a scanty population are now by irrigation or modern methods of cultivation maintaining in comfort a population 20 times as numerous. The Arabs have profited by this enterprise. There are now 80,000 more Arabs finding a living in Palestine than there were at the date of the Armistice.

The Arab cultivation, where it exists at all, is primitive and unfruitful. It will be some time before they abandon the casual elementary methods of their fathers, but utimately the Jewish example will prevail especially with the younger generation. The valleys and the uplands of Canaan will thus once more be thronged with a happy and thriving peasantry. The cry raised by the Arabs and their friends that there is no room for more Jews in Palestine without evicting the Arabs is mischievous nonsense. It is all based on the assumption that the crude farming of the pre-Hittite days must be stabilized. The report made for the Government of which I was the head in 1919 by competent and experienced engineers stated that by well-planned schemes of irrigation 1,000,000 acres could be added to the cultivatable area of Palestine and that by this plan 16 persons could be maintained for every one there now. This in itself would provide a livelihood for an additional 200,000 families on the land. Where it is well watered, Canaan is still a fertile country. Ten families added to the land mean that at least five outside handle their products and supply their needs.

Sterility in Palestine.

There never was a country so let down by its inhabitants as Palestine. Every tourist comes back disillusioned by its appearance of sterility and squalor. It is like a historic old mansion completely neglected by penurious or indolent tenants. Zionism inspired by the enthusiasm of its remarkable leader, Dr. Weizmann, by its sacrifices and its well directed energies, is rendering a service to civilization. I hope that civilization will insist on seeing that it gets fair play in the discharge of its mission. It has been treated so far with suspicion, jealousy and prejudice. A foolish officialism always likes to rule over a somnolent population which gives no trouble and views with doubt and distrust every movement and enterprise that may wake up the contented sleepers. When roused against their will, the slumberers are apt to become cross and take a lot of handling.

The recent outbreak in Palestine will do good if it call attention to the fine achievement of the Jewish colonists and to the need for according them not only protection but reasonable encouragement. They must not be allowed to trample on the legitimate rights of the men of any other race or religion. They have not shown any disposition to do so. Let them have fair play in carrying out one of the most interesting and fruitful experiments of the age.

I am afraid I shall have to postpone my views on India for a future article. The position there is at present one of great anxiety. The viceroy and government seem to be doing their best to avoid resorting to repressive measures. Whether they will succeed in their purpose will depend on the developments of the next few weeks—perhaps the next few days.

OFFERS INDICATE NEW INTEREST IN BUSINESS SITES

Theory That Plaza Will Hold Business East of Twelfth Said to Enhance Downtown Values.

FEDERAL BLOCK INFLUENCES VALUES

Week Closes With Negotiations Under Way for Attractive Site on Grand Boulevard.

By Berry Moore

While the movement in real estate this spring has not attained record proportions, offers submitted during the last week presage a larger volume of transactions in both the city and the suburbs, real estate men believe. Keen interest is shown in property in business centers which hold out the greatest possibilities of enhancement in value.

Renewed speculative interest is reported in property in the central business district east of Twelfth boulevard, which has lagged somewhat because of the decided westward trend of the last few years. Several offers have been made recently for well situated holdings in this section on the theory that the Memorial Plaza will hold business more or less east of Twelfth boulevard with a resultant appreciation in property values there.

This is the opinion of George T. Burdeau, one of the largest and most astute real estate operators in the city, who holds that the Memorial Plaza will break the continuity of business between the sections east and west of Twelfth boulevard. The proposed plaza will enhance adjacent land as sites for hotels or for such representative business structures as the new Missouri Pacific Building at Thirteenth and Olive streets and the Shell Building at Thirteenth and Locust streets, because of the prominence of the location. It will have the effect of concentrating business growth east of Twelfth boulevard, in the opinion of Burdeau. There is, however, a diversity of opinion as to this.

New Federal Block Plans.

It is predicted that things will begin ot happen in the central business district east of Twelfth boulevard as soon as plans for several new building projects for this area have taken tangible form, notably for the Federal building block bounded by Olive, Locust, Eighth and Ninth streets, which, obviously, is scheduled to be improved with a structure that will dominate that part of the city.

The most recent idea advanced for the upbuilding of the Federal Building block contemplates a building with the first 20 stories designed for a department store and the upper ten stories for a hotel. A station with terminals for suburban trains is proposed for the sub-basement and basement, which, it is urged, would be feasible in connection with the tunnel under Eighth street.

Electrification would make the station available for railroad trains as well as electric lines. An enterprise of this character, it is believed, would infuse new life into this part of the city and would have a decidedly stabilizing effect on real estate values.

An alternative plan calls for a combination office building and department store. The Federal Building block is also being considered, it is understood, by one of the largest downtown banks for a fty structure with banking quarters comprising the first, second and third floors.

Skouras Offer Rejected.

As is told elsewhere the Board of Education has rejected Skouras Brothers' offer for a 99-year lease of its property at the northwest corner of Ninth and Locust streets, carrying plans for a 37-story office structure for the site.

The Ninth and Olive site is exciting attention because of the appreciation in value it will undoubtedly undergo with the improvement of the present Federal Building block with a combination structure on the scale proposed.

Investment bankers report that they are figuring on loans for several big building projects in both the downtown district and in the midtown centers. While the sites have been secured in one or two instances by earnest money payments, the majority of these projects are contingent on leases with large concerns for quarters in the buildings for which negotiations are now pending.

Plaza Site Negotiations.

Negotiations have been hanging fire for several weeks for the property at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Chestnut streets, which will offer an unbroken sweep of the Memorial Plaza. Efforts have been made several times during the last two years to assemble

FEDERAL BLOCK INFLUENCES VALUES

While the movement in real estate this spring has not attained record proportions, offers submitted during the last week presage a larger volume of transactions in both the city and the suburbs, real estate men believe. An alternative plan calls for a combination office building and department store. The Federal Building block is also being considered, it is understood, by one of the largest downtown banks for a lofty structure with banking quarters comprising the first, second and third floors.

Skouras Offer Rejected.

As is told elsewhere the Board of Education has rejected Skouras Brothers' offer for a 99-year lease of its property at the northwest corner of Ninth and Locust streets, carrying plans for a 37-story office structure for the site.

The Ninth and Olive site is exciting attention because of the appreciation in value it will undoubtedly undergo with the improvement of the present Federal Building block with a combination structure on the scale proposed.

While the sites have been secured in one or two instances by earnest money payments, the majority of these projects are contingent on leases with large concerns for quarters in the buildings for which negotiations are now pending.

Plaza Site Negotiations.

Negotiations have been hanging fire for several weeks for the property at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Chestnut streets, which will offer an unbroken sweep of the Memorial Plaza. Efforts have been made several times during the last two years to assemble this entire Twelfth street frontage of this block, extending from Chestnut to Pine, with plans for an immense structure. The Chestnut street corner is controlled by Arthur Fitzsimmons and Will and Michael Kinney, under a 99-year lease, and the Pine street corner by the Meyers estate. Cornet & Zeibig are handling negotiations in connection with this project.

Negotiations for property in this part of the city, according to real estate men, have not been affected adversely by the present status of the Memorial Plaza as depicted by Mayor Miller, which is regarded as only in abeyance pending funds for its completion, which will be forthcoming in due course, it is believed. The Market street widening project is also in the same plight, but this has recourse only to the revolving fund, which was depleted by the Olive street widening.

Market Street Deals.

Contracts have been closed recently for the purchase of several parcels of Market street property, but the agents in the transactions are withholding details, pending final papers. Prices prevailing for property on Market street, it is said, are attracting the attention of speculators.

The week closed with negotiations under way for one of the most attractive sites on Grand boulevard in the central part of the city. Plans of the prospective purchaser are closely guarded, but it is believed that they have important building plans up his sleeve. Several offers also have been reported recently for the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Windsor place, acquired less than a year ago by the Burdeau Realty Co., of which George Burdeau is president, in trade from Washington University. This, with the adjoining property, is wanted for a new building project for which this location is regarded as especially desirable.

Property on Grand boulevard south of Arsenal street, is also a magnet, attracting attention because of its speculative possibilities, according to real estate men. The advent several years ago of chain stores on South Grand boulevard, led by Sears Roebuck & Co., which gave tremendous impetus to business growth there, precipitated a record breaking movement in real estate in that part of the city. This section has taken on new importance as a business center, with the opening of the Hydraulic Press Brick Co. tract of 50 acres, lying just west of Grand boulevard, which has been built up almost over night through this coming of thousands of new residents into that part of the city. The addition also has enhanced materially the business importance of Gravois avenue.

Negotiations, it is understood, are under way for available sites on Grand, between Arsenal and Park, for several lofty apartment buildings, to be built as soon as the ban placed on buildings of this type by money lenders has been removed. A number of the handsomest buildings of this type in the city now grace this section of Grand boulevard.

Both north and south Grand boulevard, as well as the mid-town section of the street, have always been buoyant sections of the real estate market. The 22-story Continental Life Building, approaching completion on the west side of Grand boulevard, and the new 18-story addition to the Melbourne Hotel at Grand and Lindell, will form assets to Grand boulevard which will be reflected in real estate on this thoroughfare, in both North and South St. Louis.

Read estate on Delmar boulevard both east and west of the city limits, is attracting attention. Earnest money has been paid in the purchase of several holdings on this thoroughfare in both the city and in University City, it is understood. Sandsome business buildings in several instances are planned, it is reported.

The firm of Eugene J. Altheimer, Williams & Calmer, Inc., closed several deals last week involving business property on Chouteau avenue and apartment and business buildings in the West End, aggregating approximately $500,000. This concern has also passed the final payment in the sale of the Winston-Churchill apartments at Cabanne and Belt avenues, recently purchased by the American National Assurance Co.

Negotiations are also reported pending again for the half block on the west side of Skinker road opposite Forest Park, between Rosebury Drive and Northwood avenue in DeMun Park. Several apartment projects on a large scale have been considered for this site, which overlooks Forest Park, and which is one of the most attractively situated in the city for an improvement of this type.

MARCH BEST BUILDING MONTH SINCE AUGUST IN 37 STATES

Contracts Show Full Seasonal Increase of 45 Pct. Over February—Decline in St. Louis Territory.

March contracts for building and engineering projects in 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains reached $459,119,000, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was the largest monthly total since August of last year; it registered the full seasonal increase of 45 per cent over February of this year, and it was only 5 per cent under March, 1929. Contracts in December, 1929, were 27 per cent under December, 1928; each succeeding month of this year has lessened the spread between current contract volume and that of a year ago. This year's first quarter contract total has amounted to $1,100,147,200, being approximately 12 per cent behind the corresponding period of 1929.

As in the case of the two preceding months, March awards for the construction of public works and utilities, totaling $105,349,800, led all other types at 23 per cent of the total. Contracts let for residential buildings amounted to $101,491,600, or 22 per cent of the aggregate; awards for commercial structures totaled $80,001,500 or 17 per cent; and lettings for industrial construction amounted to $74,332,600 or 16 per cent.

Contemplated new work of all kinds reported in March amounted to $732,735,900, compared with $780,209,400 reported in February, and $886,075,100 in March of last year.

The St. Louis territory (Southern Illinois, Eastern Missouri, Northeast Arkansas, Western Tennessee and Northwest Mississippi) was alone of all districts to show a decline in building contracts from both the previous month and March, 1929. The March total amounted to $14,493,800 compared with $16,280,700 in the preceding month, and $20,399,700 in March of last year. Since the year opened building and engineering contracts let in this district reached a total of $39,044,300, as against $49,633,500, for the same period in 1929.

Included in the March contract total were the following active types of construction expenditures: $5,003,400, or 35 per cent of all awards, for residential buildings; $4,042,200, or 28 per cent, for public works and utilities; $2,458,200, or 17 per cent, for commercial buildings; and $988,100, or 7 per cent, for educational buildings.

Building contstruction reported as in the contemplated stage in the last month amounted to $25,301,500 which was 74 per cent greater than the amount reported in February; the corresponding month's total of last year was $42,178,400.

The Peacock Shoe Shop will open its new store at 815 Locust street Tuesday. Both the interior and the exterior of the building have been completely remodeled according to plans of Preston J. Bradshaw. Its new facade adds another attractive entrance to an imposing block of retail stores facing the Postoffice.

The exterior is of black glass trimmed and ornamented in chromium plated designs. The word "Peacock," in large enamel letters surmounted by chromium plated frames, will greet the passer-by. The interior is in French design. The furnishings and crystal fixtures create a highly ornamental effect. A commodius lounging room with writing desks and telephones are provided. There is also a ladies' rest room where maid service is available.

7 NEW INDUSTRIES IN MARCH; 8 EXPANSIONS

Monthly Report for St. Louis District Says Added Investment Is $4,162,600.

Seven new industries, all of them small, were established in the St. Louis industrial district in March, and eight existing industries, some of which are large, announced expansions. The monthly report of the Industrial Club, issued yesterday by George C. Smith, director, says:

"The 15 new industries and expansions require the construction of 671,000 square feet of factory floor space and the absorption of 59,000 square feet of existing space. The added investment will aggregate $4,162,600—the largest reported since April, 1929—and 211 additional employes will be needed.

"The largest industrial projects announced during the month are the new printing plant of the St. Louis Star and a warehouse for the International Shoe Co. Plant location inquiries were not as numerous as during February. Enough uncertainty as to the business future exists to cause a postponement of most expansion programs, particularly where new financing is required.

"Principal business barometers for the month of March, 1930, as compared with March, 1929, may be summarized as follows: Building permits decreased 62.55 per cent; bank clearings decreased 13.17 per cent; debits to individual accounts decreased 8.81 per cent; industrial failures (liabilities) increased 953.44 per cent; barge line tonnage decreased 32.73 per cent; postoffice receipts decreased 6.36 per cent; water consumption increased 1.58 per cent; loaded freight cars handled by the Terminal Railroad Association decreased 13.85 per cent.

"For the month of February, 1930, compared with February, 1929: Telephone calls decreased 4.38 per cent; revenue street car and bus passengers decreased 9.49 per cent on lines of the St. Louis Public Service Co.; bus revenue passengers increased 7.04 per cent on lines of the People's Motorbus Co.; industrial gas consumption decreased .60 per cent and industrial electricity decreased 13.52 per cent.

"Building contracts awarded in St. Louis during March, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation, were $4,413,500, as compared with $7,517,500 for March, 1929, a decrease of 41.29 per cent."

BIDS FOR BUILDING OF EDUCATION BOARD

Special Committee Rejects One Offer and Is Now Considering Another.

Having decided to reject the offer of Skouras Bros. for a 99-year lease of the Board of Education's administrative building, at the northwest corner of Ninth and Locust streets, a special committee of the board is considering another offer to lease the seven-story structure and its 112 by 127 foot site, submitted by W. J. Holbrook of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co.

Board members think several more offers are likely to be received. They favor selling the property because of its value and erecting a new school headquarters on cheaper land on Grand boulevard, where the offices will be more generally accessible to the teaching corps. Some members think an outright sale preferable to the long-term lease that real estate men have suggested.

The Holbrook offer was submitted to the board last Tuesday night. While its terms were described as rather vague, it was said to propose a 99-year lease with rental of 5 per cent on the basis of a $1,250,000 valuation, or $62,500 a year, with the privilege of purchasing at that valuation during the first 20 years.

Holbrook declared he was not ready to discuss what use would be made of the property. A report that it was under consideration as the new quarters of a downtown women's apparel store was denied. The Board of Education was given to understand that Holbrook desired to make extensive alterations of the 30-year-old building to fit it for commercial uses, and possibly to add several stories to it.

The Skouras Bros.'s offer was for rental on the basis of 4½ per cent on a $1,100,000 valuation, or $49,500 a year, the Board of Education to pay the taxes on the site. The Skouras Bros. proposed to erect an office building. Their offer was rejected by the special committee, it is learned, although a report has not been made yet, primarily because of the tax clause. The way is open for them to submit a new offer.

The special committee consists of Howard G. Cook, chairman Ben Weidle and John C. Tobin. The offers have been submitted through President Arthur A. Blumeyer.

CUSTOM SHIRT SALESMEN

Do you call on the best trade in your territory? Are you taking big orders for fine quality custom-made shirts? Do earnings of $5000 to $10,000 a year seem ordinary to you because you are earning that much or more? Are you an experienced, clean-cut, hard-hitting custom shirt salesman who has a following of steady customers among professional and business men who demand the finest shirts and can pay the price for them? If you can answer "yes" to these questions, write us today. We have a most attractive proposition for you. For months we have been slowly building a line of custom-made shirts superior to any other line in the country from every standpoint. Fabrics, tailoring, style, value, service, all 100% plus. Theater-goers in St. Louis have reason to be grateful to Casey and his troupe, for there has been on display at the Orpheum during the past season an excellent brand of entertainment—and no dark weeks or even dark nights. Opening tonight is "An American Tragedy," Patrick Kearney's play which was made from Dreiser's harrowing study of murder among the young.

Stock has entrenched itself throughout the country this year as never before. In fact this branch of the theater has been so prosperous that it has entered the realms of big business, with rumors of a national merger and a forthcoming chain of stock houses.

That rumor emanates from New York and it names Robert McLaughlin, managing director of the Ohio Theater, Inc., of Cleveland, and Henry Duffy, owner of a number of profitable stock houses on the West Coast, as the promoters. How far they have advanced their plan is not known—it may still be in the nature of a considerable possibility.

McLaughlin points out that there are already in existence a number of excellent stock companies which could form the nucleus of the proposed chain. He mentions among others, Stuart Walker's famous company in Cincinnati, Jessie Bonstelle's Detroit Civic Repertory Theater, his own troupe in Cleveland, Sherman Brown's in Milwaukee, the Ambassador and Kedzie companies in Chicago, the Erlanger Players of Atlanta, Ga., George Sharp's two or three in Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Boston, Duffy's chain on the coast and the Casey Players in St. Louis.

McLAUGHLIN and Duffy would add other units to form a solid chain across the entire country. Each company is to keep its resident staff of actors. But, as an example of how this chain system is to effect economies, leading stars can be booked for all the houses and move straight across the country, stopping a week, or two weeks as the case may be, to play the lead with each member troupe. Similarly scenery and costumes could be created for a production in San Francisco or New York, say, and then moved from theater to theater.

That's the idea any way. But it would seem that it would depend more or less on the consent, not to say co-operation, of the owners of the leading companies now in existence.

Arthur Casey of St. Louis thinks the idea is not so hot. He can see a great many reasons why it would probably not work. For one thing, he points out, a stock company must be an integral part of the community in which it is playing; it must have a peculiar and intimate relationship with that community—which chain control, chain management would almost preclude. Furthermore, Casey says, tastes differ widely in different cities, tastes in stars, tastes in plays and whatnot. Therefore, he maintains, the earnings of the chain would be spotty. Guy Bates Post, let us say, would do very well in four cities, but in three others he wouldn't draw.

That's what Casey feels and what he'll say if he is approached with the offer of a part in the merger

Arthur Casey of St. Louis thinks the idea is not so hot. He can see a great many reasons why it would probably not work. For one thing, he points out, a stock company must be an integral part of the community in which it is playing; it must have a peculiar and intimate relationship with that community—which chain control, chain management would almost preclude. Guy Bates Post, let us say, would do very well in four cities, but in three others he wouldn't draw.

That's what Casey feels and what he'll say if he is approached with the offer of a part in the merger. There is, of course, the glaring example of a successful chain of stock houses—10 of them, all on the Pacific Coast. Which may prove that Pacific Coast audiences all prefer the same things. Or it may prove, contrary to Mr. Casey, that the chain idea is not only possible but enormously profitable.

HOW Henry Duffy built up this chain of theaters is one of the most remarkable success stories of the contemporary stage. In 1922 he was the husband of Anne Nichols and engaged in giving her a hand with the production of "Abie's Irish Rose," when that gold mine looked like nothing so much as a futile and abandoned claim, one that would never yield a dime. Shortly after the play began to show signs of life, Miss Nichols and Duffy decided to part. She gave him $5000 in payment of his services, with which he settled up certain indebtedness connected with an earlier stock venture in which he had been involved.

A little later Duffy married Dale Winters, widow of "Big Jim" Colossimo, Chicago night club owner. She raised about $5000 in cash and with this she and her husband went to the West Coast where he opened with a stock company in old Alcazar Theater in San Francisco. Success was almost immediate. The first play produced was so popular that Duffy held it over for 14 weeks of very good business.

He now has two theaters in San Francisco, two in Oakland, one in Portland, one in Seattle, two in Los Angeles and two in Hollywood. And, surprisingly enough, the two which are in the very center of moviedom are the most profitable units in the group. Duffy clears annually, at a conservative estimate, $80,000 to $100,000.

While Casey, like most producers, is reluctant to give the figures on the success of his venture, he admits cheerfully to a very fair profit. The overhead under which he operates is double what it would have been 15 years ago; prices are what they were in 1915.

Price has undoubtedly been a large factor in Casey's success. This and the fact that clever, new plays have been chosen and produced with considerable care given to details. Casey believes, and there will be few who will dispute him, that stock which is on a two-week basis is just twice as good as stock with a weekly change of bill, which is another reason why the company at the Orpheum has been successful.

AFTER the two weeks' run of "An American Tragedy," the Casey players will do "Let Us Be Gay," Rachel Crothers' amusing comedy of love on Long Island. "Little Accident," which just closed, has been so popular that Casey is confident it would draw for at least two or three weeks more. But, since he has built up a group of regular followers, he is holding strictly to the two-week schedule.

There will probably be still another production. As planned now, Casey will bring Guy Bates Post back in the A. E. Thomas play, "Her Friend the King." And then, unless plans go badly astray, Casey will take the production to the Blackstone Theater in Chicago for a summer run of three months.

"Dracula," the mystery play from the novel by Bram Stoker, which has been seen here once before this season, will return to the American

SHAKSPEARE IN NEW YORK

Why Those Whose Early Years Were Illiterate and Who Were Never Told That the Bard of Avon Was Immortal, May Consider Themselves Fortunate.

By ROBERT LITTELL.

NEW YORK, April 12.

I OFTEN envy those whose early years were illiterate, because of the discoveries they made later, at a time when they were best able to enjoy great literature. I envy them because their childhood, and their youth, and their freshmen and sophomore years, were not spent under the yoke of elders who knew better, and exercised this superiority by oppressing them with the greatness of Goethe, the prose of Pater, the mastery of Moliere and the immortality of William Shakspeare. I envy those who have neither read, seen nor heard of Shakspeare, because they do not know he is immortal, and can therefore approach him humanly, and be humanly rewarded and surprised, and close the book or leave the theater shouting, "Why didn't anyone ever tell me about this fellow—Shakspeare, I think the name is—he's grand! He's swell! Gimme some more!"

Why did anyone ever tell me about Shakspeare? I flatter myself that I have as good taste as most people, and am as able to enjoy grand literature and swell poetry. I have enjoyed Shakspeare—to put it mildly. I would not put it other than mildly, for anyone who got up in meeting and yelped out his admiration for Shakspeare would be thought insane. Shakspeare is something like Niagara Falls, the moon or sunsets, too public and genuine an expression of admiration for whom is considered hick.

Shakspeare is something you are supposed to have swallowed in early youth, and thoroughly digested, and one doesn't go around boasting of one's digestion. Shakspeare is something you can't afford to be be discovered discovering, on pain of being set down as uneducated. And, saddest fact of all, Shakspeare is forever associated in our minds with that time of life when well-meaning men and women, usually unmarried, were trying to pass the torch of learning into hands which, on the whole, would rather have held a baseball bat.

Shakspeare is a classic, therefore, to be forgotten, once read. Shakspeare is the subject of 80,000 learned volumes in 80 languages, therefore, there is nothing more to be said about him by those of lesser learning. Shakspeare is part of one's education, therefore educational and inseparable from schoolrooms, plaster busts, variorium editions, footnotes, speeches about straining mercy to be learned by heart before Wednesday's recitation—therefore a bore.

He isn't a bore, really. Except in spots, and when clownish, and when rhetorical without poetry. He is great, he is grand, he is swell fun. But if anyone says "Shakspeare" suddenly to me, my reaction is not a kindling of the eyes and a quickening of the pulse, but a tendency to say "what of it?" And when, as frequently happens to a dramatic critic, I am informed that so and so will present "Hamlet" two weeks from tomorrow, my tendency is to groan slightly and hope that the star, or the whole cast, if necessary, will break a leg.

NOT only because I know, from sad experience, how polite and booming and buskined a performance it will be, and how uncomfortable most stage Ophelias make me feel, and how much more dust there is in Shakspearean cloaks and tights than can ever be shaken out—but also simply because I must go to see Shakspeare again, a Shakspeare so long associated with that dutiful word. I must finish the historical plays before midyears, I must be able to tell what he meant by mobbled or marbled, or gobbled or garbled queen, I must get the advice of that old Babbitt, Polonious by heart, I must • • •

I must go to see Walter Hampden or Fritz Leiber in Shakspeare, and I don't really want to.

I did go to see Fritz Leiber, and on the whole I don't regret it. The inadequacy of the actors has to be extremely opaque before the sun of that immortal master refuses to shine through. (I say immortal master—referring to Shakspeare—because that is the sort of thing one says about Shakspeare, when one says anything. What I really mean is that swell poet, that knock-out of a playwright.) There is less sun in "Richard III," and "Hamlet" is a sun we have seen too often to be still blinded by it, and what shines through "King Lear" is more like darkness and terror and volcanic pity. And as performed by one of the worst outfits possible, practically nothing at all shone through the "Julius Caesar" of Fritz Leiber's company.

Speaking with an honesty for the moment unaffected by public spirit expediency, tolerance, etc., most of these performances by Fritz Leiber's company were not good enough to deserve existence. At last one of them—"Julius Caesar"—was dreadfully and shamefully bad. But speaking with one eye on the contemporary scene, whence all but crime has fled, where Shakspeare is performed very seldom, and Michael Kalesser, Myron C. Fagan and Irving Kaye Davis a great deal too often, I suppose third rate Shakspeare is better than none. And yet when the final returns are in I shall probably be found voting that no Shakspeare is better than third rate performances of Shakspeare.

Whether the company piloted hither by Fritz Leiber is third rate or second rate, I leave to the actuaries and statisticians in matters of taste. Whatever ranking we give Fritz Leiber, the rest of his company is at least two ranks, grades or rates behind him.

I CANNOT be other than yes or no on this question. I hand it to Fritz Leiber for packing the house, for whipping together a company and directing it, for not caring about money, for caring a lot about Shakspeare, for preaching, if not always practising, that Shakspeare is meant to be played and enjoyed rather than read and inflicted, for taking some 10 principal roles with at least gusto and intelligence, and sometimes with sensitiveness. I hand him all that, and so must everyone, but my noes come near outweighing my yeses. They apply far more to his company than to him. And why repeat them. They may disappear with time, Fritz Leiber will return to these parts a year from now. And may success again attend him, and may he deserve it even better.

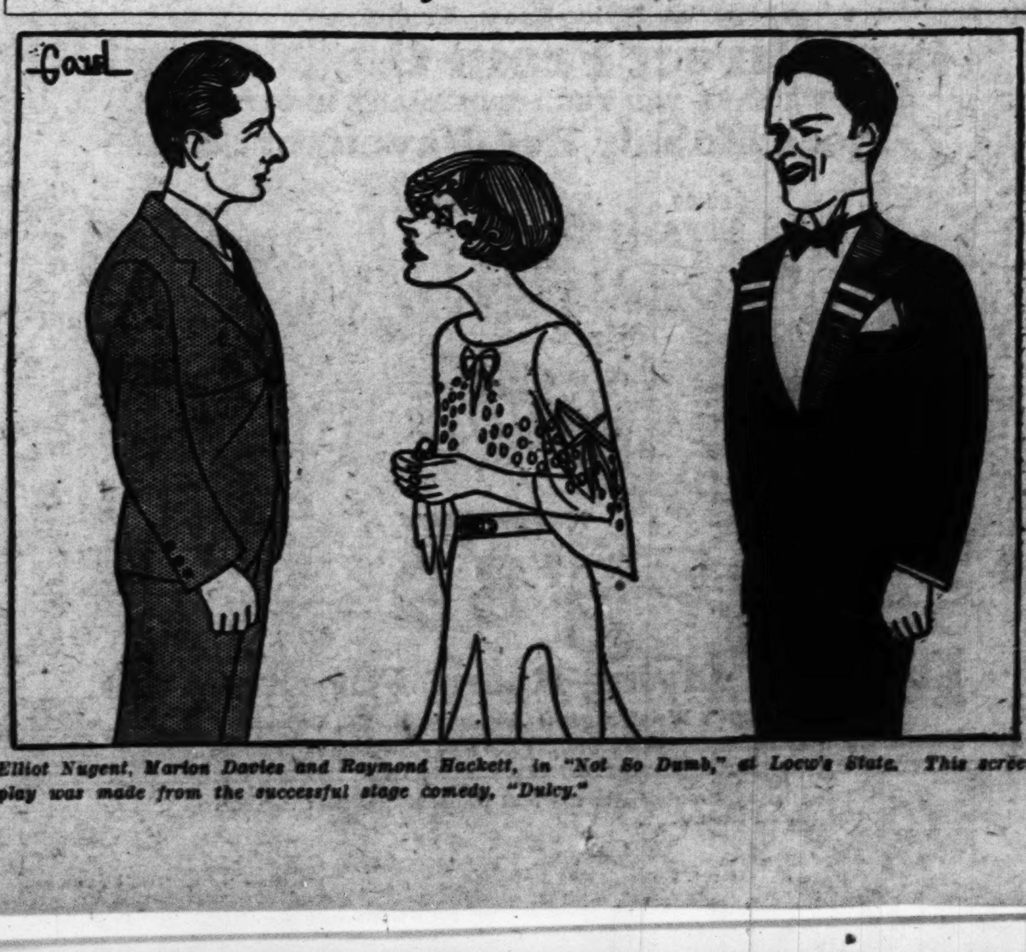
The light flurry of Shakspeare in three years ago has completely melted away. Which to my mind is a pity. I look back on the Hamlet of Basil Sydney, and the "Taming of the Shrew" of Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis, as two unusually exciting and amusing evenings, in spite of no end of faults. It wasn't so much what putting Shakspeare into dinner jackets and Ford cars did to him as what it did to the actors and to us. The fog of the schoolroom and of Eaves lifted, and we saw old lines, familiar quotations, household pets of situation, in a newer, a fresher light. The sense of duty, the obligation to respect a classic, fell like scales from our eyes, and we took the plays as grand shows, which is what they are.

I wish the experiment could be continued. Some of the plays of course could not be retailored—"Lear" for instance, and "The Tempest." Others could, and to do so would remove, in some cases, the heavy handicap of Shakspearean formality and shiftiness in the acting and direction.

Romantic Pair Reunites.

Gary Cooper and Fay Wray are appearing as a love team in "The Texan," companion picture to "The Virginian," for the first time since their co-featuring successes in "The Legion of the Condemned" and "The First Kiss."

Dulcy on the Screen



Elliot Nugent, Marion Davies and Raymond Hackett, in "Not So Dumb," at Loew's State. This screen play was made from the successful stage comedy, "Dulcy."

King Vidor's "Hallelujah"

Most Important Production Since the Shadows Began to Talk Is Introduced to St. Louis at a South Side Neighborhood Theater—the First Picture in the New Medium That Neither the Stage Nor the Silent Screen Could Duplicate.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

THE most important single production that has come out of the moving picture studios since the introduction of sound was shown last week in St. Louis. This was "Hallelujah," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture which was directed by King Vidor and acted by an All-Negro cast.

Strangely enough this picture had to ease its way into town by way of the Ritz, a neighborhood theater at Grand and Juniata, since none of those million-dollar Oriental palaces which would be expected to sponsor its initial presentation here would give it house room.

Why this should be so it is not easy to explain. Not being a specialist in the sort of ratiocinative shenanigans that moving picture magnates substitute for ordinary reasoning I will not attempt it. One would think that the local house managers would welcome an opportunity to provide its more discriminating patrons with something less offensive than the usual Hollywood piffle. In the case of "Hallelujah," perhaps they were restrained by the belief that the ordinary movie audience would not like it and the box office receipts would suffer accordingly. The reaction of the audiences at the Ritz would have provided little support for such an hypothesis.

On the night I saw the picture the theater was crowded and the audience was obviously under a strong emotional tension. There were times, of course, when individual responses to certain scenes indicated a feeling that was the direct opposite of what was being portrayed on the screen. Love scenes between the two central characters excited a great many snickers, even when their implications were tragic. But most American audiences are that way. Usually it is a sign of embarrassment. It is certainly not a sign of indifference.

THE importance of "Hallelujah" is two-fold. First of all it is a vividly articulated poetic drama, judged by any standards, and commands one's interest for the same reasons that "King Lear," "Saint Joan" or "Anna Christie" does. Secondly it represents the first complete realization of the new medium that came into existence when the shadows began to talk.

Up to this time the "talkies" have either been two-dimensional substitutes for stage plays or hybrid monstrosities that tried to combine the conventions of the naturalistic drama with those of the artificial musical comedy. The master minds of Hollywood still see nothing wrong for that matter in having a 90-piece orchestra suddenly bursting into music in the midst of a real desert, with real alkali dust and real cactus or in topping off a big dramatic climax with a mammoth ballet.

But "Hallelujah" is neither a slavish copy of a stage play nor an old-line moving picture with dialogue and sound effects inserted. It is an artistic entity executed in terms of aural and visual effects which have been logically correlated. It has both the mobility of the silent picture and the emotional force that can only be supplied by spoken words. In other words, both in its structure and its intensity this picture has fulfilled the natural function of the new medium. Neither the stage nor the silent screen can duplicate it.

Like so many great plays, the elements involved in "Hallelujah" are simple and universal. The protagonist in this drama is a young Negro farm hand who is a sort of combination Parsifal and Paphnutius and who meets his fate in the person of a mulatto girl who might be similarly compared to Thais and Kundry. Zeke goes to town to sell his cotton, meets a temptress, loses his money, kills his younger brother by an accidental shot and then in a passion of remorse turns to religion. In the role of a backwoods Billy Sunday he converts the seductress who was the original cause of his downfall only to become her victim once more when her fleshly lure becomes too much for his whirling senses. Eventually he kills her when she tries to run off with another man, serves a term on the chain gang and finally goes back to his faithful mother and father and the symbolical cotton patch.

THIS simple drama is unfolded in a world that is completely dominated by the folkways and naive superstitions of the rural Southern Negro. At the same time it is not an alien world for the basic motivating influences are such as may be found in any level of human society.

In general it is the tragedy of an individual who is beset by two opposing forces and who can find in neither one a morality strong enough to resist the other. In the particular case of Zeke, the farmhand, the struggle is complicated by the nature of his social milieu. His life has been ordered along lines of hard labor, simple pleasures, a communal family life and a simplified theology. These have their inevitable effect on a naturally emotional nature and serve to make his swinging from one emotional extreme to the other seem plausible.

In handling both the specific narrative of Zeke and the temptress and the rich background against which the story is worked out, Mr. Vidor has shown a skill that is rare in any form of art, let alone the moving pictures. The plot never lags and at the same time one never loses consciousness of the larger issues that are suggested. The close connection between religious and erotic emotions is implied time and time again but never labored. Moreover the religious emotion is shown to have its aspects of grandeur—for Vidor, having adopted the methods of the artist rather than the propagandist loses no opportunity to heighten the esthetic and dramatic effect.

Of the photography one can say that it is faultless in a pictorial sense and at the same time useful in forwarding the story. Some of the shots, particularly those showing the Negroes coming down the road at sunset, have the feathery textury of a Corot while most of the natural settings in which the pictures were made, show the result of long planning.

The cast is composed almost exclusively of naturally brilliant actors. The role of Zeke is portrayed by Daniel Hayes, a tall Negro with a beautiful singing and speaking voice. Nina Mae McKinney, a mulatto girl of striking appearance and equally striking artistic gifts, takes the part of the seductress.

The Hollywood touch is noted in only one or two minor instances. A theme song, with all the Negroid flavor that one might expect in the usual Tin Pan Alley prod-

Ben Greet Players Here on April 26 In 2 Performances

THE Ben Greet Players, with Ben Greet himself as a member of the company, is announced for two Saturday performances, a matinee and evening, April 26, at the Shubert-Rialto Theater. For the Saturday matinee "Twelfth Night" will be given and for the evening "Hamlet."

The present tour of the Ben Greet Players opened in New York City, including a performance at Columbia University and extended to the Pacific Coast.

For 40 years Ben Greet has been prominent in England for the performances which his companies have given in London, Oxford, Cambridge, Stratford-on-Avon and other places in Shakspeare's England. During the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, the Ben Greet company played on the White House grounds in Washington, the first company on whom the honor was bestowed.

Thirty Amateur Dramatic Groups In League Tourney

THIRTY amateur dramatic groups of St. Louis and vicinity have entered the first annual tournament of the Dramatic League of St. Louis, to be held at the German House, 2345 Lafayette avenue, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings, April 30, May 1 and May 2. Miss Gertrude Knott is executive director. The groups include St. Louis University, Washington University, Webster College, Lippsonian Players, Soldan High School, St. Mary Magdalene, St. Francis de Sales, Golden Goose Players and Missouri School for the Blind. Winners of the preliminary contests will enter the finals. Music will be under the direction of the Midwest Conservatory. Trophies will be awarded in the following divisions: Parish, Religious Drama, Little Theaters, High schools and Children's groups. A play will be presented in Italian by the Silvio Pellico Players, and one in German by the German Players. Guest players from out of the State include Blackfriers of the University of Arkansas, Shurtleff College of Alton, Ill., and Highland Players of Highland, Ill.

In addition to the play, contests, demonstrations and lectures will be given on selections of plays, acting, makeup, costuming, lighting and scenic effects. Olive Holbert Chaffee will have an exhibit of paintings in oil and water colors.

Four Performances of "The Twelfth Disciple"

Four performances of "The Twelfth Disciple," the new three-act play about Judas by Mrs. Ernest Sachs, the St. Louis playwright, are announced for April 21 through the twenty-fourth by the Little Theater of St. Louis, 812 Union boulevard.

A few days after these showings the complete cast and equipment of the production will depart for New York to begin preparations for a performance at the Waldorf Theater during the week of May 12. This undertaking represents the first entry of a full length St. Louis play in the first National Long Play Tournament for the Theater Arts Monthly Cup and the Samuel French award. Mrs. Sachs' "Twelfth Disciple" has already achieved national prominence by tying for first place in the National Drama League playwriting contest in 1928. It was presented for the first time last November by the Little Theater, and its forthcoming performances will show the author's latest revisions.

The Little Theater has also entered a one-act play by Edna Warren, the St. Louis playwright, in the National One-act Play Tournament for the Belasco Cup, to be held the week of May 5 at the same theater in New York. The Little Theater cast which presented this play last March will perform in New York and will remain over for parts in "The Twelfth Disciple."

VIDOR'S "HALLELUJAH" MOST IMPORTANT FILM SINCE "TALKIES" CAME IN

uct, mars one of the revival scenes and the happy ending has the effect of being forced.

If the play had come to a close with Zeke in final bondage to the law the end would have been thoroughly logical, just and at the same time artistically satisfying.

As it is the conclusion suggests that Zeke's emotional suffering had not been as profound as one had been led to believe at the time it was happening.

But even with these minor defects, it is the greatest all-talking picture that has come out of Hollywood. It deserves a wider audience than it seems likely to have in St. Louis.

AN AMERICAN TRAGEDY AT ORPHEUM—AMERICAN, SHUBERT RIALTO DARK

for one week beginning next Sunday. And some time after that the American will house "Across the World," another movie made by the Martin Johnsons. That will end the season. Likewise the Shubert-Rialto, which closed its doors on "Jenny" last night, has no further bookings and unless something very exceptional comes along will remain closed until next fall.

The original Tony Sarg Marionettes will play their annual visit to St. Louis on Friday and Saturday, April 25 and 26 giving two matinees starting at 3:30 and two evening performances starting at 8:30 in Mary Institute Hall, Lake and Waterman avenues. A revival of "Rip Van Winkle" has been chosen for this season's tour. The story of Rip Van Winkle is presented with great fidelity by the little wooden headed actors manipulated by the eight puppeteers who operate the wires which control the little figures and whose voices serve for the characters portrayed. The stage is complete with all furnishings, lighting equipment and there is music throughout.

Picture Unit Goes Into Gold Country

Ghost towns of California's famous mother lode region are again to relive occurrences which made history in the days of gold.

To this section has gone a talking picture unit from Hollywood studios to film Zane Grey's novel, "The Border Legion." Richard Arlen, Fay Wray and Jack Holt head the cast of players.

It was near Sonora, the location headquarters for the film company, that California's richest gold strikes were made. In this region, banded outlawry gave rise to the famous Vigilante movement.

"The Border Legion" is a story of outlaw operations in the gold diggins of the early west.

OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

A Talkie Made in Five Different Languages

"Our Gang" Ingenue Grows Up And Makes Good

HOLLYWOOW, Cal., April 12.

TWO motion picture companies are simultaneously committed to the filming of the same story, Tolstoi's "Resurrection," a spectacle not often confronting Hollywood.

United Artists announced the story as Dolores Del Rio's next and it happens that the Tiffany studio already has started work on the picture. It has twice been made silently, once with Miss Del Rio as the star.

DOLORES DEL RIO

The fact that the copyright law no longer protects Tolstoi's novel makes the two productions of "Resurrection" possible.

This month's niche in our mythical hall of fame goes to Barbara Leonard, who has just played the leading rôle in five pictures all at the same time.

"Monsieur le Fox" was filmed in five languages—English, Spanish, German, French and Italian—and Miss Leonard appeared in all of them in the leading role. In the five pictures she had four different leading men. Gilbert Roland was in two versions, the English and the Spanish.

Miss Leonard was born in San Francisco and educated abroad. Heretofore she has had only several small parts in pictures.

Hal Roach, who took a vacation from his own studio to direct this picture at another, "shot" the five versions in the same length of time it ordinarily takes to film one.

The reason for that is the greatest amount of time spent in making a picture is taken in changing camera angles, adjusting lights and testing apparatus. Hardly more than 15 minutes a day is required, nor can it be given, for acting and speaking the dialogue.

A very few pictures have been made in two languages, English and usually Spanish, but "Monsieur le Fox" is the first to be done in five. If the experiment is successful no doubt many others, when adaptable, will also be made in five or even more languages.

He who has acquired a cosmopolitan appetite may have it satisfied easily in and around Hollywood.

Because many from other countries are drawn here by the movies, there are cafes and restaurants serving dishes to please the taste of almost every nationality.

Three Russian cafes, one operated by a former General in the Czar's guards, one Theodore Lodijensky, are popular. He also is an actor when a pompous Russian type is required and then he shortens his name to Lodi.

Two factors, illness contracted by Edwina Booth in Africa and wholesale revision of the dialog, have held up progress on the picture "Trader Horn" since the company returned to this country three months ago.

Miss Booth, who is playing the character of "Nina T——" in the Trader's weird story, is said to be suffering from malaria and for a while she was quite ill. She was much better a few days ago. Sunstroke also is said to have affected her.

Although Miss Booth was vaccinated against jungle diseases, as were the other 30-odd members of the company that spent seven months in Africa, she became ill there and only constant medical attention allowed her to continue in the role.

Harry Carey who is impersonating the Trader, warded off malaria, he says, by spurning accepted preventives and using an Italian patent medicine. A few weeks ago he became ill and fearing he had the disease he again took the medicine and recovered in a few days.

Much of the dialog has been rewritten by a half dozen writers, including Maxwell Anderson and Lawrence Stallings, working at different times. Three months' work, consisting of interiors and close-ups, remain.

SINCE he started in motion picture work 20 years ago, Hobart Bosworth has kept a complete record of every film in which he has worked in any capacity. The record is typewritten and single spaced. The pages are attached one to another in a long strip. Today it measures six and a half feet in length. He was last seen with John Barrymore in "General Crack."

One of the many telephone girls in Los Angeles has been serving as a personal technical director for Zasu Pitts. She is Mabel Bauman, one of the switchboard operators at the Paramount studios.

Her duties for the past few days have been to teach Miss Pitts the technique of handling a switchboard for her role in Edmund Goulding's "The Devil's Holiday," in which Nancy Carroll is starred.

Practically all of Miss Pitts' scenes take place at a switchboard in a large hotel. In order that the actress would know how to handle these duties, Director Goulding had Miss Bauman transferred from her department to his set for these scenes.

COLLEEN MOORE, accompanied by her mother, has been flitting from island to peninsula on the East Coast, dividing snatches of her brief vacation between various Floridan and Cuban resorts. She intends to take a brief look-in on New York before returning to this dizzy land of makeup and make-believe. Colleen's younger brother Cleve, will soon be heard here in the leading juvenile role of "June Moon."

There's no more delectable little person hereabouts than Mary Kornman. You remember the golden-haired sweetheart of the "Our Gang" comedies, when they were in their prime? Well, Mary has grown up. Just completed three years in an Orpheum headline vaudeville act, and is back in Hollywood. At the moment, she is sitting pretty, has a signed five year contract from one studio awaiting her own signature, and is being considered for important roles in two big productions besides.

A Turkish cafe in the heart of Hollywood boasts of its one kind of meat—mutton—served six different ways. The meat, like the rest of the food, is cooked in butter and is quite rich and heavy.

There are a number of French cafes and one in particular has become famous for its tasty preparation of a delicate little fish called sand dab.

If one can eat spaghetti without embarrassment he can take in one of many Italian restaurants and there are an even greater number of Spanish kitchens, popular however, long before the movies came here.

There are also many red-fronted chop suey cafes, one flight up as usual, a number of kosher restaurants and a few "sight-seeking eateries."

In the last class are Henry's said to be jointly owned by Charlie Chaplin, and the Brown Derby, run by Herbert Somborn, one of Gloria Swanson's former husbands. Both are favorite luncheon spots for actors who like to be seen. Visitors, knowing this, eat in these places also.

THE Duncan Sisters, through at M-G-M, are reported about to start a series of short subjects under their own banner... Fox is about to do "Women of All Nations" as a sequel to "The Cock-Eyed World"—perhaps we'll have next "The Streets of Cairo." Universal stopped production of "What Women Want," and gave Mary Nolan a good long rest because of temperament, substituting Pauline Starke for the role, it is said.... C. Gardner Sullivan, victim of Universal's present lethargy, has shipped his Corona to R-K-O... Speaking of Universal Uncle Carl Laemmle recently placed the complete management of the studio in the hands of his young son, Carl Jr., better known to the studio "yes men" as merely "junior" ....Someone — I think it was Bert Wheeler, has suggested a new title for "All Quiet on the Western Front"—"Junior's End."

NEW YORK, April 12.

I WONDER if others, too—

Like the odor of burning leaves and raw fur.

Are shocked when they find autographed books in secondhand stores.

Enjoy feeling sorry for themselves and playing the martyr.

Sit up all night reading silly detective stories.

Are flattered at the hand wave of a policeman.

Peek at themselves in window mirrors.

Feel that Peggy Joyce's exploitation is rather tiresome.

Like E. Phillips Oppenheim for "train reading" best of all.

Find Edna Ferber's "Cimarron" her best novel.

Have been blackmailed by someone they befriended.

Have found rhetorical beauty in the third chapter of Acts.

Know the joy of long daily walks.

Believe ghosts are absurd imaginings but will not walk through a cemetery at night.

Are not interested whether Mayor Walker arrives early or late at the theater.

Look upon Broadway as a thoroughly phoney street.

Believe that the cry of theatrical producers to abolish ticket speculating is pure fakery.

Have a lot of real fun on the water wagon and find the first year the hardest.

Lie about their age after 40.

Enjoy the glib chatter of waitresses in cheap restaurants.

A javelin hurled by Robert Quillen in the Fountain Inn Tribune: "Henry Mencken says the honeymoon is vulgar and nasty because everybody knows what it is for. As a matter of fact, the honeymoon was instituted and continues because unsophisticated and pure-minded young people beginning the most wonderful and most sacred experience of their lives—timid, tender, adoring, protective—are eager to escape the lascivious eyes and filthy mouths of people who think of them as Mencken does."

COSTLIER PRODUCTIONS AT MUNICIPAL THEATER

Prices, However, Remain the Same for 1930 Open Air Opera Season.

Although the Municipal Theater Association plans to spend more money than ever on its open-air productions in Forest Park this summer, offering 12 musical works new to the Municipal Theater stage, admission prices will not be increased. The management anticipates that its new policy will result in increased attendance sufficient to cover cost and avoid a repetition of last year's record deficit.

Sigmund Romberg's new operetta, "Nina Rosa," now in its third month in Chicago with a top price of $4.40, will open the Municipal Theater season on Friday night, May 30, under the regular Municipal Opera scale of box seats for $2 and reserved chairs for $1.50, $1, 50 cents and 25 cents.

More than $10,000 in season ticket reservations have been received at the Theater Association's offices in the Arcade Building. Advance ticket reservations now total $60,000. Until April 20, last year's season subscribers may renew their seat locations; after that date seats will be assigned in the order that subscriptions are received.

Milton I. Shubert, the association's new general productions manager, will start active production in about 10 days, beginning with the selection of a chorus of 84 from more than 700 applicants. "Nina Rosa" will be produced here with the principals, scenery and costumes of the Chicago company. Twenty of the original chorus will augment the Municipal Opera chorus.

Production rights for eight other musical works have been obtained and three remain to be selected to complete the season's repertory. The works definitely selected include "Show Boat," "The Desert Song," "New Moon," "The Circus Princess," "The Red Robe," "Alone at Last," "Maytime" and "Blossom Time."

Admission prices, the association points out, have remained the same since 1921 although the average weekly production cost has increased from $18,400 in 1921 to $30,000 in 1929. Last year, the box office receipts dropped off $35,000 and the association lost $14,431, its largest deficit.

Prof. Wuerpel to Be Speaker.

Prof. E. H. Wuerpel, director of the School of Fine Arts, Washington University, will discuss present day tendencies in art at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Women's Advertising Club at Hotel Statler tomorrow noon.

ST. LOUIS REPUBLICAN CLUB, HARMONY BODY, ORGANIZED

Walter J. G. Neun Chosen Head at Meeting in Office of Hugh K. Wagner.

A new Republican harmony organization, to be known as the St. Louis Republican Club, was launchedy Friday night at a meeting in the office of Hugh K. Wagner, attorney, in the Title Guaranty Building.

Application for a pro forma decree of incorporation has been filed in Circuit Court with temporary officers listed as follows: Walter J. G. Neun, president of the Board of Aldermen, president; Charles F. Meier, publisher of the Politician, a party journal, secretary; Henry P. Schroeder, member of the Board of Education, treasurer; and Albert L. Schweitzer, prosecuting attorney, chairman of the board of directors.

A committee on organization and by-laws, consisting of Wagner, chairman; Schweitzer, Schroeder and J. F. O. Reller, real estate man prominent in the North St. Louis Business Men's Association, was appointed.

The idea, as explained by Meier, who presided at the meeting, and others, is to promote harmony within the party in the city. Club rooms will be maintained and the body will function under the general scheme of the Union League clubs in the East.

Among those who have signed to join the new club are: Circuit Judge M. Hartmann, Alroy S. Phillips, former chairman of the State Workmen's Compensation Board; Lee Orcutt, Hans Wulff, Samuel I. Sievers, former Circuit Judge J. Hugo Grimm, A. R. Schollmeyer, real estate dealer; George T. Hackman, former Circuit Judge Carl Kimmel, Albert Huber, legislator, Third District; Robert J. Kratky, former campaign manager for Mayor Miller; Thomas S. PLANE TO PATROL POWER LINES OF UNION ELECTRIC Company Orders $55,000 Tri-Motored Machine; Will Carry 8 Passengers, 2 Pilots.

A tri-motored monoplane is to be used by the Union Electric Light and Power Co. to patrol transmission lines and for surveys for new power lines leading from the company's hydro-electric project on the Osage River.

Purchase of the plane, which cost $55,000 and has accommodations for eight passengers and two pilots, was announced yesterday.

The ship will be delivered here within 10 days and will be housed at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

FOUR BULLET HOLES FOUND IN ABANDONED AUTOMOBILE

A Nash sedan bearing four bullet holes was found abandoned late yesterday on the Bluff road near Centerville Station, by Illinois State Highway Police.

Two bullets had struck the rear of the machine and two had been fired into the right front door. Absence of rust indicated the holes had been made recently, patrolmen said.

License plates issued to E. N. Thomas of Canton, Ill., were on the car and under the seat, plates issued for a machine of another make to a Chicago rental agency were found. No blood stains were evident.

Grim Finish of a Romance That Led Around the World

Why Dr. Ernest Watzl, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Mary Horvath McGranahan, His Secretary, Finally Took Refuge in a Suicide Pact.

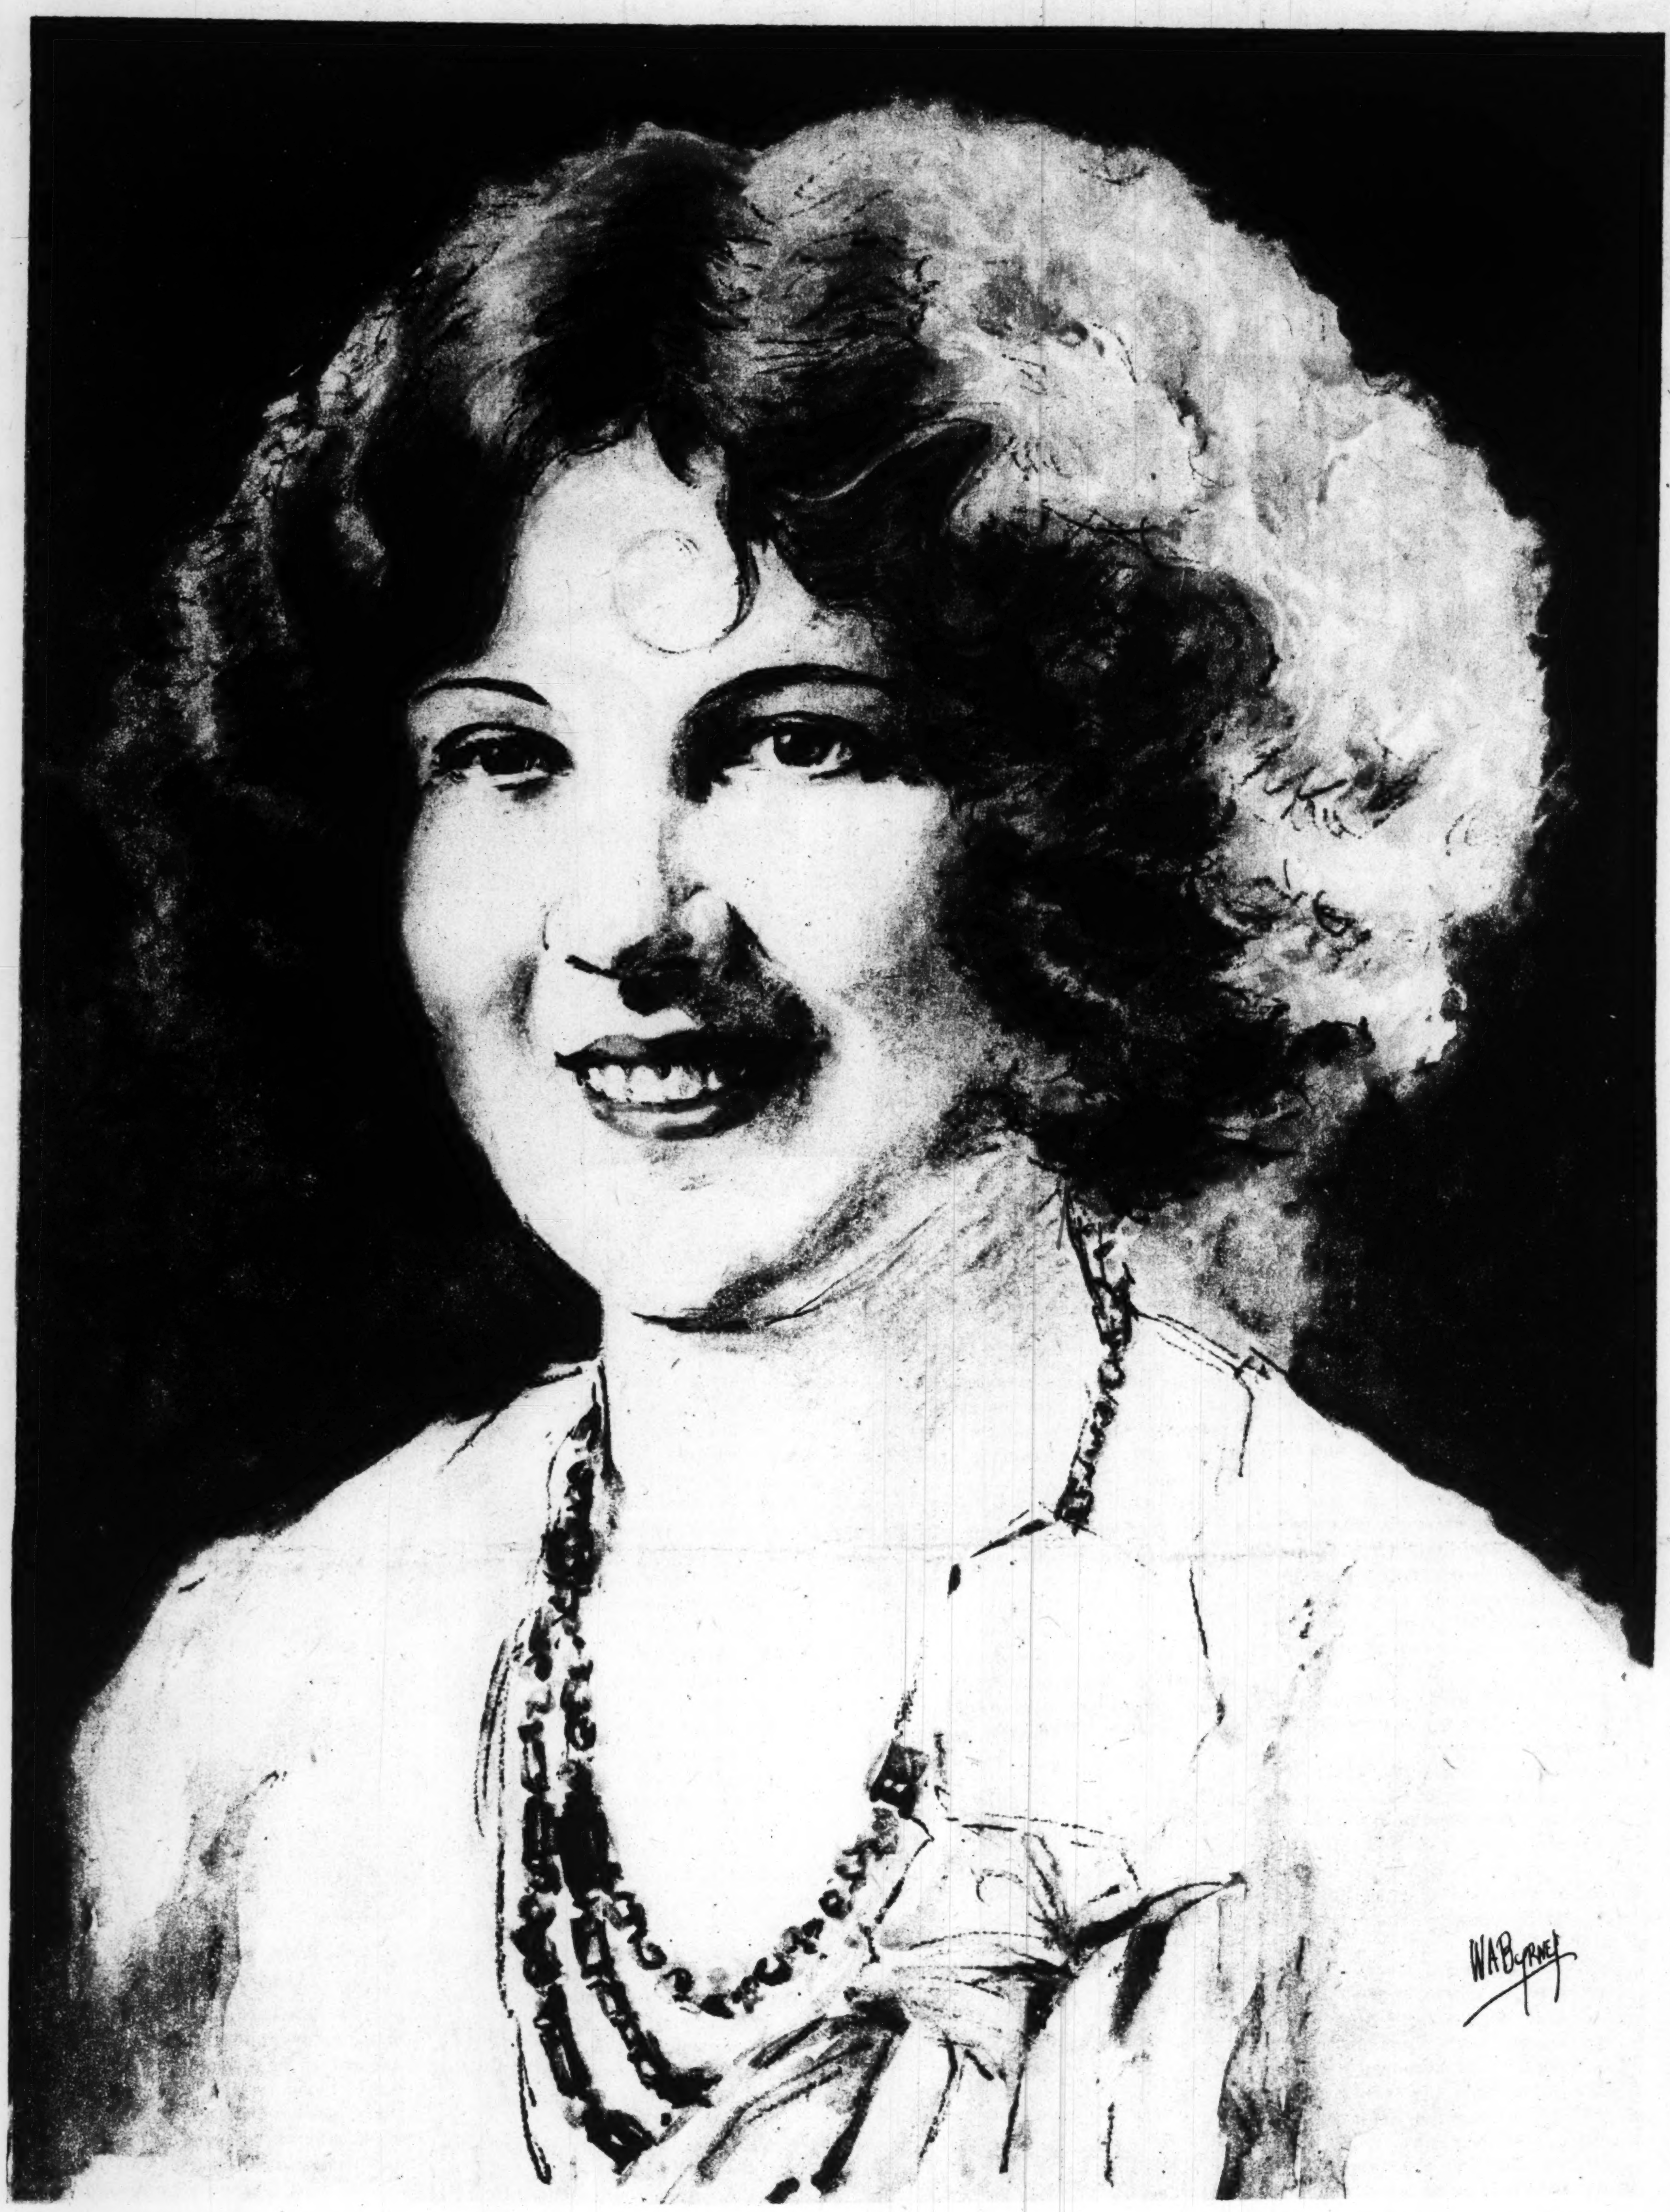
CLEVELAND, Ohio.

LOVE nests, three divorce suits, an alienation suit, a bigamous marriage, $60,000 of life insurance, a mysterious disappearance from a flaming automobile, an elopement that led almost around the world and a flyer into East Indian philosophy are some of the threads which have come to light in the tangled romance of Dr. Ernest Watzl, Cleveland chemist, and Mrs. Mary McGranahan, his secretary, a romance which ended in a suicide pact and death for both in the royal suite of a fashionable Vienna hotel a few weeks ago.

There are many tangled threads besides these. Indeed, the whole affair from beginning to end seems to have been tied up in a maze of complications which became more complicated as the romance progressed and which finally could be straightened out only by the death of the lovers. They are saying around here that trafficking with some mystic philosophy had a lot to do with the suicide pact. But it seems hardly necessary to resort to mystic philosophy for an explanation. There were enough factors without this. The most logical assumption seems to be that they were merely seeking a graceful way out of a bad mess. They were barred by their bigamous marriage from returning to America, where they could make a living. They were rebuked by the world for deserting their families. They were at the end of their financial resources and were too proud to appeal to Dr. Watzl's parents in Vienna for aid. Besides these things there was Dr. Watzl's family to consider—his wife and two children abandoned in America. He hadn't shown them much consideration thus far. He would show them some at the last. And he did that. Acquaintances say it was a graceful and considerate act, everything considered. He moved up the time of his suicide a few days in order that his wife and children might be able to collect his $60,000 of life insurance. Had he waited a day longer, policies totaling $35,000 would have lapsed.



Mary Horvath McGranahan.

WHEN Dr. Watzl and his bigamous wife were found dead in the Hotel Sacher in the Austrian capital, it was the first that had been heard of them officially since their mysterious disappearance last November. They had traveled half-way around the world as Johann and Josefa Kropej Flassak and had registered under these names at the hotel. Documents in their possession, however, quickly revealed their true identities. It was on a Monday morning they were found after hotel employes had battered down their door. For two days they had lived gayly. They had gone to the theaters and the cabarets and on little tours into the neighboring mountains. They had rented the most expensive suite in the hotel and had ordered expensive meals. Then, on Sunday night, noises suspiciously like shots were heard in their chamber. That was why the attendants battered down the door next day when no sign of life was observed in the place.

The doctor had made a neat job of it with his Austrian Army automatic. Both had been drilled cleanly through the heart with steel-tipped bullets. The weapon, the same one he had carried with him as a Captain in the Austrian Army during the World War, lay beside the bodies. It contained two discharged cartridges.

The end of the trail found the couple penniless. At theaters and smart cabarets they had spent, in their last two days of life, the last of the $5000 they had started out with, leaving their hotel bill unpaid and $35,000 of life insurance policies hanging by a hair, as it were, depending for validity on Dr. Watzl's death before midnight that very night. At midnight the policies would have lapsed because of non-payment of premiums. Death won the decision by possibly an hour.

Letters to various relatives and acquaintances were left, letters which told of the strange odyssey of the last five months, but no provision was made for disposal of their bodies beyond the request that they be cremated and the ashes buried together. This request was denied by the doctor's parents. They said it would be a disgrace to bury the ashes together, but back in Cleveland the abandoned wife said she didn't see how it could make any diference. The two had lived together for five months and had died together. Why bother about separating the ashes?

But Mrs. Marie Watzl was too broad-minded, friends said. She wasn't even bitter against the woman with whom her husband had run away. She said she regarded the tragic romance as something very beautiful in spite of its sordid last chapter. And even the last chapter she thought she understood. Many acquaintances said they couldn't grasp her point of view.

Mrs. Watzl was ill, confined to her bed with tonsilitis, when news of the double suicide reached Cleveland, but she received it calmly and talked graciously to reporters who went to her home. She wasn't altogether surprised, she said. She had been half expecting something of the kind. For more than a year before his disappearance her husband had been acting strangely. He seemed to be developing an exaggerated love for the center of the stage. His delusions of grandeur were getting out of hand. He told her about his escapades with women, real and imaginary. Characteristics of vanity which he had always had, such as that of wearing a monocle, were becoming more conspicuous.

Dr. Watzl always had been a sort of male butterfly. He loved the glamorous and tried to be glamorous himself. He came to Cleveland first in 1912. He was a young Heidelberg graduate then, just out of college with his diploma and a picturesque assortment of dueling scars. The Austrian Government had sent him to America to do chemical research in American industrial plants.

HE was popular in Cleveland from the first. He radiated good humor and amiability. He was tall and agile and rather distinguished-looking. At dances his grace and gallantry charmed the girls, and his fund of anecdotes and suavity of manner distinguished him among the men. He was the life of every party. It was during his first stay in Cleveland that he and Mrs. Watzl were married. She says now that she expected escapades when she married him — he was a Viennese. But she thought she would be able to understand and put up with his attentions to other women.

When the World War broke out in 1914, Dr. Watzl was called back to Austria and his wife went with him to Vienna. Throughout the war she lived there while he served as a Captain in a liquid-fire unit on the Italian front. It was there the first child of the couple was born.

After the war, they came back to Cleveland, where the young scientist plunged into the chemical problems presented by water purification. He brought back with him several valuable secret formulas and was soon riding the crest of a prosperity wave.

It is said now there is indication that some of his inventions and secret formulas were of doubtful character, inasmuch as an Austrian inventor, Dominik Fillier, has claimed that Watzl made a fraudulent attempt to patent under his own name certain devices which Fillier had invented and intrusted to Watzl as representative.

His flair for painting first brought him into contact with Mrs. McGranahan, the wife of James L. McGranahan, a youthful clerk. Watzl maintained a studio in an apartment house and Mrs. McGranahan sometimes served as his model. She was about 20 years old, small, dainty and very attractive. She had reddish blond hair and captivating blue eyes. Watzl became deeply enamored and engaged the young woman as his secretary. Mrs. Watzl knew of his infatuation but says she thought it would blow over. McGranahan knew of it also, it seems, but he was less philosophical. He objected strenuously to his wife's practice of posing for Watzl in the nude and he threatened suit for divorce. The couple separated. Then, last November, came the disappearance of both artist and model.

On October 27, Dr. Watzl left Cleveland to go to Philadelphia, where he was to take a position as a city consulting engineer. He left his wife and two small daughters, Herta and Jane, behind. He would send for them later. Almost daily he wrote home, telling of his progress with a new water-purification process and on November 7 he sent an enthusiastic letter saying he had an appointment with "the big ones at the City Hall." He added that he expected to start back to Cleveland that evening.

THAT night, passengers on a west-bound train saw a flaming automobile beside the banks of the Schuylkill River near Sanatoga, Pa. Other passersby who tried to investigate were driven back by the heat and when the flames had subsided they found two battered cans which had contained liquid oxygen. It was Dr. Watzl's car, but where was Dr. Watzl?

For days police sought clews, weighed all the facts and then discarded the theory of accident. Investigation of Watzl's Philadelphia connections led to the discovery of "bad associates" and the theory that he had been kidnaped or murdered by "political racketeers" whose prize was some valuable secret formula. The mystery deepened when it was learned that a man giving the name of Watzl and answering the chemist's description had tried to buy a German birth certificate from a Philadelphia man for the admitted purpose of forging a passport.

The next development was the disappearance of Mrs. McGranahan. She vanished on December 8. A few days later a premium of $360 on Watzl's two insurance policies was paid, but that was the last hint any of his Cleveland acquaintances had that he was still alive or in this country. It was surmised that he and Mrs. McGranahan had eloped to Europe.

Three broken homes lay in their wake as the lovers took their departure on their ill-fated honeymoon. One, of course, was that of Watzl, where the deserted wife struggled to support two small children. The second was that of McGranahan. He promptly filed suit for divorce and, in a suit against Watzl, asked for $100,000 for alienation of his wife's affections. The third broken home was that of Mrs. McGranahan's parents, Paul and Julia Horvath. Mary's romance was responsible for their trouble, too. During the Cleveland phase of the Watzl-McGranahan affair, it seems, Horvath had observed the trend of events and had repeatedly urged his wife to interfere. Mary was conducting herself so improperly and it was her mother's place to warn her, Horvath said. But the mother had refused to take a hand in it. Dissension continued until Mrs. Horvath took her two minor children and left. Later she sued for a divorce and he filed a cross petition.

DETAILS of the elopement and the travels of the fleeing pair were not known until after the news of their death in Vienna was announced. Then it was disclosed that they were bigamously married in St. Louis last December 30 under the names of Johann Flassak and Josefa Kropej, the names used on their passports. Previously they had rented a furnished room at 5133 Washington boulevard (St. Louis) and had booked passage to Europe by way of Seattle, Shanghai and Marseilles. They were married by a St. Louis Justice of the Peace, Harry Pfeifer.

Letters found in their room in Vienna gave further particulars concerning their travels and misfortunes, and one note from Watzl indicated that, after all, his last thoughts were of the welfare of his wife and children.

Explaining that he had "arranged" his automobile accident in Pennsylvania and his subsequent disappearance, Watzl wrote as follows:

"I first went to New York where I bought a false passport in the name of Flassak . . . I was secretly married to Mary McGranahan. Fearing recognition, we decided to go to the western coast and take a steamer across the Pacific. We did so, sailing for Tokio, where I hoped to find a job but quickly realized there was no chance. So we went to India.

"Here we bought jewelry and trinkets which will be found in our luggage. Leaving India, we went to London, but pushed on to Vienna. The $5000 I took from my bank at Philadelphia after my automobile escapade was soon eaten up.

"We were faced with two alternatives; either to go to my parents and relatives here, confess my misdemeanors and ask for assistance or to commit suicide. I preferred the latter.

"Knowing the custom of insurance companies, I realized that my wife would be unable to cash my policy of $35,000 unless she could establish my death officially. But I also knew that the claim would fail if the premiums were not paid regularly to my death. (The premium on $25,000 was not yet due and this policy was in no immediate danger of lapsing.)

"Then I remembered the insurance installment falling due tomorrow which I am unable to meet. Thus my wife will be robbed unless I die today. I am, therefore, going today, before the premium is due."

Thus came the grim finish. A few days later Dr. Watzl's body was cremated and Mary McGranahan's body was buried alone in a Vienna cemetery. She was denied even the cremation she had requested because cremation was offensive to her mother's religious sentiments.

Science Probes the MYSTERIES of SLEEP

Dr. Donald A. Laird Discusses the Result of a Year's Experiment, Conducted at Colgate University, With the Assistance of Five Technicians and Six Human Guinea Pigs.

By DONALD A. LAIRD

Director Psychological Laboratory, Colgate University

This is the first published account of a year of rigorous experiment which occupied the major time of Dr. Laird, assisted by five technicians and the services of six "human guinea pigs." One scientist, working alone, would require almost a lifetime to obtain the findings that this group investigation has yielded in a year of concentrated work in delving into the mysteries of sleep.

DR. LAIRD.

SINCE Rip Van Winkle shattered the All-American long-distance sleep record with a continuous night's rest of about 175,000 hours, many of our competitive citizens have been trying for marks of an opposite sort — in the short - sleep sprints. Some seem able to get along on unusually small amounts of sleep. I have known a few of these champions.

Since Edison gave the world the electric bulb, many theorists have been experimenting with the idea that it is a waste of time to go to bed, and that sleep should be prohibited by another amendment to the Constitution of these United States. By and large, there are more theories of sleep than a magician has rabbits in his hat—at least half a dozen for every known fact.

But we have found out some things after rigorous experimentation on six "human guinea pigs" in the persons of half a dozen Colgate University volunteers under the eye of five student technicians and myself. One scientist working alone would require almost a lifetime to obtain the rather surprising data that this group investigation yielded in a single year of concentrated work.

The first question we all want answered about sleep is, how much of it do we need? Among medical men the answer is that most of us need more than we are getting, and they cite the fact of our having an alarm clock wake us as evidence that we do not get all the sleep nature wants us to have.

BEFORE the question of how much sleep can be answered with scientific precision it is necessary first to measure what sleep does for the body and mind. It appears that fatigue of the preceding day is recovered from during the night's rest. So it may be that the person taking slight sleep losses every night has an accumulation of unrecovered fatigue. Possibly the person doing little work to cause fatigue may not need as much as the orthodox eight hours.

As these and many other similar practical questions are raised, we can see that the first step in answering our main question is to find whether sleep does yield any recovery from so-called fatigue effects, and, if it does, just how much recovery occurs after different intervals of sleep. So the task to which we have given many daylight hours and many, many nighttime hours has been to measure accurately how we recover from fatigue during a typical night's sleep.

The first test was to learn, on waking our human guinea pigs, what dreams they had been having. This was off our main line of attack, but since the chance presented itself we made use of it and discovered returns to be of more than passing interest. Psychologists maintain that we dream every instant of the night, and we found that our boys could recall as many dreams after having one hour of sleep as after six, showing that there seems to be no one hour when dreams are most likely to occur and confirming the psychoanalysts as opposed to those who maintain that we dream most the last hour or two of sleep.

HOW much sleep do you need to be able to remember the most dreams?

According to our tests, after one hour of sleep you will be able to remember as many dreams as you can after eight. But there is more to sleep than recalling dreams. So let us get on to the experiments that deal directly with recovery from the day's fatigue.

The first of these measured how quickly muscles can be moved upon a signal. For our hard-working sleeper, the signal was a click on a telegraph sounder, the response being to lift the finger from the telegraph key as quickly as possible after hearing the click. Exactly how many thousandths of a second this response required was measured by a Marietta chronoscope, the measurements being checked against a tuning fork.

The sleeper on the job who had been waked after from one to six hours of peaceful sleep and thoroughly aroused sat erect at the telegraph sounder. J. C. Anderson, supervisor in the laboratory, with the chronoscope behind a screen, called "Ready" and then said "Mississippi" to himself, while the human guinea pig, waiting for the next signal, became alert. As soon as Anderson had said "Mississippi" he called loudly, "Now!" Then, counting one-two to himself, he pressed the lever that produced the click and that started the chronoscope.

All over in 10 seconds! But the tense 10 seconds had to be conducted with the precision of a big-gun navy crew.

Ten seconds more in which the subject relaxed, followed by Anderson's audible "Ready," pause, "Now!" Another reaction time measurement taken. Again and again the same test.

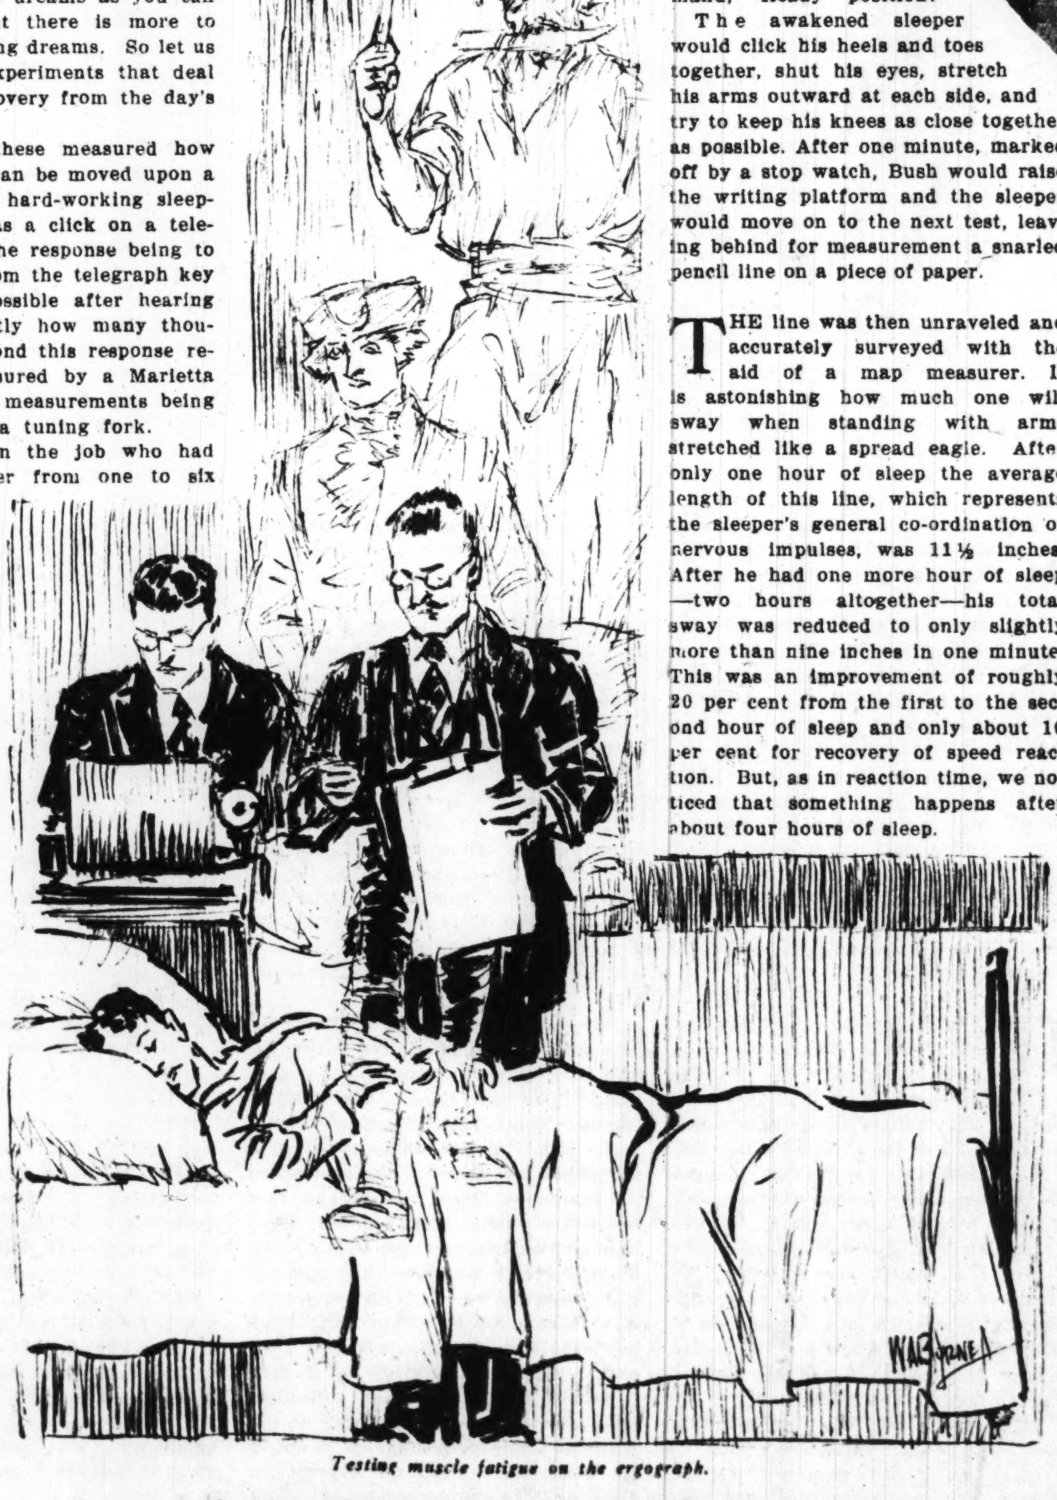
How much sleep did the boys need to recover all the reaction speed that rest would bring?

After four hours practically every bit of recovery that sleep will bring in this function had occurred. The last two or four hours did not help reaction time appreciably. So that, if these boys wanted only to recover speed of reaction, four hours of sleep each night would be enough.

But more is expected from sleep than recovery of reaction speed. The next test was for co-ordination. Wearing a helmet with a modern automatic pencil instead of a gold-plated spike topping it off, the boy stepped under a small platform that held a fresh piece of white paper on its under side. With the height of the platform carefully adjusted so that the pencil point would make a tracing of every sixteenth of an inch that the awakened sleeper swayed. Herbert Bush, who devised the apparatus, standardized the height for each of our hard-working sleepers and conducted the tests, would command, "Ready—position!"

The awakened sleeper would click his heels and toes together, shut his eyes, stretch his arms outward at each side, and try to keep his knees as close together as possible. After one minute, marked off by a stop watch, Bush would raise the writing platform and the sleeper would move on to the next test, leaving behind for measurement a snarled pencil line on a piece of paper.

THE line was then unraveled and accurately surveyed with the aid of a map measurer. It is astonishing how much one will sway when standing with arms stretched like a spread eagle. After only one hour of sleep the average length of this line, which represents the sleeper's general co-ordination of nervous impulses, was 11½ inches. After he had one more hour of sleep—two hours altogether—his total sway was reduced to only slightly more than nine inches in one minute. This was an improvement of roughly 20 per cent from the first to the second hour of sleep and only about 10 per cent for recovery of speed reaction. But, as in reaction time, we noticed that something happens after about four hours of sleep.



Testing muscle fatigue on the ergograph.

Determining fatigue recovery of the eye by color rotor.

How much sleep is necessary to bring recovery in this kind of co-ordination? After four hours practically no more recovery can be found. But there are benefits to be received from sleep other than speed in reaction time and a fine co-ordination, and we may really need to work more than four hours on our daily sleeping job. Let's see what the next test reveals.

From the co-ordination stand the wakened sleeper progressed to a small color mixer—in which disks of overlapping red and black were revolved by an electric motor at high speed and which Gibby Moore, operator of the test, could change in proportion by moving a small lever. This mixer was to measure the accuracy with which a sleeper can discriminate color shades.

Peering intently with one eye through a small ⅜-inch inside diameter tube, our human guinea pig saw a standard color made up of one-fourth red and three-fourths black disk. In the lower half of the tube he saw a variable mixture of red and black changed by a movable lever. The job was to get the upper and lower halves to look alike.

Astonishing results came from this. Generally thought to be a good fatigue test, we found that with it the boys on the average did exactly as well on only one hour of sleep as on three or six. Which may mean that only an hour of sleep is required to recover the function this tested. We can only conjecture now and study later, which shows why that really scientific book on sleep will not be written this year.

FROM this Marietta color variator the sleepers were promoted to a work measurer or ergograph, which is usually thought to be a measure of the capacity of muscle to withstand fatigue. The sleep-worker slipped the middle finger of his left hand into a metal finger cot, to which was connected a stout fishline that passed over a pulley and carried a weight of 2.2 pounds. James Lewis started a metronome beating once a second, adjusted to the fishline a delicate mechanism for marking on a moving strip of paper the length of each finger pull, and called "Ready—go!"

On each stroke of the metronome the human guinea pig pulled the weight and kept pulling it with one finger until he could not budge those 2.2 pounds even half an inch because of finger-muscle fatigue. Red in the face and puffing in a desperate effort to move the weight, after about forty lifts he invariably would reach the breaking point.

CAN you lift a weight more times after four hours of sleep than after one?

Again we find a little surprise. For whether our men had one hour of sleep or six, on the average they fatigued just as quickly.

Which may mean that there is a tremendously rapid recovery in this particular function during the first hour of sleep, as we suspect now for discrimination of color shades. Perhaps if the sleep-workers had been doing heavy physical labor during the day we would have discovered greater improvement after two hours of sleep than after one. Now to leave the physical for the mental world and to take a look at the wheels in our human guinea pigs' heads.

First, we gave them a learning test that consisted of a geometrical code into which they had to translate sets of four numbers. Below the code, which was printed at the top of a sheet of paper, were two long columns of the numbers to be translated at top speed for only three minutes.

Again the old four-hour bugaboo appeared! For in this test we found as much improvement in speed of translation at the end of this short rest period as after six hours of sleep.

But as for accuracy, that was another story, which makes us worry less about the four-hour bugaboo. Because, although the men were just as accurate in translating this code after one hour of sleep as after two, from then on they showed greater proportionate skill until, after six hours of sleep, they were almost twice as accurate as after only a single hour. So, while they ceased to gain speed after four hours of sleep, they kept gaining accuracy so that at the end of six sleep hours they were about 25 per cent more accurate than after four.

Obviously, then, you get mental dividends from investing in more than four short hours of sleep.

This was shown even more forcibly in the next "skull" test, usually called a test of attention. This required the sleepers on the job to count the number of dots in irregular groupings ranging from forty to eighty dots. The men could not use either finger or pencil to aid them, and stopwatches totaled the time they took to count.

Every sleep hour brought added improvement in this rigorous test, and after six hours they still were getting on, although the greatest gain came between the first and second hours. Here again, four hours of sleep only would have lost the very considerable improvement that takes place after that span.

How much sleep do we need?

Well, what do we want from sleep? If just ordinary reaction, or co-ordination or learning speed, possibly four hours are enough. But if we want greater learning accuracy or improvement in taxing mental functions, then indications are that twice four hours are none too many for the average man to put in on his job of sleeping.

But when all is said, this episode in the life of Christ is and will remain obscure. Half of a terse chapter in the Gospel according to St. Matthew tells us all we know about it.

Toy horse of wood.

Hardwood early Egyptian hair comb.

Recent researches by American archeologists in the ruins of an old Egyptian town have thrown a flood of new light on how the common people lived in the villages and small cities of Egypt during the time the Holy Family sought refuge there. Out of the dust of centuries they have dug the remains of the little houses of sun-baked brick where the folk lived their unobtrusive lives.

Open-work basket woven of reeds.

They have found door and window frames of wood, wooden stools and reading desks, wooden rakes and pitchforks—even wooden door locks with wooden keys! There evidently was no lack of work for Joseph. They have found glass dishes and woven baskets, such as Mary must have used in her housekeeping. They have even found quaint little wooden toys, oddly like modern playthings sometimes, such as Joseph might have made in his odd moments for the amusement of the little Jesus.

This is a new kind of Egyptian archeology. The scientists of the spade have hitherto concerned themselves mostly with relics of the great, tombs of nobles, pyramids of Pharaohs, enormous temples of the gods.

But history does not consist wholly of the record of the wars and wranglings of the great. There are also the laborious poor, on whose multitude of bowed backs thrones have always been borne. What of the common people of Egypt?

This new view of history led the Near East Research Committee of the University of Michigan to seek for a site in Egypt where the common people had lived their common lives—a mummified Main street.

A sieve of reeds to separate chaff from grain.

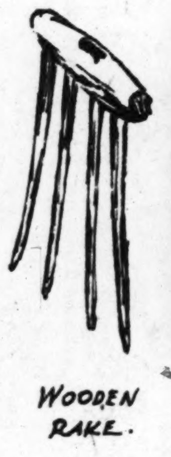
SUCH a place they found finally, not in Egypt itself but in the Faiyum Oasis. This valley of green, which lies beyond a naked ridge of stone hills in a basin cut down into the Libyan Desert, is a sort of annex or suburb of Egypt proper.

This region the Ptolemies brought under cultivation in one of the greatest reclamation projects of ancient times.

This Ptolemaic boom in real estate started more than 250 years before the Christian era, and ended in the decline of the settlement when irrigation went to wrack and ruin during the civil wars that attended the downfall of the dynasty. Twice in later days these towns experienced a similar fate, their complete desertion falling in the fifth Christian century.

Thus the task of archeologists who would study the small-town life of Egypt at a given period is simplified if they select the ruins of one of these towns in the Faiyum. It had a definite beginning and a definite end, and the situation is not complicated by finding manifold layer beneath layer of antiquity, as would be the case in almost any village in the Nile Valley proper, where the same sites have been inhabited from Neolithic times down to the present day.

The town of Karanis, which the University of Michigan expedition selected as a specimen city for its investigation, had a population of perhaps 5000 in its best days. Dr. A. E. R. Boak, who initiated work which is still being carried on, says he expects after further study to know exactly how many taxable people lived there during at least one period in the town's history, and even to know their names. Among the papyri recovered from the ruins are numbers of tax lists.



WOODEN RAKE.

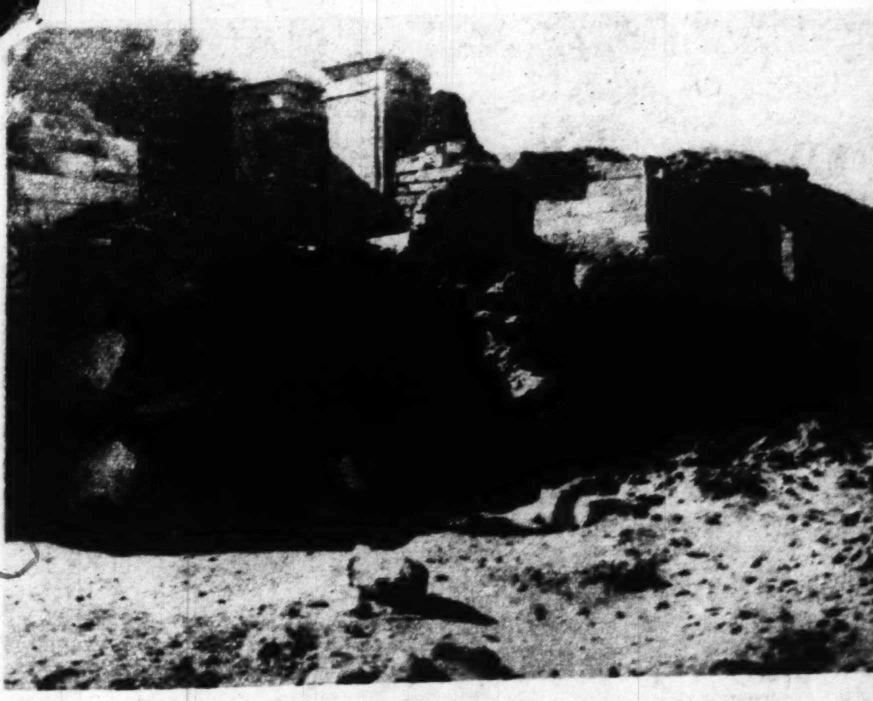
Egyptian officialdom has held the all-time world championship in ingenuity and thoroughness of taxation schemes, and it is a pretty safe bet that no person or piece of property in Karanis ever escaped the assessors. After Dr. Boak has had time enough to pore over sheet after sheet of cracked papyrus he will know more about the Karanians of 2000 years ago than most American towns can learn of their own history of 50 years back. For the papyrus rolls, preserved by the dry climate, are in excellent condition, and may be read by scientists more accurately than yellowed records faded in northern climates.

But without waiting for the slow deciphering of the tax rolls and other written records it is still possible to learn a good deal about these small-town folks of long ago. The broken walls of the buildings themselves, buried in drifted sand, tell a story that he who digs may read.

KARANIS has known three different periods, and there are three levels of foundations separated by layers of sand.

But the three towns that grew successively on the same site were very much alike, and fundamentally not unlike towns of similar size in medieval Europe, or the Maya Empire, or modern America. There was a center around which the life of the place circulated, and this was of stone. There were the houses and shops in which the people lived and traded, and these were of less pretentious construction. Here, as elsewhere in Egypt, house construction was of sun-baked brick, much like what we call adobe in our own Southwest. The walls were built fairly thick, and the houses were small and set closely together.

The principal building, occupying the place in the Karanian scheme of things that the county courthouse holds in our modern Main Street towns, was the temple. The ruins of its stone walls, and a stone altar that attests it character, have been brought to the light of day. The presence of a temple as the most pretentious edifice does not argue that the people of Karanis were more pious than they were patriotic. Religion and citizenship were the same things, both in Egypt and in Rome; Pharaoh or Caesar was not only a civil ruler, but a high priest and a god in his own right. But it is in the rooms of the houses where the people once lived, roofless now and with broken walls, that the most human and appealing chapters of the story of humble life in ancient Egypt may be read.



The Egyptian town of Karanis as it looks today.

Here are the few pieces of furniture that met the simpler needs of an Oriental people. Here are the tools of field and workshop, the pots and baskets and bottles of the home, the quaint toys of the play yard. The desert air is so dry that they did not decay, as such perishable stuff would have in a moister climate, and at last the roofs and walls fell in and the drifting sands completed the burial.

The villagers of Karanis might almost be said to have lived in an age of wood. Scores of objects that with us are made of metal are found ingeniously whittled out of timber. Perhaps the most remarkable and complicated mechanisms are the wooden door locks, opened with wooden keys. These are, to be sure, much larger affairs than the compact iron and brass devices that guard our own front doors. The wooden blocks that cover the sliding wooden bolts are half the size of a common brick, and the keys are six or eight inches long. But apparently they served their purpose.

More orthodox in appearance are the wooden hayforks, carding combs, spindles, door frames. A curious piece of furniture is a wooden reading desk. This is in the shape of a wide but shallow trough. The two boards that form its top meet in the middle to form a wide "V," which prevented the rolls of papyrus that were the commonest books of that day from falling off. The desk is about four inches high, and must have been used by a student cross-legged on the ground, a position still much used among Orientals.

MOST of the wooden articles are made of ordinary varieties of timber, but the carpenters showed the love they have always had for good tools. Numbers of mallets and wedges have been found that are made of mahogany.

But wooden things are not the most perishable objects that have been held imperishable by the kindly sands of oblivion. Woven and plaited fabrics of many kinds, that helped folks to make a living long ago, are turned up here in quantities, each new object an added paragraph in the mute, inglorious history of a forgotten common people. There is a camel harness, woven of cords, a fishnet.

It is in household gear, however, that the ruins are richest. The people of Karanis were not rich, and they lived simply, but they had their own standards of comfort. Metal pots and pans for the housewife's kitchen work were of course unknown, but earthenware pots she had in abundance and in all conceivable sizes and shapes.

Great pottery jars for the household supply of water stood by the door, on stone stands. Pottery lamps hung from the ceiling beams or stood on wall brackets. The lamp makers seem to have been an artistically inclined group of craftsmen, for not less than 150 designs have been found among the lamps of Karanis.

ANYBODY who thinks that glassware for table use is a modern invention will have his eyes opened if he walks through the rooms of the museum at Ann Arbor. These Karanian women liked nice things, too, and they could set well-shaped glass bowls, goblets and bottles on the table when there was company for dinner.

And when a hostess of Karanis was getting ready for her guests, she had appropriate toilet aids. Only fragments of these two-millenium-old toilet sets can be assembled, but even the pieces are eloquent. There are several combs made of hardwood, accurately cut in a pattern still followed by the more modern hard rubber and pyralin products. There are pots for kohl, that eye-darkening cosmetic so universally used throughout the countries of the East, with sticks and a spoon for its application.

And when the party was on, it seems not unlikely that the ancient Karanians "made whoopee"—witness a pair of wooden castanets; witness also a set of dice, spotted in the same pattern as are the dice of today.

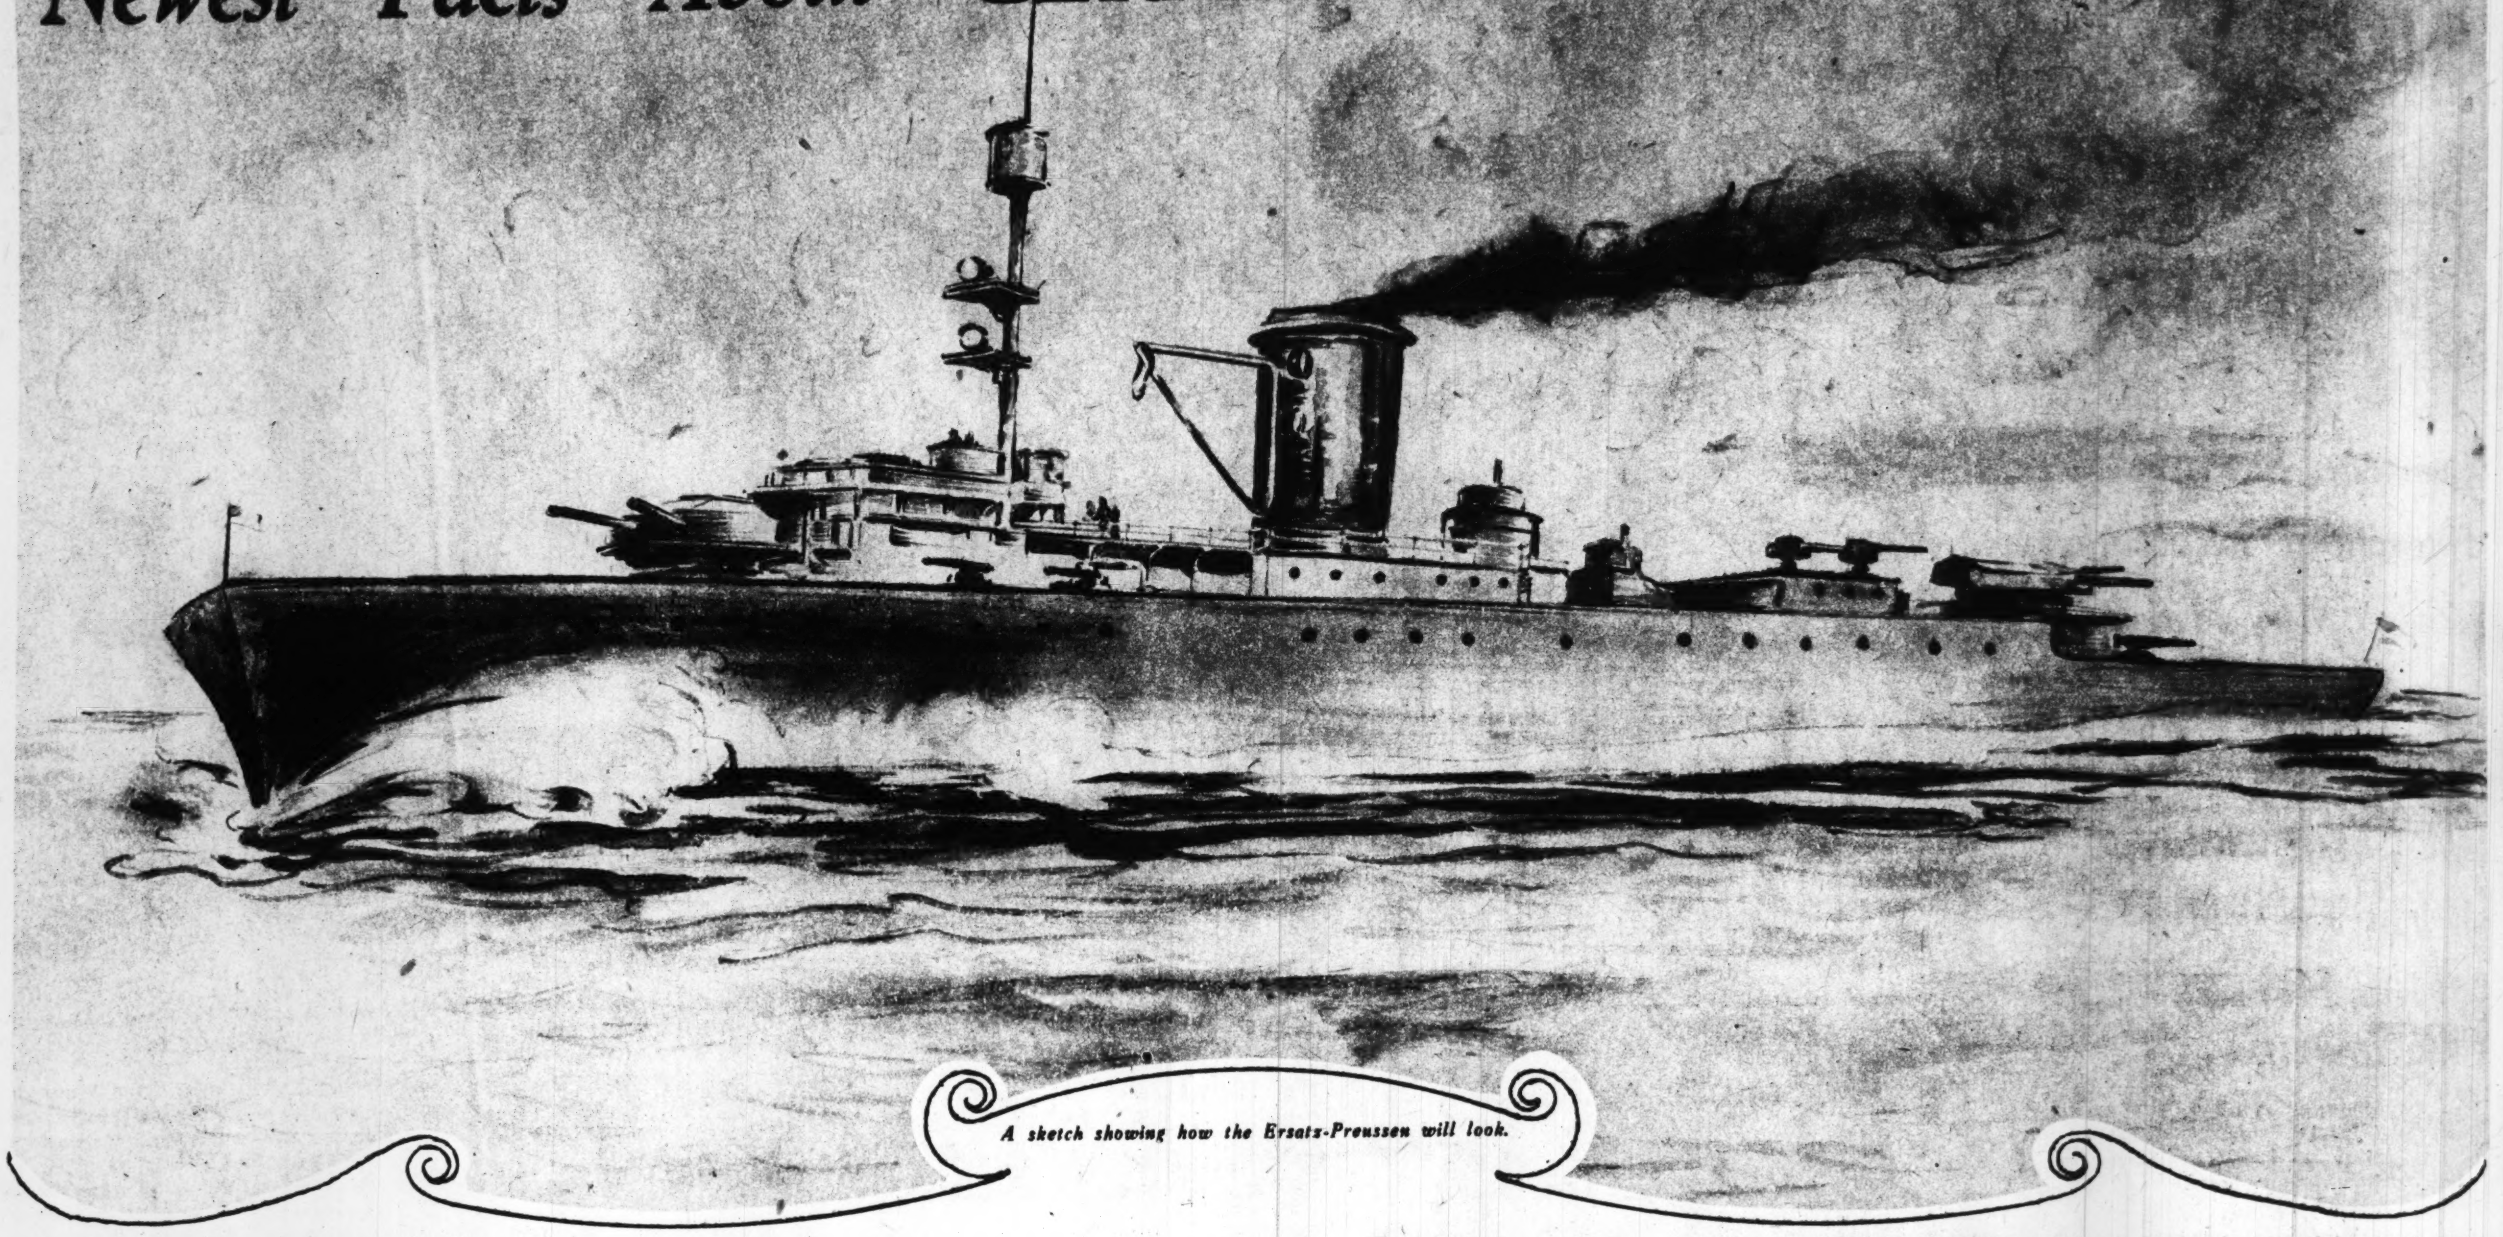
But the folk of Karanis, whatever their daily labor or household cares or even frivolities, had one touch of nature that makes them even more kin to us of the present time. All through the village are reminders of children. The toys scattered about, perhaps just as the children left them, are mute witnesses of the affection which the Egyptians always felt for children.

They are, moreover, witnesses of the unchanging minds of children through the ages, for in the University of Michigan museum are things on which children of today would pounce as eagerly as did the children of 20 centuries ago. There is a handful of marbles, stained and discolored now, but round enough and of the right size, so that your own boy could "knuckle down" with them this minute. There are wooden toys on wheels, especially little wooden horses, so like those now favored by toddlers of four that they could be repainted and sold at any toyshop.

But perhaps the prize of the whole toy exhibit is a rag doll. It is probably the oldest rag doll in the world, not a big rag doll, and certainly not a beautiful one. It is just a wisp of linen cloth tied over a bit of stuffing with string.

But it was enough to satisfy the budding maternal instinct of a young daughter of Egypt, in the far-off days when, somewhere under the same sky, a slim foreign girl from the North sat under a palm tree tending her infant Son.

Newest Facts About GERMANY'S MYSTERY SHIP



A sketch showing how the Ersatz-Preussen will look.

The Ersatz-Preussen Will Stay Within the 10,000 Ton Limit Set by the Versailles Treaty but Through the Application of New Principles of Design Can Be Equipped With 11-Inch Guns and Is Expected to Have a Cruising Radius of 20,000 Miles.

BERLIN.

GERMANY, confined to strenuous limits in naval construction by the terms of the Versailles treaty, has attempted and achieved a miracle in battleship building. With her bare hull resting on the ways of a Kiel shipyard is the beginning of something new in sea warfare, a mystery ship extraordinary that may revolutionize naval warfare and seriously affect the plans and hopes of the naval conference.

This new ship, known as the Ersatz-Preussen, or armored ship A, as she is officially designated in the German records, is to be a "pocket battleship" of 10,000 tons, a ship expected "to lick anything it cannot outrun and outrun anything it cannot lick."

Russia, viewing her fleet in the Baltic, must think of this vessel with something like apprehension, and even the great naval Powers, with their dreadnaughts and super-dreadnaughts, equipped though they are with mighty guns and powerful engines—they, too, must "view with alarm."

The Ersatz-Preussen will be equipped with 11-inch guns. But wait a moment. These are not 11-inch naval guns as the world has known them. But 11-inch guns on a ship not before believed heavy enough to mount such large artillery! These 11-inch weapons of the Ersatz-Preussen are improved guns, guns that are expected to be the equal of 13-inch and 15-inch weapons. Guns that will be accurate and effective at 30,000 yards.

The ship is expected to have a cruising radius of 20,000 miles.

How has all this been brought about? By intensive application, of course, and a high degree of technical skill.

To begin with, there will not be a rivet in the ship. All her plates are electrically soldered. Thus a ship that under rivet construction would have a displacement of 11,000 to 12,000 tons has a displacement of 10,000. The plan of structure is new, also, so that everything in the ship, from keel to cockpits, is part of the armor structure itself.

STRAIN has been studied to a point where the exact limit of the size of guns it can carry is figured. In fact, the limitation on guns is not in relation to tonnage—according to the usual method of calculating the batteries a vessel can carry—but in relation to the accuracy of gun fire. It is possible to figure strain until it could be possible to put a "Big Bertha" on a battleship, but this would be of no use in naval warfare on account of the inability to get accurate fire at over 30,000 yards. The Germans, however, are experimenting with guns now, so it is possible that batteries will be developed of a new order to man the ship that is supposed to follow the Ersatz-Preussen.

The Ersatz-Preussen is the first of six 10,000-ton ships allowed to Germany under the terms of the Versailles treaty. She was begun in 1928, but she is still far from completed. Her bare hull reveals the progress still to be made before she sails the seas. But while her total cost will be about $20,000,000, so far only some $5,000,000 of that amount is available.

Now it is up to the Reichstag, and that gives the completion of the great ship a very uncertain date. For the chances are strong that the Reichstag will veto any further appropriations toward her construction.

For one thing, the Socialists are firmly against any pursuance at this time of an ambitious German building policy. With the great Powers scratching their heads at conference in an effort to bring down navies of the world to a minimum, the Socialists feel that a vigorous program in Germany would be a highly imprudent and undiplomatic business. Furthermore, the Socialists are not given to spending money on war costs when they feel a prudent financial policy might bring richer results to the nation's prosperity.

So no date for the launching of this newest terror of the seas has been set.

Not too much is known of the construction of the Ersatz-Preussen. One detail has been revealed, and this is tremendously important. It is the fact that the ship will be pushed through the waves by Diesel engines. The use of these combustion engines instead of steam or electric turbines has made possible another great weight reduction. And of equal excellence, these engines will give the ship a tremendous cruising radius.

Will the Ersatz-Preussen be effective as a ship of the line? Very likely. While her armor is not of the type that covers the great battleships, such as the British Hood, she will be able to get in range of most of the world's battleships on more than even terms. As a raider, she would make the famous German ship Emden, of the World War, appear obsolete. With her tremendous cruising radius, her speed, her powerful guns, she would be a menace to shipping and the transportation of troops that would seriously embarrass a foe of much larger naval force.

ACCORDING to statistics, even if the Ersatz-Preussen had a cruising radius of but 10,000 miles and a speed of but 20 knots, she would be better than any other ship before her. New English cruisers have done as much as 10,400 sea miles, but they didn't better 11 knots. The French cruiser Duquesne has done 5000 miles at 15 knots. The United States Pensacola is designed for from 13,000 to 14,000 miles, but will have to run at 15 knots to accomplish that.

Study of her possibilities as an opponent of the battleships of the world speedy enough to overhaul her shows four British ships which might do the job. They are the Hood, Renown, Repulse and Tiger. Neither America nor Japan seems to have ships which could do the work. And while the Renown and the Repulse have 15-inch guns, these weapons are old and fail to have a distinctly advantageous range for combat. For, it is believed, they would expose themselves to Ersatz-Preussen's fire some 30 minutes before they could accurately and effectively return it. That would be a dreadful disadvantage for these ships, large and powerful as they are.

No information has been given out concerning the new ship's armor. But here is a table of her weight taken from a German source and one that is considered reliable:

Hull without armor	3700 tons
Armor on ship and guns	2700 tons
Auxiliary machinery	480 tons
Equipment and stores	430 tons
Propulsive machinery	1150 tons
Armament and ammunition without armor	1700 tons
Light displacement	10,160 tons
Fuel	3500 tons
Reserve feed water	40 tons

According to these figures the German ship must have an ample protective plan.

The Ersatz-Preussen will be 600 feet in length with a beam of 66 feet. At each end she will have one heavy-gun turret, which will be well placed beyond the machinery spaces. Her secondary batteries will comprise her chief fighting weapons and will be scattered at intervals between her heavy-gun stations.

Her pictures, visualizing her as she will look when completed, show her as a long, low, rakish craft, with one smoke funnel and one mast.

In her the German marine engineers have made the answer to the Versailles treaty. They have eliminated waste of weight—rather, they have studied their subject and by improving on battleship construction have eliminated weight and overcome their obstacle.

She is hardly a cruiser and still not a battleship. Neither is she an armored ship. But regardless of her class, she appears to be a tremendously formidable craft.

The Controversy Over Austria's "Miracle Doctor"

The Medical Profession Has Branded Him as a Quack, but He Treated 140,000 Patients in a Year.

VIENNA.

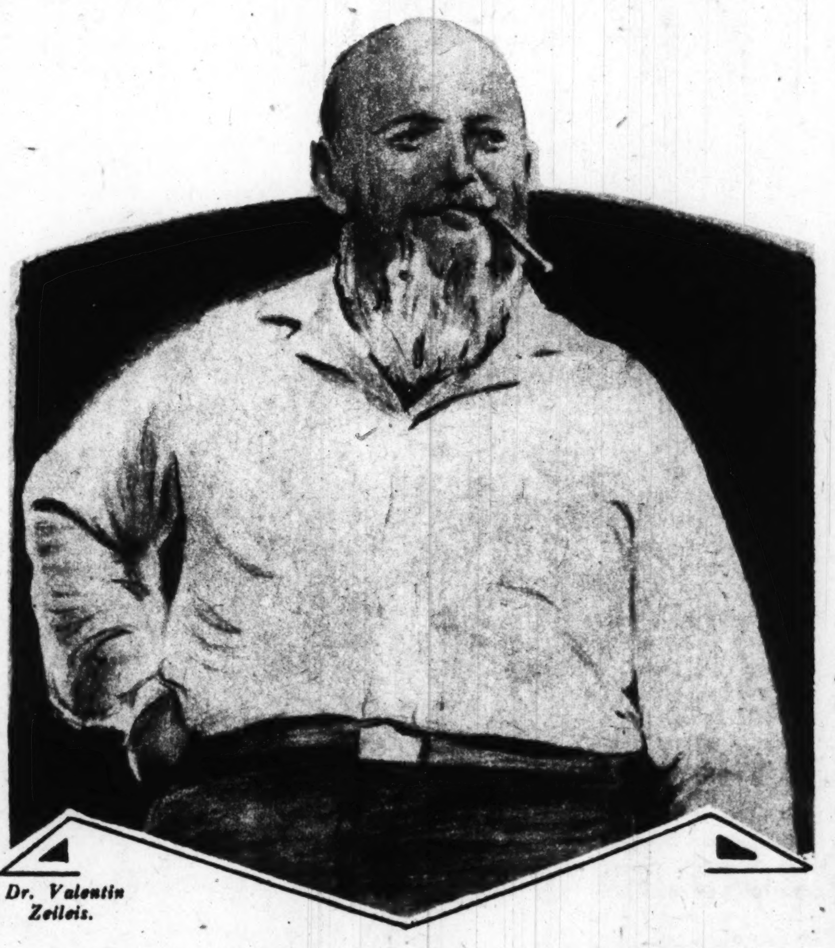
A STORM of controversy is raging in this country over the question of whether Valentin Zeileis, the so-called "miracle doctor," of Gallspach, Austria, is really a "miracle doctor" or a colossal quack.

The medical profession, or the greater part of it at least, says without qualification that he is a quack. Physicians and scientists generally condemn his healing methods as unscientific, his "miracle" claims as rubbish and his whole system of practice as a public scandal.

Less professional groups, including many patients and former patients, on the other hand, assert with equal vehemence that the "Wunderdoktor" is a genius, a "great helper of mankind." To the charge of the regular doctors they retort that if Christ Himself should come to earth again, raising the dead and healing the lame, He, too, would be denounced as a quack. Whether his methods are scientific or not, they declare, Valentin Zeileis has cured thousands of their illnesses and benefited other thousands. No charge of quackery, they point out, has come from any of his many patients.

Whatever the merits of the case may be, it seems evident that the "Wunderdoktor's" fame has spread a great deal faster than the skepticism. Gallspach has become a veritable Mecca for the sick. An ever-increasing stream of suffering humanity pours in. Last year no fewer than 140,000 patients, ill from a great variety of causes, passed through his alleged "health factory" where healing, or alleged healing, is done in quantity lots. At the present time there are at least 15,000 afflicted persons receiving treatment daily from Dr. Zeileis and his corps of assistants. It is expected that the number of patients this year will pass the 200,000 mark. They come not only from Austria, but from Germany, Switzerland, Hungary and other nearby lands. Each treatment costs about 40 cents for those able to pay. The very poor are treated free.

Gallspach is proud of its growing prominence and is rather inclined to set aside strictly scientific considerations in weighing Dr. Zeileis' desirability as a citizen. From an obscure, almost unknown little village, Gallspach has become a town with many hotels and lodging houses. It is becoming conscious of its importance and is not losing sight of the fact that the "miracle doctor" is responsible for its boom. The whole town revolves about the "health factory."



Dr. Valentin Zeileis.

Dr. Zeileis maintains an old castle where he has his laboratories, his receiving rooms and his treatment rooms. The laboratory contains a formidable array of electrical equipment about which nobody except himself seems to know much. Electric sparks fly and high-frequency currents sputter and flash in bluish lightning-like streaks when the "factory" is in operation. Electricity seems to be employed all the way from diagnosis to final treatment. The doctor has an electrically-charged, quartz-like "diagnosing rod" which he passes over the patient's body to ascertain his illness. Patients call it a magic wand and regard it with awe and reverence. When the diagnosis has been made the patient is then put on the regular course of treatment, which seems to be much the same for all disorders. Apparently it is a combination of electric currents and radium exposures repeated twice daily for a period of two weeks or more. Dr. Zeileis is assisted by his son, Dr. Fritz Zeileis, who is a regular physician, and several other helpers.

The "health factory" is fast becoming an embarrassing problem for the Government. The Medical Chamber of Vienna is demanding that the Government suppress Zeileis, and medical men of other countries are entering the controversy. Professor Lazarus, a specialist of Berlin, characterizes the "Wunderdoktor" as a "grotesque advertising suggestion" and a "suggestion tragedy." It is replied, however, that Zeileis does not advertise and never did. He relies upon his patients to spread his fame and apparently they do it very well, for many men of prominence have sought his treatments. Among those whom Zeileis claims to have treated are Prince Waldemar, brother of the King of Denmark; Prince George of Greece, and bankers, business and professional men from all over Europe.

"What I practice is merely practical Christianity," says Zeileis, "nothing else."

Fearing that the doctor may move his establishment across the border into Germany, the citizens of Gallspach and vicinity are flocking to his defense and are up in arms against the doctors who are attacking him. Many members of the Austrian Parliament are said to be among his supporters.

In spite of their criticism, the regular doctors are curious to know more about Dr. Zeileis' methods, it appears, for Dr. Fritz Zeileis has announced that 130 have applied for permission to observe and study the system.

His defenders point out there is overwhelming testimony that he has done much good, and argue that he could not continue to be a magnet for so many thousands of ailing if he were a fraud. The charge that there are many whom he has not helped or cured can be just as well directed against the regular doctors, his defenders say. "Only the regular doctors," they add, with a little irony "have the advantage of not being held responsible for failures."

Mariano Miguelez Maya

Revolutionist, Farmhand, Paper Hanger, Waiter—and Finally a Teacher at Soldan High School.

A NEW FEATURE OF THE POST-DISPATCH SUNDAY MAGAZINE

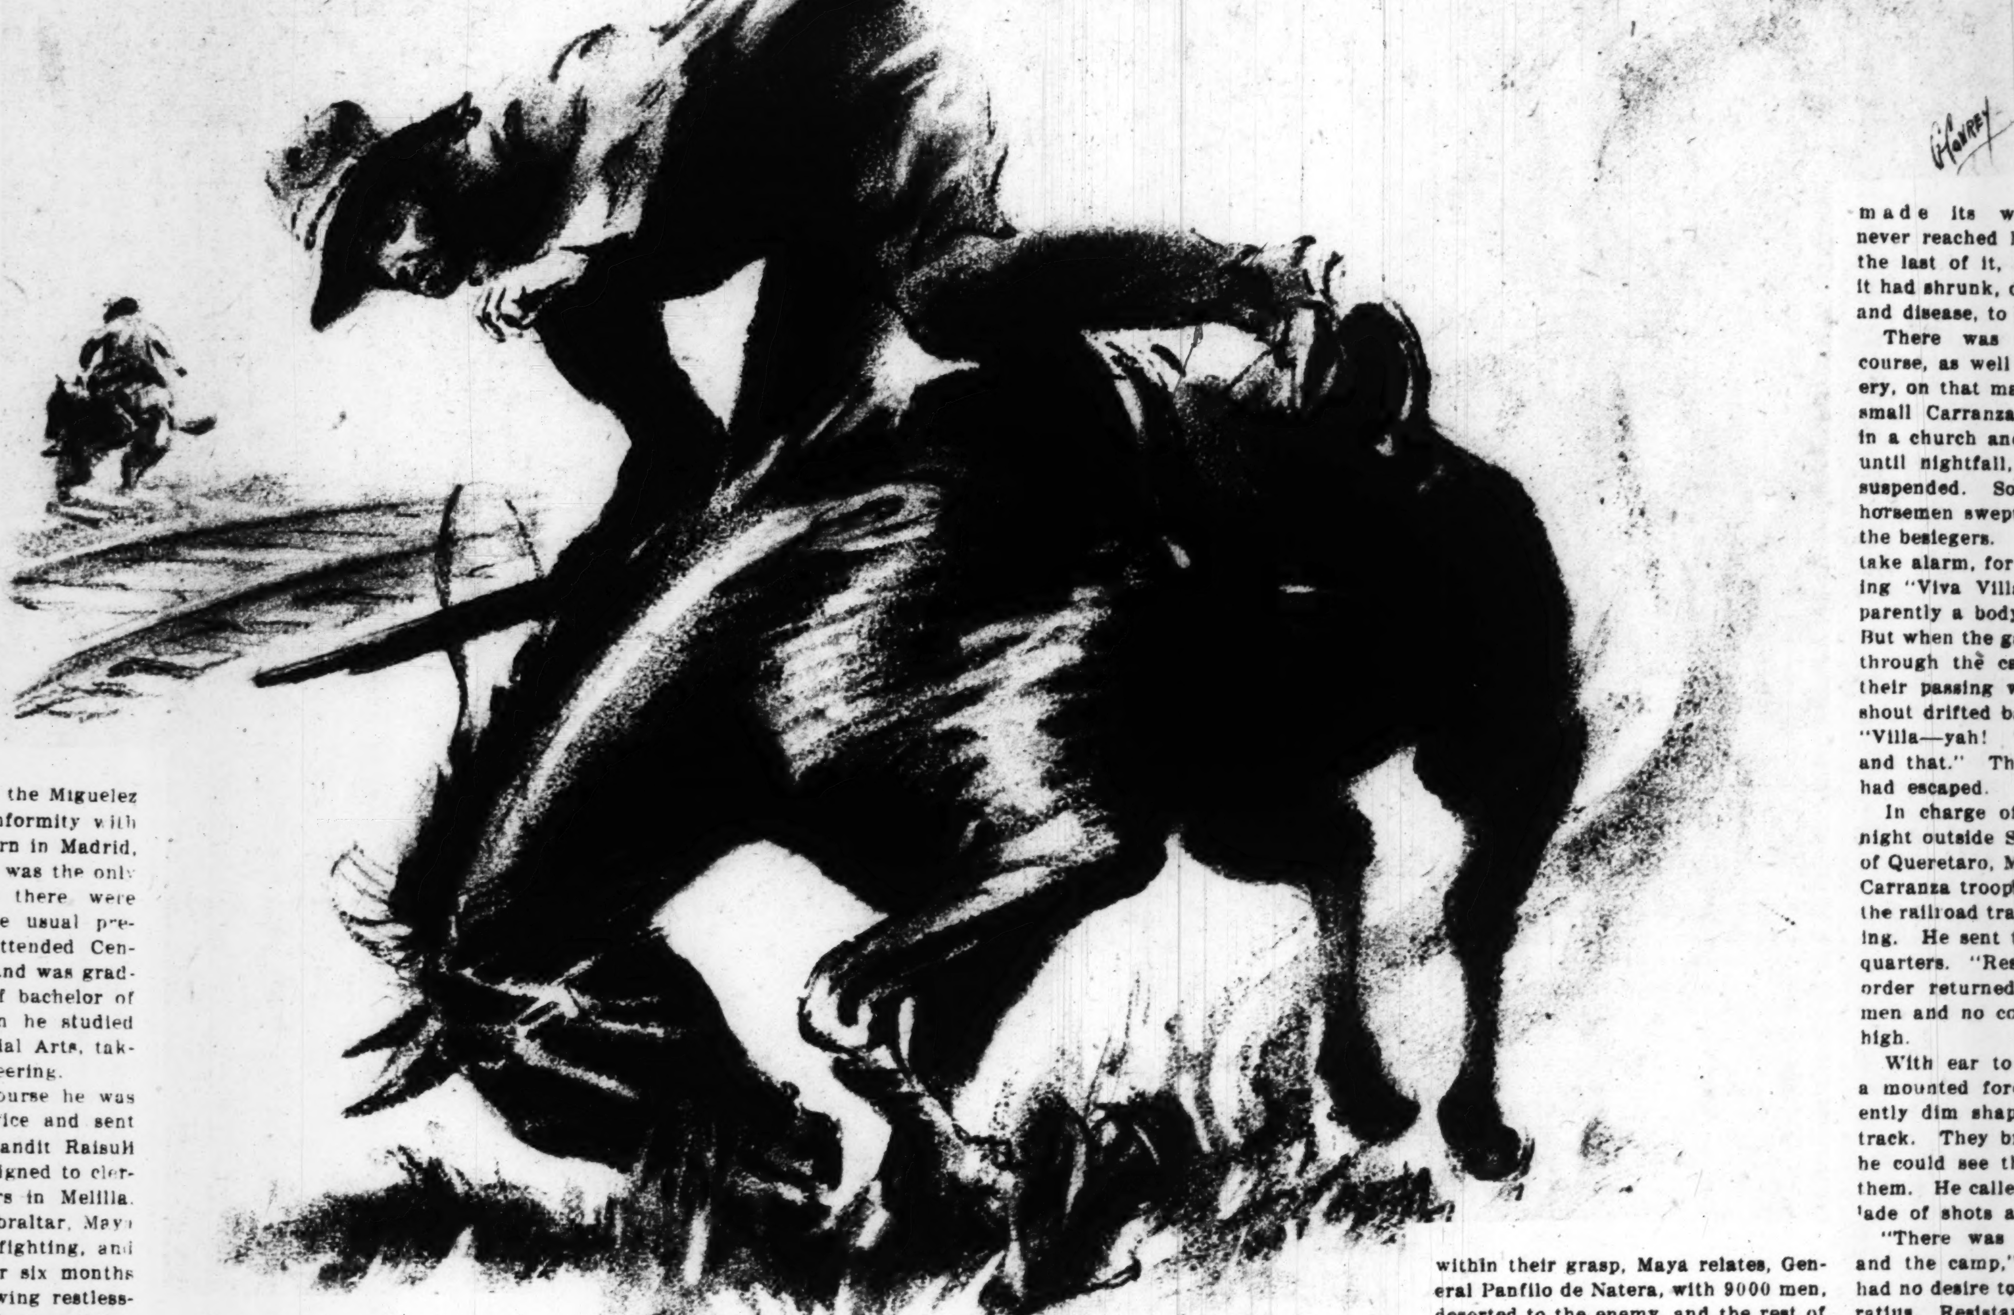
By KEITH KERMAN

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

TEN years ago Mariano Miguelez Maya came to the United States to teach. He was somewhat handicapped by knowing no English and having no shirt. A foot shattered by a Carranzista's dum-dum bullet scarcely improved his prospects.

But he knew where he was going and he had youth —without youth's adventurous unrest. Adventure no longer had power to beguile him off his course. Seven years of Mexican revolutions had attended to that. Savage, miserable, frequently ridiculous warfare had knocked out of him his old ideas of the grandeur of sword-won power. Mariano Miguelez Maya, former Villista Captain, wanted to be a solid, respectable, peaceable citizen, engaged in useful work.

It was a long grind toward his goal. There was much hard manual labor and—what was more irksome to the young Spaniard—sometimes menial work, before the penniless stranger could learn enough English to fit himself for his chosen career. The retired revolutionist worked as a farmhand, at paper hanger, as waiter and in numerous other pursuits, going from job to job from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic coast, before he began to teach. Now, an instructor in Spanish at Soldan High School, a citizen of the United States, doing the work he likes to do, in contact with people of similar tastes, with a wife and a home, he can chuckle at his early vicissitudes and appreciate the sweet uses of adversity.



Maya, bent low over his horse's neck, was about to enter the zone of fire when the animal grunted and fell, shot through the head.

Maya—he has dropped the Miguelez from his surname in conformity with American usage—was born in Madrid, the son of a doctor. He was the only boy in the family, and there were seven sisters. After the usual preliminary schooling he attended Central University, Madrid, and was graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts and sciences. Then he studied at the School of Industrial Arts, taking up mechanical engineering.

In the midst of his course he was called into military service and sent to Morocco, where the bandit Raisuli was on the rampage. Assigned to clerical duty at headquarters in Melilla, across the strait from Gibraltar, Maya saw none of the actual fighting, and returned to Madrid, after six months in the army, with a gnawing restlessness, a yearning for far places, a thirst for splendid uncertainties.

He informed his father there was to be no more schooling for him. His father sighed, gave him $500 and shipped him off to an uncle in Mexico City.

TIO CLAUDIO met his nephew at the station, settled him in a small hotel and got him a job as draftsman in the Department of Public Works, where he was set to drawing plans concerned with the development of the capital's water system.

This was in January, 1913. Maya was not quite 19, and Francisco I. Madero, leader of the revolt that overthrew old Porfirio Diaz, was tottering in the presidential chair of Mexico.

Within a month came "La Decena Tragica"—the tragic ten days—which culminated in the downfall and death of Madero. On the morning of February 9 Maya was awakened by the breaking of a window in his room. He jumped out of bed and found a bullet on the floor. He heard shots. Hastily putting on his clothes, he went outdoors. People were running through the streets. Several policemen lay dead on the sidewalk near his hotel. Before noon revolting troops had occupied the arsenal, while the President's forces held the national palace.

During La Decena Tragica the city was a battlefield. Business was suspended. Civilians seldom ventured from their homes in the daytime. At night the huge spurs of patrolling rurales jangled in the unlighted streets, and occasionally a machine gun chattered.

The tenth day, which saw the capture of the little, goateed President, almost saw the extinction of Maya. He and a friend had slipped out of their hotel, and, on a street sheltered from bombarding guns, were talking with a drunken man when a squad of rurales happened along and became suspicious. Suspicion was enough. The soldiers ordered Maya and his companion and three other men nearby to line up against a wall. Maya didn't understand what that meant until the rurales formed a line in front of the prisoners and ordered arms at the command of a corporal. There was no mistaking that action.

The thought flashed through Maya's mind: "How strange! Tomorrow at this time I won't be living." Then the instinct of self-preservation asserted itself. He flung up his hand. "Corporal," he shouted, "you can't do this. I am a Spaniard. I am not interested in your Mexican affairs." He groped desperately for some more arresting statement. He exclaimed: "You will have to see my Ambassador before you can shoot me"—something ridiculous like that. He doesn't know exactly what he said. He didn't then.

But the protest served. The Corporal grumblingly agreed to await the decision of a superior. And when an automobile full of officers presently appeared, a Colonel, apparently acting on a whim, let Maya and his companion go.

What happened to the three others he doesn't know, but later in the day, he learned, 24 persons were shot against that inviting wall.

With Huerta's accession to the presidency something resembling order prevailed in the Mexican capital for a time and Maya returned to his drawing board. He worked at his job while Huerta's power was crumbling under the attacks of disaffected chieftains in the North—while Angeles and Villa were driving down from Coahuila and Carranza and Obregon from Sonora.

In August, 1914, Carranza forces occupied Mexico City, Huerta having resigned and fled. Maya describes the occupation as another reign of terror: stores looted, horses seized and stabled in churches, men dropping out of sight.

Mariano Miguelez Maya.

There was the traditional discord among the conquering Generals, and presently Carranza had to leave the capital and Villa took it over. Villa's troops were smart-looking as they marched into the city, infantry goose-stepping, cavalry jingling gayly. And there was a magic then about the name of the picturesque Pancho.

Maya was out of a job, the political turmoil of the country having stopped the work on which he had been engaged. Food was scarce. And while the various causes that were espoused so violently in this revolutionary period meant little to him, he felt a pull within himself to get into the scrap. Adventure beckoned.

"Why not?" said the Spaniard at last, and joined a Villa brigade commanded by General Augustin Casarin. He signed his name on the enlistment paper instead of making his mark, and they appointed him a Sergeant at once.

In April, 1915, the armies of Villa and Obregon (the latter supporting Carranza) met in battle at Celaya, some 60 miles northwest of Mexico City. For about a week they fought and finally Villa's men, under the command of Angeles, won their way into the town. With victory almost within their grasp, Maya relates, General Panfilo de Natera, with 9000 men, deserted to the enemy, and the rest of the Villa army, caught between this force and the Obregon troops, was crushed.

Maya's troop of cavalry, dismounted, held a wall on the edge of town. Like the rest of the Villistas, they wore corn tassels in their hats to distinguish them from the enemy. When the cry of "Salvese el que pueda!" ("Save himself who can!") was raised, they retreated to waiting trains, which took them and other survivors north. After several days of this travel, part of the Villa force, including Maya's brigade, took its horses from the box cars and went back to the neighborhood of Mexico City by a circuitous route.

At this time Maya was a Lieutenant.

For some time the brigade operated in and about Mexico City, the operations consisting chiefly of moving out of the city when Carranza troops went in and returning when the enemy left. Co-operating more or less with the command were the wild, skin-clad warriors of Zapata, a bandit whom civil war had turned into a General.

It was while Maya was in Southern Mexico that the raid on Columbus, New Mexico, attributed to Villa, was made.

Early in 1917, as nearly as Maya can remember, the section of Villa's troops to which his brigade was attached set out from Mexico City to join Villa in the North. It was called the Brigada Convencion, and was escorting Francisco Lagos Chazaro, who had been selected for President by a group of revolutionary Generals at a convention after Huerta's downfall.

This army numbered 17,000 men at the start and a great crowd of women and children accompanied the soldiers. But for the last year or so times had been hard with the revolutionists and the army had little ammunition, no tents, no medical nor sanitary service, nondescript uniforms and arms.

By a devious course, avoiding railroads as much as possible—and also the enemy, because of scanty ammunition—the expedition made its way toward Villa. It never reached him. When Maya saw the last of it, after about two years, it had shrunk, due chiefly to desertion and disease, to a few thousands.

There was plenty of action, of course, as well as monotony and misery, on that march. At one town the small Carranza garrison took refuge in a church and held off the Villistas until nightfall, when hostilities were suspended. Some time in the night horsemen swept down on the camp of the besiegers. But the latter failed to take alarm, for the riders were shouting "Viva Villa! Viva Villa!" Apparently a body of allies had arrived. But when the galloping horsemen were through the camp and the sound of their passing was fading, a different shout drifted back through the night: "Villa—yah! The black-hearted this and that." The beleaguered garrison had escaped.

In charge of an advance post one night outside San Juan del Rio, State of Queretaro, Maya received word that Carranza troops were advancing along the railroad track which he was watching. He sent the news back to headquarters. "Resist the enemy," was the order returned to him. He had 18 men and no cover and the moon was high.

With ear to a rail, he could hear a mounted force approaching. Presently dim shapes appeared down the track. They broke into a gallop and he could see there were hundreds of them. He called a challenge. A fusillade of shots answered.

"There was a bridge between us and the camp," Maya relates, "but I had no desire to share honors with Horatius. Resistance meant annihilation. We wheeled our horses and ran. Fortunately, the bridge had been wrecked with dynamite and we knew the way around while the enemy had to take time to find the path. So we escaped with the loss of five or six men. But the Carranzistas chased us through the town and captured 500 infantry before withdrawing."

AT ANOTHER town the expedition was attacked by a small force of Carranza cavalry—not more than 200 troopers. But so low was the morale of the tattered army that its soldiers began to run. Officers checked the rout by shooting their own men. Machine guns and a few pieces of light artillery were manned then and the cavalry charge was repulsed.

There came the day when the Brigada Convencion had to cross a railroad track at Tablas on its northward trek. Carranzistas lined the slopes on either side of the point of crossing and poured rifle fire into the Villistas, who merely tried to run the gauntlet as speedily as possible. Maya, bent low over his horse's neck, was about to enter the zone of fire when the animal grunted and fell, shot through the head. The rider rolled clear and ran back to a place of comparative safety. Unable to induce any of his companions to give him a lift, and utterly weary, he lay down and slept.

When he awoke it was late afternoon. All his comrades in arms had disappeared except one man, and Carranzistas were coming down the slopes toward them. Maya, expecting to be captured, stripped to his underwear, not wanting to be identified as an officer, for both sides in that irregular warfare had a habit of shooting the officers they took prisoner. He was a Captain by this time and therefore would make a fairly creditable corpse in the eyes of the enemy.

With his fellow Villista, who was austerely clad in a blanket, Maya took to the mesquite with mounted pursuers some distance behind. The fugitives doubled and ducked through

When the Famous TAFT SMILE FAILED to Get Results

What Happened at the Dramatic Conference Between Old Porfirio Diaz and the American President and How It Contributed to the Former's Political Doom, Told for the First Time.

NEW ORLEANS.

THE smile and the hand-clasp of William Howard Taft failed once to settle an international situation. Out of the failure rose spectres that troubled many an American President and Secretary of State; rose the situations that cost America human lives and countless dollars. Since the recent death of ex-President Taft, columns have been written about that smile and hand-clasp of his; how it pacified turbulent enemies of the United States in the Philippines; how it quieted political enemies almost as turbulent at home. Nothing has been said about the one great time it failed.

The man on whom the Taft friendliness failed was the late Porfirio Diaz, President of Mexico for more years than any other man has ever been. Taft failed utterly to win over Diaz at the international conference of the two Presidents in El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, Mexico, in October, 1909. He couldn't win Porfirio Diaz, nor could Jacob Dickinson, his Secretary of War, bluff the grim old Indian chieftain. Porfirio Diaz went away from that conference believing that by his defiance he had signed his own political death-warrant, feeling that, to keep his own self-respect as a Mexican and a soldier, he could do nothing else but what he did.

The story comes out now for the first time. It is told by the aide and interpreter of President Diaz. He was Captain Jose Ortiz Monasterio, graduate of Chapultepec, the Mexican West Point, in the class of 1896, officer of the Corps of Engineers in the Mexican Regular Army. Today he resides in New Orleans, a political exile.

That international conference of the two Presidents goes down in history as the first time an American President intimated to a Mexican President that the United States was going to have a voice in the economic and political affairs of Mexico. And Porfirio Diaz, deadly, proud fighter who had won and held his power by arms, couldn't yield ground that day, even when he felt that his defiance would bring harm to his country. He foresaw the full significance of his stand. But it was as impossible for his pride and dignity to retreat as it would be for a charging rhinoceros to go backward.

"It is unwritten history," says Monasterio. "I could not well tell the story while Mr. Taft lived. Now, of all who were close in that conference, the only ones living are Enrique Creel and myself."

Enrique Creel, who was Secretary for Foreign Affairs under President Diaz, retired from Mexican public life, is an old, sick man.

Here was the background that led to the conference between President Taft and Diaz at El Paso in 1909.

A GROUP of Mexican-American problems had arisen that required solution. The United States had a lease on Magdalena Bay from Mexico, permitting the United States Navy to use it for naval gunnery practice. The lease was expiring, and Washington wanted it renewed. Strange tales were seeping through America about Japanese interest in that spot; even about Japanese colonists there.

New York and Washington both were interested in the way foreign capital was being invested in Mexico. England, France and Canada among them virtually controlled mines, electric franchises, the cotton-spinning industry. The Mexican Financial Agency was in London. There were American financiers who wanted it in New York.

Mexico had nationalized her railroads. She had floated a huge European loan at between four and four-and-a-half per cent. In Mexico's national treasury was a $20,000,000 gold surplus.

Porfirio Diaz, taking the presidency in 1884, had been twenty-five years in office. He was the most powerful single figure in all Latin-America. The old talk of a Latin-American union was being revived. Diaz was the man toward whom all Latin-American rulers looked for advice and backing for such a movement.

Yes, there was plenty about which to talk in that year of 1909.

The international conference at El Paso was arranged. As was customary, protocols were exchanged. And the undertaking struck a snag at the start. The snag was Porfirio Diaz.

Article one of the American protocol stipulated that the President of Mexico should be received "at the international boundary, the middle of the bridge across the Rio Grande between El Paso and Juarez."

Whoever drew up that protocol in Washington didn't know Porfirio Diaz. Maybe he didn't know Mexican-American history. Maybe he was playing his hand on a bluff. If he did, Diaz called the bluff.

THERE is a section of El Paso known to the Mexicans as El Chamizal. It used to belong to Mexico. Under the Treaty of Guadelupe Hidalgo signed in 1848 between the two nations, the United States admitted El Chamizal belonged to Mexico. But the Rio Grande, like the Mississippi River, has its whims. It changed its bed. It put El Chamizal on its northern instead of its southern bank. Americans had grinned and observed placidly that it was all American land this side the Rio Grande. Mexicans didn't grin and they weren't placid about it.

Porfirio Diaz, President of Mexico, notified William Howard Taft, President of the United States, that the reception of the President of Mexico couldn't be used as a precedent to settle a border dispute. He would ride into El Paso surrounded by his own armed soldiers, and he would ride clear to the disputed northern limits of El Chamizal—or he wouldn't come at all.

President Taft smothered that with a feather-bed of courtesy. If President Diaz wanted his own Presidential Guard to ride with him to the most inner limits of El Chamizal, why, that was simply splendid! But why stop there? An additional Guard of Honor of American cavalry would meet the President of Mexico and his Presidential Guard at the international bridge and, friends all, they would ride clear across El Chamizal and meet at the Association of Commerce Building in El Paso, which was beyond dispute deep in American territory.

And this is what they did. That October day in 1909, Don Porfirio rode over the bridge surrounded by his Presidential Guard—and it was a sight worth seeing. General Diaz was in full military uniform with decorations and side-arms. Not a horse in his Presidential Guard cost less than one thousand pesos.

Diaz dismounted. The stocky, rock-like Indian with the swarthy face, the thick, straight, blue-black hair and the obsidian eyes set in an utterly expressionless countenance, strode up to where President Taft stood, gigantic in his frock coat, and the two rulers of the two neighboring republics embraced.

They exchanged courtesies, President Diaz speaking Spanish. He could understand some English and more than a little French. He would never speak anything but Spanish.

PRESENTLY he departed, the bits, spurs and arms of his escort jingling as their horses' hooves hammered the El Paso pavement. And then President Taft set out by automobile, surrounded by his own cavalry escort, to return the call. At the International Bridge the Mexican Presidential Guard surrounded him and escorted him into the Custom House at Juarez. Here he was led down the corridor, and into the luxurious official parlor where President Diaz awaited him.

Into that room where Diaz and Enrique Creel sat waiting went President Taft and Dickinson. Colonel Pablo Escondon, Mexican Chief of Staff, and Captain Archibald Butt, aide to President Taft, completed the party. The door was closed behind them. Captain Monasterio was in command of the troops in the corridor, charged with permitting nobody to interrupt the conference.

It lasted nearly two hours. No man today lives who was there inside that door, save Enrique Creel, and his sickness has wiped out his memory, say reports out of Mexico.

The door opened. President Taft came out. The famous Taft smile was on his face, but Captain Monasterio remembers that it seemed a trifle fixed. President Diaz followed. His face was sphinx-like as ever.

But there were looks on the faces of others in the conference which implied that all had not been as happy as Taft's smile might have indicated.

PRESIDENT TAFT returned to El Paso. Juarez buzzed with preparations for the banquet Porfirio Diaz was giving the American President that night in the Mexican Custom House.

At 6 p. m., President Taft returned into Mexico, in evening clothes, accompanied by Secretary Dickinson, Captain Butt and several other American officials. President Diaz, also in civilian evening clothes, received them. The two Presidents sat facing each other across the table. Secretary Dickinson sat at President Diaz's right hand.

Porfirio Diaz beckoned to Captain Monasterio to stand slightly behind and between them, and to serve as interpreter.

Then it was that Captain Monasterio realized the American Secretary of War was continuing the conversation of that secret morning session.

"Please ask President Diaz, Captain Monasterio," said Secretary Dickinson, "if he has any objection to my telling a funny story to illustrate a point we were discussing."

Monasterio duly translated.

"Not at all," said Porfirio Diaz, "if the story is dirty enough. I shall be delighted."

Secretary Dickinson smiled at the reply, and sentence by sentence told the story for Captain Monasterio to translate.

It was the old tale of the ducks who invaded the stable of the horses.

The parallel was plain. The Americans were the horses. The Mexicans were the ducks. The ducks picked up a living in the stable, and presently began to multiply. Soon they had increased to the point where no horse could shift his feet without stepping on a duck. Then the leader of the ducks stepped up to the leader of the horses, and demanded a conference so that the ducks might obtain their rights.

Impassive, Porfirio Diaz listened to this. Then his voice snapped, sharp as the crack of a whip.

"Digale usted al Senor que nosotros no somos patos!"

"Tell the gentleman that we are not ducks!"

There is a double meaning to that use of the word "pato"—"duck"—in Spanish. In Mexico men say: "No te hagas pato!" which can be translated "Don't be a duck," which actually means: "Don't try to fool me!" If the phrase is given its full value, the American translation would be: "Don't try to make a sucker out of me!"

All the Spanish courtesy Captain Monasterio could put into his translation couldn't wipe out the stinging rebuke.

Secretary Dickinson halted, laughed embarrassedly, and changed the conversation to the weather. President Diaz, impassive as ever, gave brief answers through the interpreter. If anything was obvious, it was that here was a situation.

The banquet ended the international conference. That very night both Presidents started for their respective capitals.

Nothing President Taft had come to settle was settled. The story of the horses and the ducks spread from lip to lip among the highest in Mexico. Eyes turned north over the Rio Grande with distrust.

NEXT year came the Estrada revolution in Nicaragua, that was to oust Zelaya from the presidency of that country. Zelaya was openly anti-American.

Now, two years before this, Guatemala had been making war-talk to Mexico. Nicaragua and San Salvador had both pledged Porfirio Diaz they would fight on his side if war came with Guatemala. It was Zelaya of Nicaragua who made the promise.

When Zelaya was in full retreat, hard-pressed by his revolting fellow-Nicaraguans and the Americans, whose arms and ammunition had been shipped, thinly disguised, by freighter out of New Orleans, the fleeing President of Nicaragua went to the port of Corinto on his west coast.

President Diaz sent to Corinto the Mexican gunboat, General Guerrero. Her commander, Lieutenant Ignacio Arenas, received orders direct from Diaz to send in a boat and bring out Zelaya, and to take him to Salina Cruz and safety on Mexican soil.

There were two American naval vessels in port at Corinto, each twice the size and metal of the General Guerrero. Lieutenant Arenas cabled for instructions in case of trouble.

"You have your orders. You know your duty as an officer of the Mexican Navy. Do it."

Those were the instructions of Porfirio Diaz. He sent them when, for all he knew, he might be at war with the United States within a week.

Captain Monasterio, still his aide, a day later ventured to congratulate his chief on the gallant disregard of risks with which Don Porfirio had kept faith with his friend.

The expressionless obsidian eyes of Porfirio Diaz fixed themselves on the eyes of Captain Monasterio He said:

"No sabe usted lo que me va a costar. Es usted muy jovan."

"You do not know what this is going to cost me. You are too young."

Porfirio Diaz, President of Mexico, was not too young. He believed that his defiance of Taft and Dickinson in Juarez, his rescue of Zelaya out of Nicaragua in defiance of the United States, was going to cost him much.

And subsequent events are a matter of history. In flight he left Mexico City for Vera Cruz. In flight he reached Paris. He died in exile. His Mexico was torn for years by revolution after revolution.

THERE are students of Mexican-American relations who will tell you Diaz believed that if Washington had backed his regime in its last days as, for example, it has since backed Calles and Obregon, those years of weltering in bloody near-anarchy would have been spared Mexico. That there were strong men about Diaz, who could have picked up the reins of rulership when his time came, aged, to lay them down. But that must all be forever speculation.

All that we know is that the Taft smile and handshake at El Paso and Juarez failed to mollify the pride and dignity of Porfirio Diaz.

The Magdalena Bay lease to the United States of America by Mexico was never renewed. It lapsed that year of the Taft-Diaz conference at El Paso. To this day the United States Navy, which under that lease had enjoyed in Magdalena Bay a splendid spot for naval gunnery practice with every firearm from smallest to largest, has had no more privileges in Magdalena Bay than the navy of any other nation in the world, which is none at all. They cannot hold gunnery practice there any more than they can in the harbor of Vera Cruz.

"You do not know what this is going to cost me. You are too young," President Diaz told Captain Monasterio. And then, in the last army order he signed before he fled, he detached the young Captain from duties as presidential aide and sent him back to his regiment of Army Engineers, to win the rank of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor from France for bringing Admiral Defour de la Jarte of the French Navy safely through the rebel lines at Huamantla in Tlaxcala in 1911.

"I was too young to know what it was going to cost him," admits this exiled Mexican gentleman whose great-great-grandfather was Major Popham on the staff of General George Washington in the American Revolution. "But I've grown older since. I know, now. And yet, knowing Porfirio Diaz as I did, I cannot ever see how, being Porfirio Diaz, he could have done other than he did that time."

FOUR MILLION HUMAN BEINGS Still in SLAVERY

China, Burma, Nepal, Abyssinia, Arabia and Liberia Still Tolerate the Institution, Says Kathleen Simon, and in Some Cases It Flourishes as Never Before.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

King Ras Tafari of Abyssinia, with Queen Mannen, Crown Prince Wassen and Prince Makonnen.

TO COMPLACENT Westerners who believe that slavery passed out of the world with the American Civil War, a disillusioning picture is presented by the English authoress, Kathleen Simon, in "Slavery," just published by Hodder & Stoughton of London. Slavery hasn't passed out at all, she assures the reader who is interested enough to examine her evidence. Indeed, it shows little promise of passing out within the century. In some lands it flourishes as it has never flourished before. In Abyssinia conservative estimates place the number of human chattels at more than 2,000,000, a figure exceeding that of the free men. In China millions more drag out their unhappy lives under the whips of inhuman masters. Arabia holds thousands in bondage; so does Liberia; so does Burma; so does Nepal and even the British protectorate of Sierra Leone is getting rid of the nefarious traffic but slowly.

"There are certainly in the world today at least 4,000,000 slaves," Lady Simon writes. "There are probably many more; their number may even exceed 6,000,000. But in any case, the minimum number of 4,000,000 persons, held in bondage as a saleable property, is established by trustworthy evidence. The cry of these slaves—the more pathetic because it is so largely inarticulate—comes ringing across the sandy deserts and over the ocean waves to civilization. It is a cry for just one thing—Liberty!

"* * * Whether the number of slaves today be 4,000,000 or 6,000,000, all these slaves are saleable property, and as such they can never possess the right either to act as they like or to control the movements of their own intimate relationships. The husband may be sold and parted from his wife, or the wife from the husband; the mother has no right to control the movements of her children; these, being a property, are not under the custody or guardianship of the parent, but are at the absolute disposal of the owner of the property. Slavery ignores the intimate ties of motherhood and fatherhood, and not only claims, but enforces, the right to break up families and to sell separately father, mother and children in the best market."

LADY SIMON, who is the wife of the Right Honorable Sir John Simon, K. C. V. O., explains that she has assembled her material from four main sources. These sources are the stories brought back from slave lands by travelers, the governmental publications of various countries, the reports issued by the League of Nations and the unashamed admissions of the slave countries themselves. It appears she has not conducted a first-hand investigation in the slave areas herself, but she has succeeded in rounding out a formidable volume of evidence. Some British reviewers have ventured the prediction that her work will take rank beside "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as a preachment against the institution of human bondage.

According to Lady Simon's observations, it is in Abyssinia that slaves not only are most numerous, but suffer the most tragic fate. Periodic raids into adjoining territories are resorted to for supplying the lively market, and the unfortunate captives are mostly women and children. They are dragged from their villages in miserable droves after the raiders have put most of the adult male population to the sword.

"The completeness of destruction by Abyssinian slave raiders is the completeness of the locust," she writes, "but it is more cruel. It is known that many of these raids have ravaged beyond the Kenya-Abyssinian and the Sudan-Abyssinian borders. The ravages of the slave traders on both sides of these borders are well known to British officials.

"Major Darley tells us of the following incident connected with one slave raid. On the trail, he said, he 'counted the dead and dying bodies of more than 50 captives who had dropped by the roadside. For on such journeys there is no commissariat department, and those who carry no supplies can hope only for a merciful spear, since the alternative is death by thirst or by the teeth and talons of wild beasts.

"'THESE things we have seen. And we have seen also hundreds of square miles of territory utterly depopulated by Abyssinian raids. * * * The depopulation of the border and the absence of adequate police forces tempt the Abyssinians to advance further and further; and on one occasion at least they have penetrated no less than 120 miles into British territory.'

"The story two former British officials (Major Darley and Dr. Dyce Sharp) told is the same story that is told by every man and woman who has been brought into intimate contact with conditions in Abyssinia," Lady Simon continues. "Slave owning, slave raiding and slave trading permeate the national life. So long as slave owning obtains, so long will slave trading and slave raiding continue. According to these two writers, even the Regent of Abyssinia (now the King) is not unwilling to receive gifts of slaves, for they say:

"'Only the other day the Regent in Addis Ababa received a present of 140 slaves, most of whom were children, of both sexes, between the ages of 6 and 14, though a few were adult women with babies at the breast. And even the European inhabitants of the capital can hardly avoid becoming slave owners.'

"This picture of gifts of slaves made in the capital of the country requires to be put side by side with the ghastly picture of slave raiding and slave trading carried on in the Hinterland for the purpose of maintaining the supply. Dr. Sharp and Major Darley tell us that the effort to maintain the supply produces the following conditions:

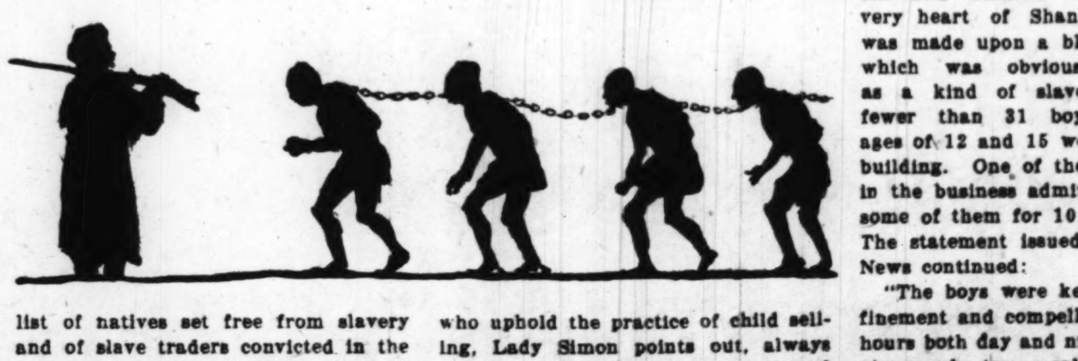
"'Gangs of slaves, marching in misery, the men chained together in rows, and the women and children dragging themselves along beside the main body, can be seen by any traveler in Southern Abyssinia today. Some of these slaves are captured on Abyssinian territory, others in British East Africa, others in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.'"

BUT the raiders frequently find that they have to pay a heavy price for their incursions into British territory, Lady Simon relates. In Kenya Colony they are often overtaken by detachments of the King's African Rifles, who are posted along the border in order to prevent these incursions. In the Sudan the Slavery Patrol is always on the watch for raiders. In one instance the patrol was confronted by no fewer than 400 rifles, but the patrol put up a stern fight, killing three and wounding 10 or more of the slavers. On several other occasions there were bitter encounters.

In the Assembly of the League of Nations in 1927, the writer explains, considerable effort was made toward bringing about the abolition of slavery in Abyssinia and it was only after a great deal of public criticism had been heard that a report was presented to the League for consideration. This report purported to give a nominal list of natives set free from slavery and of slave traders convicted in the country as a result of the efforts of the present ruler, Ras Tafari, who is said to be vigorously opposed to slavery. The report showed that in three years only 1109 slaves had been liberated and only 164 traders punished. A thousand slaves set free out of more than 2,000,000 in the country! At this rate, Lady Simon declares, liberation of all would require a thousand years.

"On September 28, 1923," Lady Simon writes, "Abyssinia became a member of the League of Nations, and accepted the Covenant of the League. The Assembly of the League agreed to welcome the membership of Abyssinia, subject to an undertaking on her part 'to secure the complete suppression of slavery in all its forms and the slave trade by land and sea.'

"Thus Abyssinia has taken the first step, and it would seem that it is for the League of Nations now to ascertain why her obligation has not been carried out; why it is that the abolition of slavery is proving a task too colossal for the present rulers; and then to proceed to offer to Abyssinia such assistance as may be necessary to make the Central Government strong enough to carry out the reforms necessary to the abolition of slavery."



CHINA, in the matter of slavery, is one of the uncharted regions of the world, according to Lady Simon. However, it is officially admitted that interwoven in the social life of the country is the practice of the sale of little children, with all the disastrous consequences that follow in the wake of child slavery. In the 18 provinces of China proper, with an area over eight times the size of Germany, and a population of over 300,000,000 people, it is declared, there are millions of children and young people held as property-slaves. Those who uphold the practice of child selling, Lady Simon points out, always produce the same set of ancient and specious apologies. They plead that the child victims of cruelty are proportionately few, that the oppression to which they are admittedly subjected inflicts but little suffering on their philosophical nature, and that in any case the bondage only lasts until the children reach the age of 15 to 20 years; that, moreover, it is the custom of the country to buy and sell these young people, and that it would be difficult to interfere with a custom so closely interwoven with the habits of the Chinese.

Occasionally the curtain is drawn aside, and one is allowed to peep behind the scenes into the tragic condition of slaves in China, continues the writer. Here and there a lone voice is raised against this wholesale degradation of child life. She quotes Charles H. Coats, author, traveler and for a long period a resident in China:

"Individual cruelties which would electrify any country in Europe with a spasm of horror hardly awaken the mild comment of a single street in China's grand modern republic. Floggings, suspensions, the pouring of boiling water over hands, the amputation of a finger joint, gagging and tying up for torture with hot irons, and similar cruelties are not uncommonly practiced on these children."

Among the cases mentioned is that of a little girl who "as a child had been suspended by her owners from a ceiling, hanging by one rope which bound together both wrists and both ankles, and left in that situation all night. By the morning the poor limbs were so mortified by this ordeal that all four had to be amputated. The foreign doctor who performed the operation secured for the child her freedom and a monetary compensation sufficient for her future from the owners, under threat of publication of the facts."

And these conditions, Lady Simon reminds the reader, prevail in Shanghai, one of the more modernized parts of China, where there is a large European population, numbers of churches, responsible newspapers and able editors—one of the great centers of public opinion in the East.

IN MAY, 1925, the Central News circulated a statement giving the results of a raid made by British and Chinese detectives in the very heart of Shanghai. The raid was made upon a blacksmith's shop, which was obviously being used as a kind of slave market. No fewer than 31 boys between the ages of 12 and 15 were found in the building. One of the men concerned in the business admitted he had sold some of them for 10 shillings apiece. The statement issued by the Central News continued:

"The boys were kept in strict confinement and compelled to work long hours both day and night. They were given only two meals of rice a day, and any lad who refused to work was handcuffed and suspended to a wall. No sleeping accommodation was provided, the slaves being obliged to take their rest on the floor. The oldest captive had been in slavery for nearly six years, and many of them were in very poor health. Marks on their bodies indicated that they had been burned with iron rods."

Lady Simon quotes further from the report of the Shanghai Municipal Council to the International Labor Organization of the League of Nations. . . .

"Young female children are commonly purchased and employed as domestic servants. They probably begin to work as soon as it is physically possible for them to do so. This practice is general throughout the country. It obviously lends itself to great abuse and the commission has little doubt that, like other forms of slavery, it is the source of much human misery. The commission has reason to believe, from the evidence given before it, that many slave children are employed in native brothels and trained to prostitution."

In Nepal, the little Himalayan kingdom which flourishes high on the mountain plateaus, slavery endures against the most resolute endeavors of the Maharaja Sir Chandra Shumshere Jung to put it down, 52,000 slaves being held in bondage by 15,000 owners. In 1924, it is related, the Maharaja announced his determination to undertake the task of emancipating all the slaves of the kingdom. As if campaigning for an election, the Maharaja went about the country making speeches against the evils of slavery and appealing to the conscience of his people. He summarized the results of his own investigations into domestic slavery, pointing to specific instances of suffering and woe. Lady Simon reproduces part of one speech, as follows:

"'THE mother, a slave, had given birth to seven children, and her master, despite her protests and tearful prayers, had already disposed of one daughter and four sons by sale. The woman, in her petition through the Niksari Office, wrote that the bitter lament of the children at thus being forced to separate from their mother sent a pang through her heart more acute than any she had ever suffered; that she summoned resignation to bear the misfortune and drew consolation from what was left her; that she submitted to it as the work of that fatality, the result of the accumulated Karma of her previous births which had followed her like a shadow to her present existence; but that when to her dismay the hard-hearted master arranged to take away the baby slave that was still suckling at her breast, her endurance broke down completely, she supplicated and prayed—as parents do pray, as you and I pray to the Gods on high when the dearest of our children lies in the clutches of grim death—to her master, the arbiter of her destiny, and to her as omnipotent in this crisis as fell Death itself. But all to no purpose. The adamant heart did not melt. The master completed the transaction. Then, maddened at a treatment which is resented even by irrational beasts, she came all the way to see if the Maharaja, 'the common father of all people,' would do aught to allay the consuming sorrow at her breast.'

"The Maharaja explained to his audience that he had attempted to convince the owner that he was doing a wrong to this unfortunate woman," Lady Simon explains. "He told the man that he would yet have to answer to his Creator for his inhumanity. Finding appeals were useless, the ruler provided the woman with money with which to buy back the children who had been sold away from her."

NO MORE WIDOWS

By FRANK CONDON

GEORGE was having a miserable time. He said so repeatedly and blamed me for having dragged him into it. The mosquitoes were giving him thunder. He had picked a lovely red hibiscus flower, which immediately produced a swell rash on all his fingers and both thumbs. He couldn't sleep nights, and besides all that, Julia was driving him slowly insane.

On the third day, or rather, the third night, he strolled over to where I was lounging comfortably in a wicker chair, listening to a man from Australia while he described potatoes.

"Henry," said George, mentally brushing the Australian potato expert aside, "why didn't you tell me?"

"Tell you what?" I asked.

"Why didn't you tell me a person can't sleep here in Honolulu?"

That is where we were at the moment.

"I didn't know it," I replied. "This is the first I've heard about it. And anyhow, what difference does it make to an owl? You don't sleep nights whether you are in Honolulu or Chicago."

George deposited himself in an adjoining wicker chair and gave himself over to dismal growlings and lamentations. He had hollows under his eyes and a generally worn appearance. Once a youngish, plump fellow with rosy cheeks, he now suddenly seemed old, and his hands trembled, especially when he lifted a drink of okolehao, which is the native beverage poison and will blow the gold out of your back teeth. Staring at George, I felt sorry for him. We had only recently arrived in Honolulu, the Gem of the Ocean, the Pearl of the Pacific, the Pathway of the Gods. Instead of brightening, George seemed to be sinking lower and lower.

"You better brace up, George," I said. "This won't do at all. You're commencing to look bad."

"Why wouldn't I look bad?" he demanded. "I'll bet I never leave these islands alive."

"Well, I'm with you," I said comfortingly. "If somebody has to go back with the remains, I'm around, and I'll do my duty."

THE real reason why George gazed at life with a frustrated scowl was none other than this same Julia, whom he had encountered on the steamer from America. She was a vivacious widow and he fell in love with her the first day out. It was one of those swift shipboard affairs, with a full moon silvering the sea, deck chairs side by side, ukeleles playing sentimental ballads and George asking Julia how she would like to marry him and forever more ride down the moon-kissed ocean of life.

She said: "Yes, George darling."

I believe now that young, vivacious widows always reply in the affirmative, which gives them opportunity to think things over. George was in ecstasies. He walked about the ship in a warm glow, giving away money to the stewards and looking happy. He remained full of sentimental prune juice until the ship docked at Honolulu, and from that moment, his joy diminished. Julia, so it appeared, was a mere trifler with male affections. She was a blonde. Her hair was the color of ashes. George also was the color of ashes, after the first day in Honolulu, for Julia was cool with him and danced perpetually with a bicycle manufacturer from Cleveland, Ohio.

"George," I advised, "the best thing will be for you to forget Julia. She is just a young widow, and you cannot trust a young widow any farther than you can throw a musk-ox."

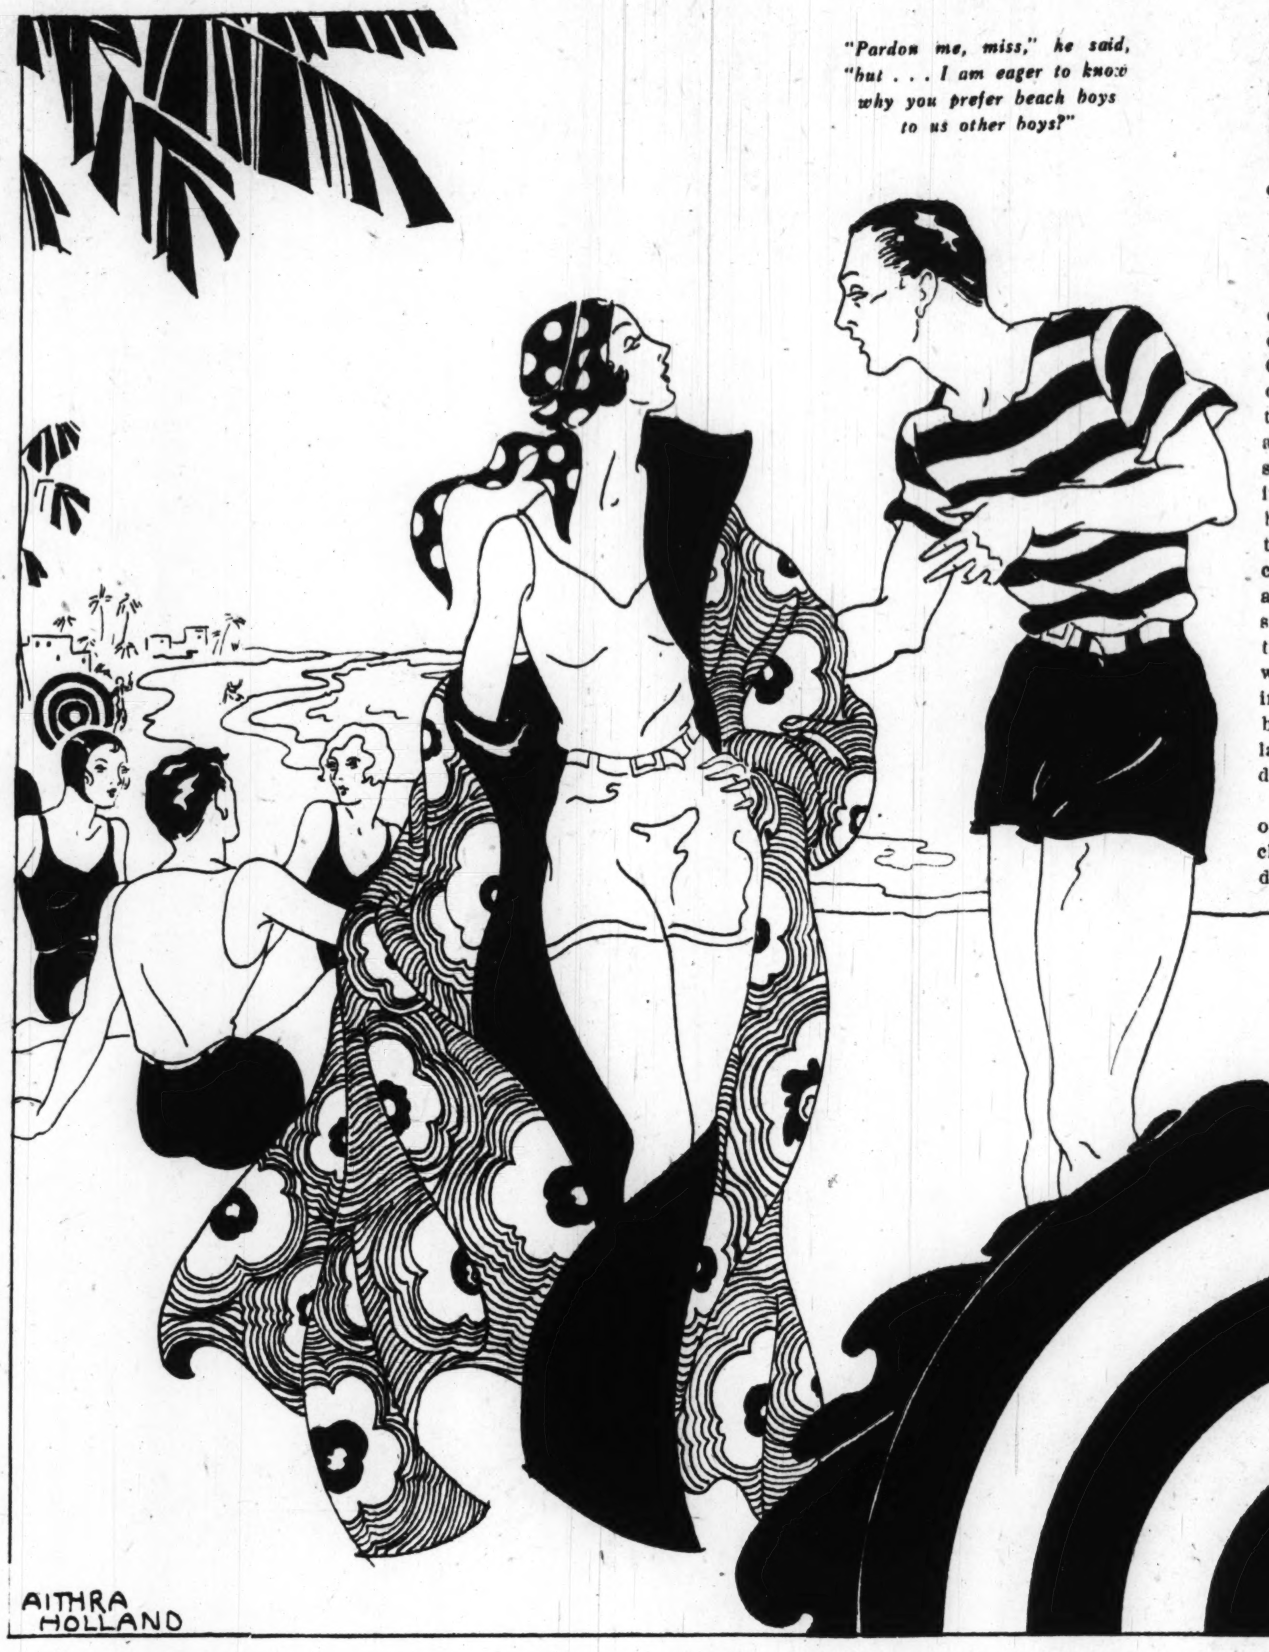
"I shall never forget Julia," he said mournfully.

Presently, he began worrying me about his sleepless state and I investigated. It seems that people cannot sleep in Honolulu when the wind blows from the north, for a north wind, according to Hawaiian folklore, is kahuna. Kahuna means ill luck. When the wind is kahuna, the spirit of slumber departs and strangers spend the dark hours chasing mosquitoes with a pump gun. It dawned upon me suddenly. The couples we beheld sitting on the beach late at night, holding hands, were merely victims of the universal sleeplessness. George and I had been stepping over them in our wanderings and there, also, we saw our first beach boys.

"George," I said, hoping to take his mind off Julia, "what do you think of these beach boys?"

"I don't know what to think," he answered. I had inquired of other gentlemen at our hotel and they, like George, didn't know what to think. They were nonplussed. None of the males knew what to think about beach boys, but it was different with the females.

We had been studying the beach boys in an effort to discover why wealthy American ladies preferred their company. Down on the coral strand we beheld handsome women in elegant bathing costumes, and many of them sat by the hour in the sun, conversing with beach boys and utterly neglecting graduates of Eastern universities and tired young business men from the States, who had come out to acquire a coat of tan. Why was this so? I asked George. George said he did not know.



"Pardon me, miss," he said, "but . . . I am eager to know why you prefer beach boys to us other boys?"

The Honolulu beach boy is a large, muscular fellow, about two shades darker than a football. He plays the ukelele with skill and gusto, sings sentimental ballads, rides a surfboard with no effort, is a veritable fish in the water, but is not beautiful, at least what I call beautiful. Generally the beach boy has no front teeth, which seems to increase his popularity with ladies. George and I stared at the American business men, who were strolling the beach in their brand-new bathing uniforms. They had no ladies to talk to them and wore an air of neglect.

"The way to find out," I said to George, "is to walk up to one of these rich ladies and ask her in a polite voice."

"True enough," said George, who will ask anybody anything.

HE SELECTED a striking brunette, who happened by merest chance to be the daughter of a belted Earl, homebound to London from Australia. She was extremely British and scornful of everyone except beach boys. It was her custom to stare directly through any males she encountered until her eye presently fell upon a beach boy, whereat she sprang into life. I would be arrested if I ventured to stroll up to a strange lady and ask questions, but George can do it.

"Pardon me, miss," he said, halting the daughter of the belted Earl, "but as an investigator of curious facts, I am eager to know why you prefer beach boys to us other boys? Why is it so?"

The lady was not insulted or indignant. She even smiled slightly, as an adult will when a feeble-minded child comes along with a query. She stared intently at George, and in so doing she absorbed the details of his costume, which was conventional without being distinctive. George was adorned with a wrinkled shirt and a pair of swimming pants which would have fitted thousands of people, but did not fit George. He is a sterling character, but is not much to look at unless he is in a telephone booth wearing a fur overcoat. The English lady scanned him briefly.

"I like beach boys," she replied in an even voice, "because of their gorgeous manhood."

That was all the lady said. She turned away with a cold gesture. George bowed and walked on down the beach of Waikiki, and we knew then why ladies preferred beach boys to male American tourists or British taxpayers.

The faithless Julia continued to dance and flirt with strangers and George went on moping and admitting his life was ruined. He bought a ukelele and accompanied himself while he sang sad songs, or at least he said he was accompanying himself. Every day, George's melodies grew more melancholy and I am here to say that the Hawaiians own and produce the saddest, weepiest songs on earth. The way George sang them did not make them less sad, for George is no thrush.

"They do seem really fond of music," he said, meaning the Honolulu people. "Nowhere will you find harmony taking such an important part in civic life."

This was quite true. We happened to be in a gasoline filling station at the moment, where a brown-skinned person was shooting gasoline into our tank, or rather Oscar's tank. A phonograph was in full eruption. It was playing "I'm Counting the Drops as They Fall," which is a sad song, but had no reference to the gasoline.

"Universal music," I stated, "is a good thing in a modern republic. If we had more music at home, we would have less bootlegging."

THE music played universally in Hawaii is either "The Song of the Islands" or "Aloha," and after you have heard these two pieces twelve thousand, seven hundred and ten times each, you get to know them. You feel as if you had always known them. George went pale over "The Song of the Islands," which is a truly haunting melody and will make emotional persons weep. "Aloha" is likewise sad. George told me that without doubt, "Aloha" is the saddest song ever written by man. It got so he would begin to wipe his eyes while the band was merely tuning up to play "Aloha."

And "Aloha" is, of course, the leading word in Hawaii. It is a protean word, the like of which exists in no other language and means, as you probably are aware, "Farewell" or "Good-by." It likewise means "Hello," "Good morning," "Good evening," "How are you today?" "What car do you drive?" "Is that stuff pure?" "Have you seen my wife?" "I love you," and "What time is it?" The education of youth is no great problem in a land where they have a word like "Aloha." A native starts to school at nine and graduates at ten, turns on his phonograph at eleven, and is selling Chinese pearls to American tourists before lunch.

"We will have to rent a motor car," George observed.

UPON asking a motor cop where one might rent an automobile, we were directed to Oscar. Oscar had no other name—just plain, simple Oscar. He was a cosmopolitan character, one-third Arab, one-third Jap, one-third Chinese and one-third Hawaiian, and one side of his head had either caved in of its own accord, or somebody had caved it in for him. He was the sole proprietor of the most careless filling station and rental agency in the United States, and supplied broken-down motor cars to tourists for fifty dollars per week per car per tourist. By renting a car from Oscar, we would be able to save thousands of dollars in taxicab fares. We would do our own driving.

"We will certainly save a lot of money this way," George said cheerfully, handing Oscar fifty dollars, American money, which is good in Honolulu, because that is the only kind of money they have in Honolulu. Some tourists believe Hawaii is a foreign country, but we made no such silly mistake. The moment we landed on Pier 1 an officer in a blue suit rubbed his hand over George and removed a small flask of snake remedy, which George had brought along in case of attack by Honolulu snakes. We were fined $5 and knew at once that we were still in America.

Oscar took the $50 and disappeared and when I say disappeared I do not mean that he simply wen around the corner. He went away and was gone for days and others informed us that he always disappeared when anybody handed him fifty dollars. We drove blithely down the street for exactly one block to the corner of Nuuana Road and School Street, where our front wheel fell off. Stepping out of the hired automobile to see why a front wheel should fall off so soon, we encountered a Honolulu motorcycle policeman, who, after a brief conversation, handed me a ticket, which requested my presence in court for not having a license to drive about the streets in a gasoline vehicle. We then hired our first taxicab, left Oscar's wreck upon the highway and proceeded at full speed.

"I don't see where we will save such a heap of money dealing with Oscar," I said to George, who scowled at me.

Later on we returned to the rental agency and discovered Oscar's absence. They said he had gone fishing. Three young Chinese boys had charge of the business and were loath to go any further with the renting of automobiles. It was their feeling that we should stick to the maimed car and not demand any fresh automobiles and it was our morning custom to drive up in a taxicab, dismount, argue with the Chinese in their own tongue and while I talked, George went from car to car trying to start an engine, any engine at all.

THE instant I heard an engine start, I gave over arguing in Chinese, joined George in whatever car he happened to find and we drove rapidly out of the filling station before the boys could have us arrested. Each morning found us with a new car, not really a new car, but a fresh car, and each day we broke down in some remote nook of Honolulu, abandoned our machine and hired taxicabs.

"Wasn't a bad idea of yours," I said bitterly to George, after we had used up five of Oscar's cripples. "Hiring a motor car by the week."

"It was not my idea at all," he replied. "In fact, I warned you against it at the start."

Bad as they were, however, it was one of Oscar's touring cars that brought about our acquaintance with the little native lady, the rosy-cheeked Hawaiian lassie, who sold ginger ale and frosted cakes at a roadside stand. We had cracked up as usual, miles from home, and were hunting a telephone, and the girl aided

It was a simple tale of Hawaii and to me it had an unfinished sound, yet George liked it. A young lady and her sweetheart had come to the parting of the ways amid the usual tears. His love died and he began to treat his sweetheart coldly. He told her he no longer loved her and was about to keep company with another young lady in a different part of town. She wept copiously, of course, and pleaded for a final meeting beneath the tropic moon and the lad consented. They met for the last time, and the girl brought with her a lei—a kahuna lei. She placed it about the boy's neck, and almost instantly he changed. He became affectionate. He told her that he loved her and would always love her. They were married within the week and lived happily for more than nine years.

"And then what?" I inquired when the girl ceased, but she said she knew nothing further.

"This is frightfully interesting," he stated. "Where could a person get one of these kahuna leis?"

Now kahuna means good luck and it likewise means bad luck, and it is always a problem to determine whether, when you fool with kahuna, you have picked up good fortune or the opposite. The girl believed George would have no trouble in finding a first-class kahuna lei, warranted to bring results, at a cost of about five dollars. He handed her a bill.

"You want to kill somebody?" she inquired.

"Nobody but Oscar," he stated, "and I can do that myself. What I desire is a magic lei, like this young girl used—one that will cause a certain party to look upon me with approval."

WE RETURNED to town in a native taxicab, and paused to examine one of those Japanese hanging gardens, which are plentiful in Honolulu and environs, although none of them are really hanging. I have never been in a city which boasted so many Japanese hanging gardens and they are usually hidden away in obscure nooks, so that a stranger could hunt for days and days and never find them.

In order to reach a Japanese garden, you invariably drive down a one-way alley, paved with cobbles and bordered with little fishponds. When you meet an on-coming automobile, you simply get out of your car, give it to the other man with a courteous gesture and walk the remaining distance to the Jap garden, where you will be served a sukiaka dinner.

His love died and he began to treat his sweetheart coldly. He told her he no longer loved her and was about to keep company with another young lady in a different part of town. They were married within the week and lived happily for more than nine years.

"And then what?" I inquired when the girl ceased, but she said she knew nothing further.

During the recital of this bit of island lore, I could see George brightening up. His eyes commenced to sparkle.

"This is frightfully interesting," he stated. "Where could a person get one of these kahuna leis?"

Now kahuna means good luck and it likewise means bad luck, and it is always a problem to determine whether, when you fool with kahuna, you have picked up good fortune or the opposite. The girl believed George would have no trouble in finding a first-class kahuna lei, warranted to bring results, at a cost of about five dollars. He handed her a bill.

"You want to kill somebody?" she inquired.

"Nobody but Oscar," he stated, "and I can do that myself. What I desire is a magic lei, like this young girl used—one that will cause a certain party to look upon me with approval."

WE RETURNED to town in a native taxicab, and paused to examine one of those Japanese hanging gardens, which are plentiful in Honolulu and environs, although none of them are really hanging. I have never been in a city which boasted so many Japanese hanging gardens and they are usually hidden away in obscure nooks, so that a stranger could hunt for days and days and never find them.

In order to reach a Japanese garden, you invariably drive down a one-way alley, paved with cobbles and bordered with little fishponds. When you meet an on-coming automobile, you simply get out of your car, give it to the other man with a courteous gesture and walk the remaining distance to the Jap garden, where you will be served a sukiaka dinner.

Americans visiting Hawaii are always intensely interested in eating a sukiaka dinner, and even when George was at his lowest ebb, he was still able to consume Jap edibles, which consist largely of raw fish and clams that seem to be trying to live down the record of an ill-spent life. The principal novelty about a regular sukiaka dinner is that you sit upon the floor, with your shoes off and being thus solidly on the floor, the lizards can run over you with great freedom. They are quite harmless and of a battleship gray and after three or four small lizards have crawled across your shrinking person, you reach the point where you can bear it without shrieking.

GEORGE dragged me to five sukiaka dinners and I went along merely because I saw it was taking his mind off Julia. After the fifth dinner, I resigned.

"That will be enough," I stated when he began arranging for another. "I know when I have had enough sukiaka dinners. I like the Japs. They are a wonderful people and make the best cigarette holders in the world, but I am finished with hanging dinners. From now on, I sit on a chair and eat food that I recognize."

We therefore gave up our life of midnight gayety amid the hanging gardens of Honolulu and returned to the rigors of our own modest hotel. George fell back into sentimental despair and began crooning over his ukelele. He took to sitting motionless by the window, staring out at Waikiki Beach and thinking sad thoughts about Julia. There were dozens of better-looking girls in sight, but old George could see nobody but the fair and fickle Julia. He came to me in a state of excitement.

"Henry," he said, "what do you think?"

"Go away," I said, "and let me shave in peace."

"The girl has just sent me a kahuna lei," he continued, his manner growing more excited.

"What girl?"

"The little Hawaiian girl. And here's where I win Julia away from the bicycle man. It might work, Henry."

"You are going to get yourself into trouble yet," I remarked, and George hurried away with a look of determination. That night there was a dance on the hotel veranda and when Julia appeared in a lovely evening gown, George walked boldly up to her, carrying in his hand a circlet of flowers, the trademark of Hawaii.

"Julia," he said, "I have brought you a lei. Will you wear it?"

She looked at him in some astonishment. In his sorrow, he had been avoiding her.

"Why, George, of course I shall be glad to wear your lei," she replied and he placed it about her neck. The dancing then proceeded, and Julia danced as usual with the gentleman from Cleveland. George loitered in the shadows like a lost soul, waiting for a change in his beloved, but as far as I could see, there was none.

I retired at a comparatively early hour, leaving the dancers to their fun, and nothing happened until George burst into my room at midnight, or just as I was about to fall asleep in spite of the kahuna wind. He had a wild look.

"Henry," he said hoarsely, "it is all over."

"She took you back?" I asked him, sitting up in bed.

"She did not. Just the opposite. I may even have to leave the hotel. The doctor is working on her now."

"Doctor?" I said. "Doctor?"

"Oh!" George exclaimed, "why did I ever do it?"

I naturally inquired and he plunged into a hysterical tale of what had happened, meanwhile pacing my bedroom floor and giving off weird moaning noises. Julia, the fickle one, had worn his kahuna lei throughout the early hours of the evening, and as it happened to be a warm night, she perspired slightly while dancing. The kahuna lei went to work.

IT WAS apparently real kahuna. Whether it was the native curse placed upon it by the spirit or whether a sprig of poison ivy had been skillfully woven into the circlet, nobody could say, but the fact remained that Julia burst forth into a pink rash about 10 minutes after 10, examined herself in a mirror with a startled eye, fell into hysterics, summoned the house physician and demanded that George be arrested for trying to bring about her murder. George said that the excitement was terrific, especially when Julia pointed out that he was a disappointed suitor and would stop at nothing.

The news came to George while he was sitting by himself at an iron table, drinking okolehao and thinking doleful thoughts. The house detective questioned him closely, but nothing further was done at the time. First reports had it that Julia was dying, which was not remotely so, as nothing can kill a young widow with ashen hair.

"She says she hates me and will never speak to me again," he moaned.

"You could hardly expect her to," I said mildly. "If you poisoned me with flowers, I would also treat you coldly."

"I was trying to win her love, Henry. You know that. You don't suppose they put something on those flowers?"

"Only a dose of prussic acid," I replied. "And I am glad of it. I hope the lady can't leave her room for six days. That kahuna lei is all right with me."

George went away, muttering to himself, and spent the night prowling about Waikiki Beach. In the morning, he came again.

"Henry," he said, "life is a mistake."

"Yours is getting to be," I admitted.

"Julia has nothing but hatred for me now. Think of it! And the manager says she is going to marry that fellow from Cleveland."

"Good news," I said wearily. "You did what you could, George."

"I think," he said in a sad voice, strumming on his ukelele, "I think I shall go somewhere and commit suicide."

"I would do so. You are not much use to anybody, and if you can't tie the rope, I will help you."

Personally, I was happy, now that the love affair was ended, for George would eventually return to normal, and he is a splendid fellow when he is normal. Marrying Julia would have been his greatest mistake, for I contend that no young fellow can marry a yellow-haired widow without storing up a future of perpetual uneasiness. He felt so down about it that I consented to attend another sukiaka dinner.

"But this will be the last," I stated.

We decided to return to Chicago which is where George works, if you care to call it working. His father owns a shoe factory and George rides in every so often and asks foremen how the shoes are getting on.

"We start Saturday," he said. "I have had enough of Honolulu. Certainly was an evil day when I came here."

THERE were three days left, and he spent the time prowling about in dismal reflection. Julia no longer even recognized him. Her rash disappeared slowly, but she still regarded George as an insidious murderer and the Cleveland gentleman glared at my friend incessantly.

On Friday he hurried into town to see about tickets on the steamer.

There happened to be a liner coming in from Java and points in the Orient, a fine steamer full of jade and baled rubber, and the steamer paused in the port of Honolulu for 24 hours. As we appeared to pay for our tickets home the liner came around a corner and began warping in.

"There is the boat we take tomorrow," I said, hoping to cheer George up.

He grunted.

"Seems to be a very nice steamer."

He repeated the grunt. We strolled down the pier to watch the great ocean ship dock, because, to me, nothing is as fascinating as watching a liner tie up to a dock. George leaned against a pile of barrels and stared about him.

"Henry," he cried suddenly, seizing me by the arm, "do you see the same thing I see?"

"What?" I asked.

He pointed a shaking finger. I looked aloft. He indicated the thin line of returning pilgrims, passengers leaning against the railing of the ship, many of them waving flags, handkerchiefs and hats.

"See the man in the red blazer?"

"Yes."

"See the woman in the white hat?"

"Yes."

"See the girl between them?"

I riveted my gaze.

"My word! Looks like Ada May"——

"It is Ada May."

"Surely looks like"——

"I tell you it is. That is Ada May!"

THE perspiration came out upon George's brow and he sat down upon a case of cod-liver oil going out to the Filipinos. I concentrated upon the arriving passenger above.

"That," I said, "is no doubt Ada May. Now what do you suppose she is doing over here? I thought she was in Switzerland."

"So did I," returned George.

Of course, it was Ada May Harper of Cos Cob who completely ruined George's life just one year before to the exact minute. Everyone knows the pitiful story of George and Ada May Harper and how she went faithless in Switzerland and fell in love with the Alpine hotel keeper, after promising to marry George. That was the time George tried to leap off an Alp, but was caught and fed brandy. Ada and George had been engaged for years, in fact, since childhood, and everyone expected them to marry and live in Cos Cob. By mere chance, Ada went to Switzerland with her mother, George naturally tagging along, and there she toppled over into love with the hotel gentleman, who had curly hair and could yodel.

George fled the Alps. For a while people thought he would not live. He wasted away to a shadow and had to drink milk daily. And now here she was, on the deck of a liner, waving a pink flag just as though she had not blasted a human life. George expressed a desire to leave the pier and hide.

"No," I said sternly. "Why should we run away from a woman?"

WE REMAINED stoically where we were and when the passengers streamed down the plank, I sauntered forward and George came along. Ada May saw him and I thought at first she would faint. She leaned against her mother, who is a large, capable woman, fit to be leaned against.

"George!" the girl cried.

"Ada May," said George, his lower jaw sagging, and they stood perfectly still, staring at each other.

"Where—where is your husband?" he asked in a low voice.

"Husband!" she said. "Why, George, I have no husband!"

As she spoke, George's face cleared and the paleness fled. Rapidly Ada May explained. It seems that after George left Switzerland, Ada May perceived the fullness of the mistake she had made in tossing aside a good American citizen. She realized too late, alas, that it was George she loved and not the yodeler. She tried to telegraph, but George was in a suburb of Cairo, drinking himself to death. These facts Ada May related, standing at the foot of the gangplank. The purser finally asked if they would kindly step to one side and let people leave the steamer.

George breathed hard, took Ada May in his arms, kissed her and almost kissed her mother, but nobody paid any attention, for people are always fussing over each other when a steamer arrives. No one in the vast throng realized that two blighted lives had suddenly become unblighted.

George turned to me subsequently.

"Henry," he said sharply, "what if that kahuna lei had worked?"

"It did work."

"What if it had worked out the other way—uh—I mean what if"——

"You know a lot of words, don't you, George?" I asked.

"Yes," he said.

"Well, don't say any of them," I counseled, looking hard at Ada May.

"What is a kahuna lei?" she asked.

"A kahuna lei," I said, stepping ahead of George, who was getting ready to pile up trouble for himself, "a kahuna lei is a horse with four white feet."

The next day we all sailed for America, Ada May and her mother and George and I. They are not married yet, but there is nothing to worry about. George's troubles are over forever, except for the few, trifling, unimportant vexations that go with married life.

Maya, firing from behind a boulder, exposed his right foot, and a soft-nosed bullet struck it. He picked out the pieces of lead, put axle grease on the wound and tied it up in rags. It was seven months before the wound had healed. The foot still is stiff.

Maya and one of his Lieutenants and 100 of their men lagged behind the column one day and suddenly turned aside into the brush. Near the end of the day they came to a town held by Carranza troops, and surrendered.

With nearly 1000 other deserters they were kept in jail at Villa de Noriega, Nuevo Leon, for four months, subsisting on scanty rations of beans and tortillas, contributed by the townspeople, and living in almost unbelievable filth and squalor. Finally, Carranza feeling pretty well established, they were sent to San Luis Potosi, packed like cattle in box cars, and released.

It was several days before transportation to other points was provided for the released prisoners, and during this time they had to shift for themselves. A kindly elderly woman saw Maya and felt sorry for him.

To any but the very kind of heart he must have been a repulsive and comical figure, he recalls. He had a bushy black beard and his hair was long and tangled. He hadn't had a bath for months and he was verminous. A slender, wiry man, slightly under medium height, he was almost lost in an old khaki coat and breeches that must have been made for a giant. There was nothing between the khaki and skin.

But the woman didn't laugh or sneer. She fed Maya and gave him a bed for a night. He wouldn't use the clean bedclothes. He carefully removed them and slept naked on the mattress.

Pretending to be an American, Maya got transportation to Laredo, Tex. He arrived there late in 1919, and without loss of time began his long struggle for a foothold in the United States.

In the back of his mind, ever since his departure from Spain, had been the idea of teaching, for which he felt his studies had fitted him. Now was the time to begin carrying out his plan. As a first step he got a job on a Texas farm. That yielded enough money to buy a few clothes and start his travels through the country. In Washington, D. C., he got his first chance to teach, as assistant to a Spanish instructor. Then he taught the language in schools in Montana and Kentucky. While teaching in Nebraska College, Omaha, he became naturalized as a citizen of the United States and married an American girl. A year ago he came to Soldan High School. In addition to English and the Spanish he teaches, he speaks French, German and Italian.

"They lived violently and most of them died violently," said Maya the other day, recalling the men who struggled for power in Mexico in that tumultuous decade following Diaz' fall — Madero, Huerta, Villa, Carranza, Obregon and many lesser leaders. "Perhaps they would not have had it otherwise. For myself, I am sincerely thankful that I saw what seems to me the futility of such a life before my bones were laid in some shallow grave in the shadow of the Sierra Madre. I think it is much pleasanter here." He waved his pipe to take in his comfortable apartment.

"I can sit here and plan my small share in something that I regard as worth doing—the training of young minds. And I can get all the excitement I want by reading of travels and explorations and the march of the world events, or by watching a football contest, or engaging in a good, brisk game of chess."

"Your heart line shows many difficulties ahead."

"Luck" was always against him...until he ended "B.O." (Body Odor)

SOMEONE else got the job he wanted. Someone else won the girl he admired. "Bad luck," he called it. But the real reason was "B.O."!

The EASTER EGG, in PERSON

He Causes a Sensation in the Home Circle.

IT IS zero hour for the spring offensive. The average wife starts her campaign in March with a barrage of "Honeys" and "Dearies," expresses tender concern over hubby's headaches, colds and other ailments, lobs over the slippers and house jacket before he even wishes for them and grabs a lighted match out of thin air every time he stows a cigar in his face. At about this time she goes over the top in a sortie, which, if successful, will enable her to take her place in next Sunday's big parade.

"Well, Waldo," says Mrs. Wowser, looking up from the home-hints column, "Bunny Day is coming."

"Yeah, all right," mumbles Mr. Wowser from the recesses of the sporting page. "To a woman Easter means but one thing—and plenty of them. I suppose I'll have to fork over a handful of rupees so you can buy yourself one of those toe-dusting frocks with the chawed hem-line, lizard footwear, sand-colored stockings (to provide a homey environment for the shoes), a streamline coat and one of those Robert E. Lee hats with the side-wheel effect."

"And how about you, Waldo? It wouldn't be a bad idea if you poured yourself into a new spring suit and let me give away that old blue one. You'd look so distinguished and your son and daughter would be so proud of you! I hate to see you going around resembling the American tragedy."

"Nothing doing," says Waldo doggedly. "When you get so ancient that new clothes make you look 'distinguished' instead of 'handsome' it's time to quit buying them. I cling to the winter front. The only spring style I'm interested in is whether Hornsby's going to crouch over the plate or stand 'way back and swing from his heels."

The next morning Mr. Wowser is walking past a store window when he observes a gray necktie with innumerable red half-moons offered at $1.50. It is a beautiful, sunny day, a sweet breeze is blowing, and Mr. Wowser hums lightly as he fingers the change in his trousers pocket. He studies the tie from various angles. It is knotted ever so neatly and blooms from a clean, white collar that surmounts a broad, impeccable bosom. There isn't a single eddy on the shirtfront. Mr. Wowser turns away, but stops short, considers and returns to the window. After all, it is a very good-looking tie. He gazes at it hungrily for a moment, bats his eyes reflectively and then enters the store.

A FLOORWALKER bobs up like a traffic cop from an alley. "Something in an Easter suit?" he croons pleasantly.

"Oh, no, no, no," Mr. Wowser assures him. "I just wanted to look over those ties you have in the window. There was one particular tie I—er"——

He finds himself transported, as if by magic, to the neckwear counter, where a well-groomed young man adroitly twines a tie about his fingers, gives it a couple of flips and a yank and in some mysterious manner achieves a quite passable knot which he wafts under the customer's nose.

"Uh-huh," says Mr. Wowser, without enthusiasm. His roving eyes absorb the contents of the showcase.

Before he can voice a protest, seven trays are lugged forth and their contents spilled on the counter. Both the floorwalker and the salesman dive into this melange of silky brilliance, make knots out of some ties, point to others, pick up others and place others against Mr. Wowser's Adam's apple, and at the same time carry on an ecstatic prattle that sounds like something from Tennyson.

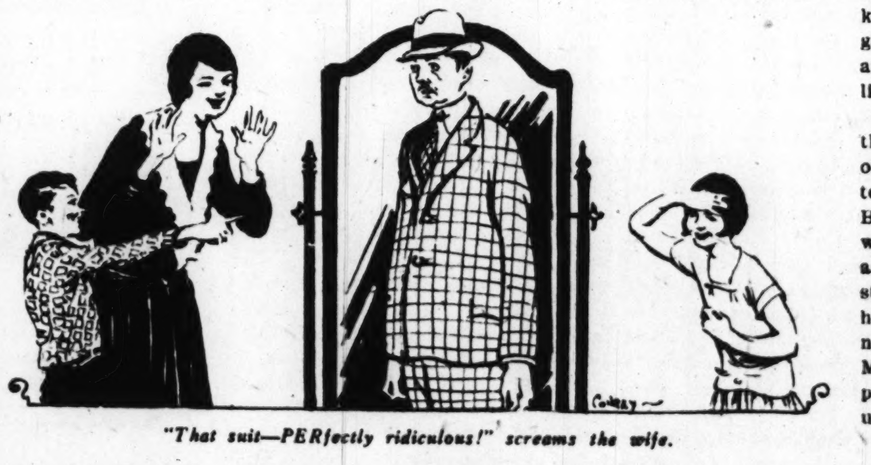
Mr. Wowser is somewhat dazed by it all, but feels that it is incumbent upon him to buy at least one necktie. He makes a hurried and desperate survey of the whole assortment and then, moved by a sudden impulse, designates one tie as his choice. A moment later he realizes that it isn't a very good tie; in fact, it's very similar to, if not the exact duplicate of, one he has at home. But it's too late to back out now. The gray tie with the red half-moons, the one that intrigued him to enter, has been completely forgotten.

The floorwalker excuses himself with a bow and a smile and Mr. Wowser breathes easier. Trying to pick out neckties with a domineering floorwalker waving colors before him like a kaleidoscope gives him the same sensation he gets in the street car when the man behind him tries to read his newspaper over his shoulder. It's a ghastly feeling and there's simply nothing to be done about it.

The customer's brain clears and he feels he can look on the ties with intelligent discrimination. A sudden gust of recklessness comes over him and he rapidly points out a half-dozen ties in a mad race to beat that certain protest from his conscience. Only that morning he denied little Waldo a dime with which to buy a sack of marbles.

"Something in shirts to match the ties?" comes a dulcet voice behind him. "In the counter across the aisle, sir." The floorwalker regards him with something akin to sympathy.

Mr. Wowser, in a kind of hypnotic trance, finds himself swept over to the designated counter, where his neckties are seized from his grasp and propped against immaculate shirtfronts. He sulkily views the display, then oscillates his shoulders toward one shirt and mumbles, "Owmuchizat?" The wee voice inside of him protests shrilly, but Mr. Wowser downs the clamor and boldly informs the salesman that he'll take those five. Then he stands bewildered by his own impetuousness.



"That suit—PERfectly ridiculous!" screams the wife.

"Marvelous selection, sir," says the suave voice behind him. "Something in silk handkerchiefs and hosiery to match the ties and shirts?"

"Got 'nuff socks," mumbles Mr. Wowser. "Where is this hosiery counter?"

Fifteen minutes later Mr. Wowser is red in the face and perspiring as he contemplates an okayed charge account totaling $37.50. And he had come in to look at a $1.50 necktie. Oh, well, Easter was coming, wasn't it? And hadn't his wife encouraged, nay, begged, him to buy new scenery? Sure she had. She wanted the kids to be proud of him, didn't she?

AS HE leaves the hat department Mr. Wowser picks up a colored booklet. In it is a number of handsome young devils wearing all kinds of fashionable suits. Mr. Wowser gazes at these heroes with unadulterated envy. Oh, if he could only look like that!

As he is about to despair, he reaches the end of the book and an illustration of a reddish suit christened "The Brixton." The party inhabiting "The Brixton" is a middle-aged gentleman with iron-gray hair, ruddy cheeks and a sleek, pointed mustache. He is standing in front of a ticker, one hand holding the tape, the other thrust nonchalantly into his trousers pocket. Mr. Wowser's lids narrow and he places the tip of his thumb against his upper set of teeth. . . .

It develops that "The Brixton" is grand enough to have its price written out in letters instead of figures, viz: $75. However, that doesn't deter Mr. Wowser. In 10 minutes he finds himself facing that great problem which is second only to that of the used razor blades: What to do with the watch and pocketbook while changing clothes in a dressing booth?

As he disembarks from the elevator, Mr. Wowser is shocked to see his path cut off by the floorwalker. Not for a thousand dollars would he give the floorwalker the satisfaction of knowing that he bought an Easter suit. The floorwalker regards him with a puzzled expression and Mr. Wowser smiles feebly.

"Jush borrowed uh telephone," he mumbles, and shamefully slinks away. It is the same feeling he gets when he refuses candy at a bridge party and is caught, afterward, trying to swipe a piece behind the hostess' back.

Three days later Mr. Wowser is all rigged up in his new finery, ready for the official verdict. He is smiling broadly; he feels prosperous, contented, fresh.

"That suit—PERfectly ridiculous!" screams his wife.

"Haw, haw—that shirt!" bellows Junior.

"My word, that tie—ee!" cries Daughter, clapping one hand to her forehead.

The Wowsers make a brave showing when they sally forth on Easter—that is, all but Mr. Wowser. He is clad in a certain blue suit. Upstairs, in his dresser, reposes "The Brixton." The blue suit isn't swell enough to have a name, but "Old Faithful" might be appropriate.

Years of scientific study are behind the Woodbury prescription for the care of the skin

★ DESQUAMATION —medical term for the invisible peeling that goes on in every healthy skin, and brings out the new skin just underneath

That VEIL★ of Dead Skin must come off

A veil of dry, dead skin is covering up the true beauty that lies just underneath!

Clear it off!

Let the fresh new skin come out! Help the natural DESQUAMATION that goes on invisibly in every healthy skin.

Here is the prescription worked out for just this purpose by the head of the Woodbury laboratories:—

Bathe the face in warm water. Then work gently into your skin a lather of Woodbury's soap. Wash off with warm water. The Woodbury lather has freed your skin of the tiny, invisible dead cells. Now tone the new fresh skin with a brisk splashing of cold water.

Never forget this basic treatment.

Woodbury's is 25 cents a cake at any drug-store or toilet-goods counter. It also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

To meet the Woodbury laboratories' exacting requirements for a facial soap, Woodbury's is very finely milled. This also makes it last much longer than ordinary soaps. The Andrew Jergens Company—Cincinnati, Ohio.

See what a special soap made to aid the skin's natural processes will do for you. Give your skin its first Woodbury treatment today

How To Get SOUND SLEEP without drugs

A New Discovery That Not Only Induces Instant Sleep. But Induces The Kind of Sleep That Brings All Day Energy Next Day

IF you are troubled with restless nights, we urge you to make the trial suggested here. Doing so has made a great difference in the lives of thousands of nervous people.

On doctors' advice, millions are employing this new way. For it is as free of drugs as the bread you eat or the milk you drink. And does far more than simply induce sleep! It rebuilds your wasted tissues while you sleep.

What It Is

It is called Ovaltine; a scientific food-concentrate developed in Switzerland by a scientist of world-fame. You take it in a cup of warm milk at bedtime; a super-delicious drink.

First, it induces sleep. You get sound, natural sleep a few minutes after you go to bed.

Then, while you sleep, its peculiar dietetic properties resupply your system with the energy lost the previous, active day. For it contains, in easily digested form, practically EVERY building element necessary to energy. And thus provides the kind of sleep that rebuilds and rejuvenates.

You can take it night after night and not only not form a habit, as with drugs, but build up your health as well.

Do you wonder then, that people are flocking to its use? New to America, Ovaltine is being recommended by over 20,000 doctors. Used for 30 years in Europe, its use has spread to over 54 different nations. It marks one of the most important scientific findings of its time.

Try It Tonight

Doctors urge it not only for sleeplessness, but for all nervous and rundown conditions. They recommend it, too, for nervous, underweight children. Thousands of busy people take it during the day to relieve fatigue and restore vitality.

A few weeks' use will make an amazing difference in the way you feel.

Believe or not what people claim for Ovaltine—but try it. Try it without delay. Start tonight. Just phone your druggist or grocer now—ask for a can of Ovaltine.

Where GIANTESS LINERS steam 1000 MILES from the sea

Sorel, at the head of Lake St. Peter in the St. Lawrence

© ASSOCIATED SCREEN NEWS, LTD., MONTREAL

DO YOU KNOW THIS UTTERLY DIFFERENT APPROACH TO EUROPE?

HAVE you heard the dramatic story of America's great seaway? How giantess ocean liners, Europe-bound, steam its salt-water length for 2 days before reaching open ocean? How they sail from America's second largest seaport... Montreal ... 1000 miles from the sea?

Long ago, the Atlantic shouldered its way 1000 miles into the St. Lawrence valley. It created the St. Lawrence seaway... a strip of ocean so like an avenue that early French explorers thought it their long-sought passage to China.

Québec and Montreal, two world seaports, border on its deep channel. Montreal is only an over-night jump for 75% of America's population.

What an amazing thing to embark from Montreal! To breathe the tang of salt-ocean air, and still have charming land vistas on either deck-rail. Habitant villages, rivers, fields and forests... quaint Norman-French Canada bids you a 2-day-long farewell on the St. Lawrence crossing!

Each summer, added thousands of people "discover" the St. Lawrence seaway ... also the Empress liners in their spotless white, holiday attire and the Duchesses. They take this shortest route to and from Europe, because they find it a most delightful way of going.

ROUTE OF THE WHITE EMPRESSES AND DUCHESSES

What accommodations best suit your European holiday budget? Luxurious first-class comforts? ...then embark on a huge Empress. Cabin-class better than first-class of 10 years ago?... take one of the 4 new Duchess liners. You can get the most modern tourist-third and third class, too. Remember, every week there are 3 to 5 Canadian Pacific liners sailing to Europe on the St. Lawrence seaway. Remember, too, that these 18 liners include some of the distinguished ocean giantesses of the world.

Also inquire about "all-expense" House Party Motor Tours, $395 and up, and Collegiate Tours, $335 and up, visiting principal European countries and Passion Play.

CANADIAN Pacific's fleet of 18 liners, headed by the famous white Empresses and Duchesses, takes the St. Lawrence seaway to Europe. These liners steam full speed ahead between its picture-book seacoasts ... 2 miles, 5, 10, 20 miles across. Aboard, ocean pastimes and gaieties start immediately. Two days St. Lawrence seaway, then only 4 days open ocean ... Cherbourg, Havre, Southampton, Antwerp, Hamburg, Liverpool, Glasgow, Belfast, London.

Have you heard about Canadian Pacific's coming bid for Atlantic honors? The giant new Empress of Britain, 40,000 gross tons, nears completion in Scotland. With every luxury afloat, she will sail to Europe via the St. Lawrence seaway in 5 fast days. Look for her in 1931.

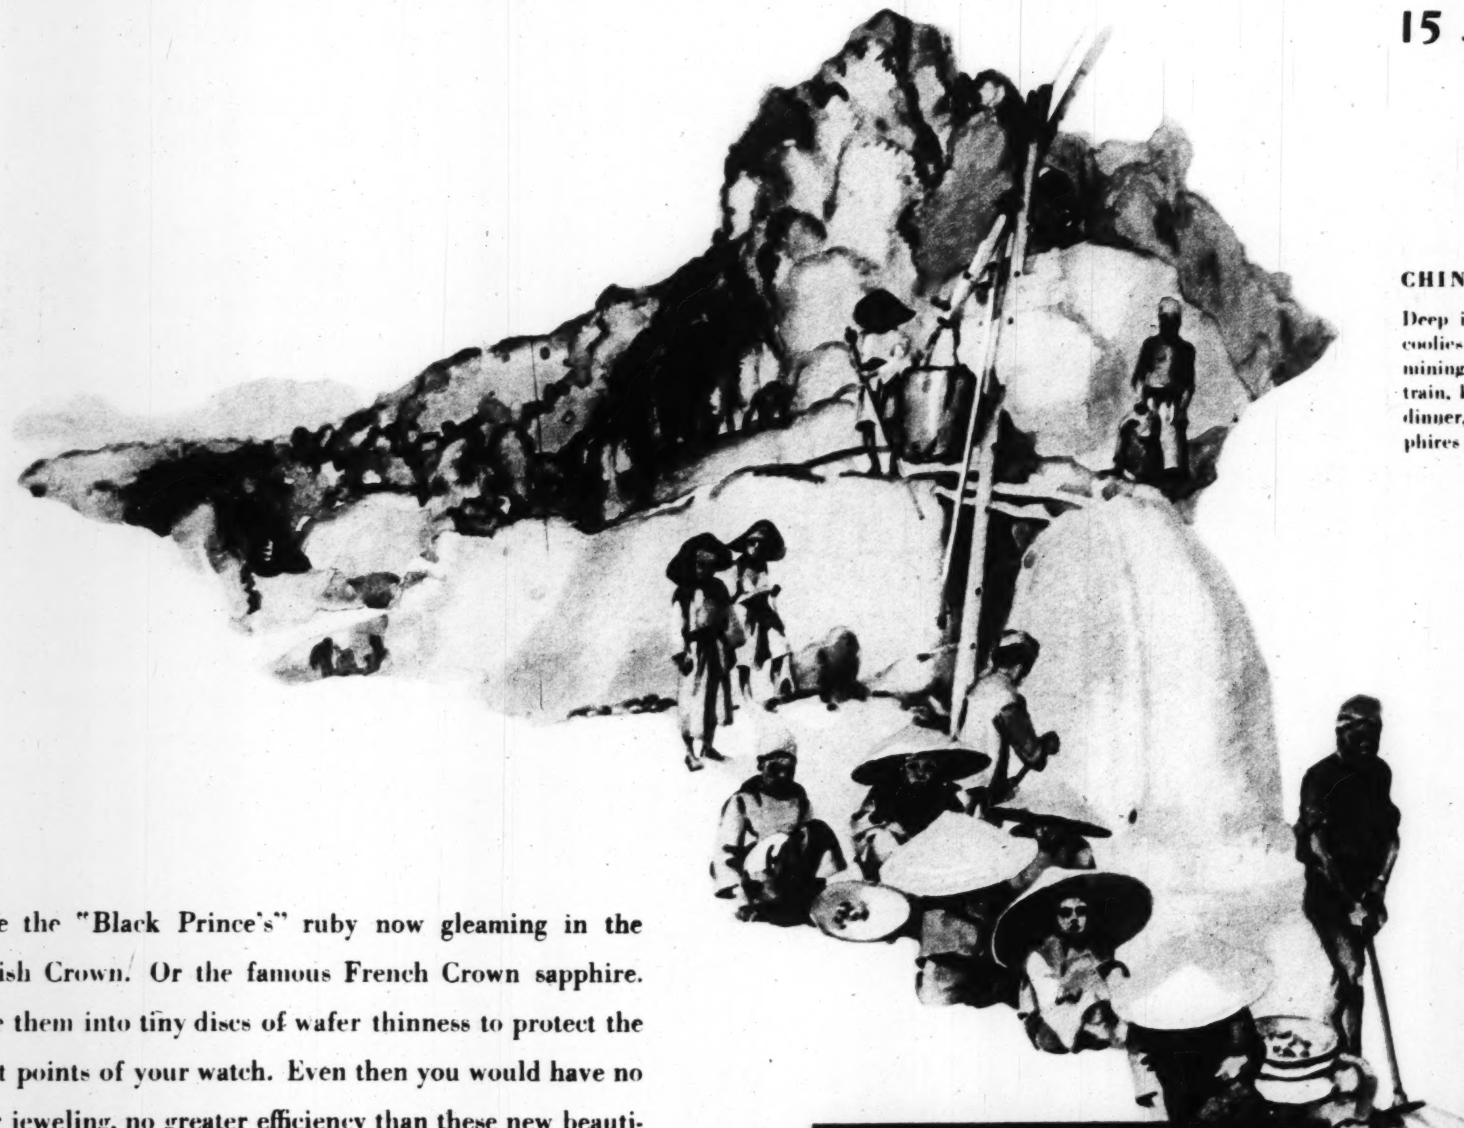
SLICING RUBIES AND SAPPHIRES,

TWO OF NATURE'S HARDEST GEMS, INTO JEWELS

FOR THE NEW ELGIN WATCHES

15 JEWELS $37.50



CHINESE COOLIES MINING IN CEYLON

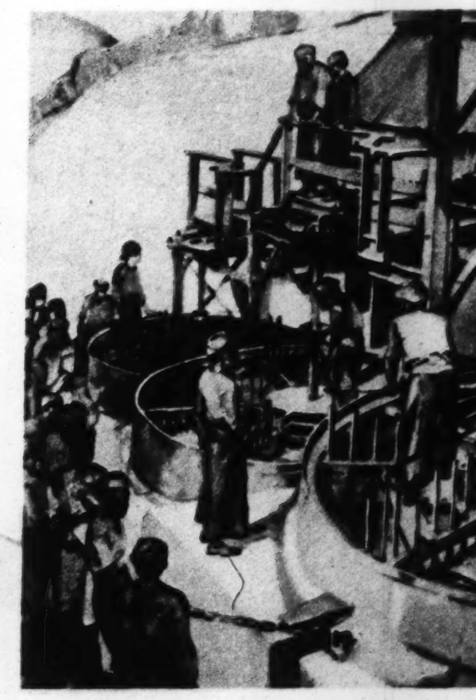
Deep in sand and gravel deposits in Ceylon, Chinese coolies scrabble and muck with infinite Oriental patience, mining the sapphire . . . and years later you make your train, keep your appointments, arrive home in time for dinner, because your Elgin keeps correct time with sapphires guarding its moving points.

Take the "Black Prince's" ruby now gleaming in the British Crown. Or the famous French Crown sapphire. Slice them into tiny discs of wafer thinness to protect the pivot points of your watch. Even then you would have no finer jeweling, no greater efficiency than these new beautiful 15-jeweled $37.50 Elgins bring to you.

Rubies and sapphires . . . two of nature's hardest stones . . . are superbly cut and placed within these Elgins to keep accurate time for unnumbered years.

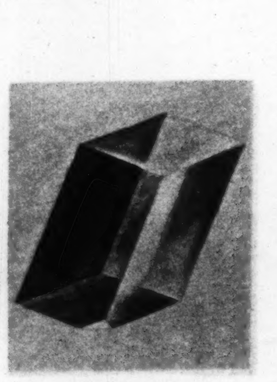
And now you can buy this jeweling, this timekeeping for $37.50 in the five new Elgins just introduced.

Flawless timekeeping sheathed in smartly-fashioned cases, the rigid Elgin guarantee, a new low price—a combination of qualities that place these new Elgins among the greatest watch values ever destined for your wrist.



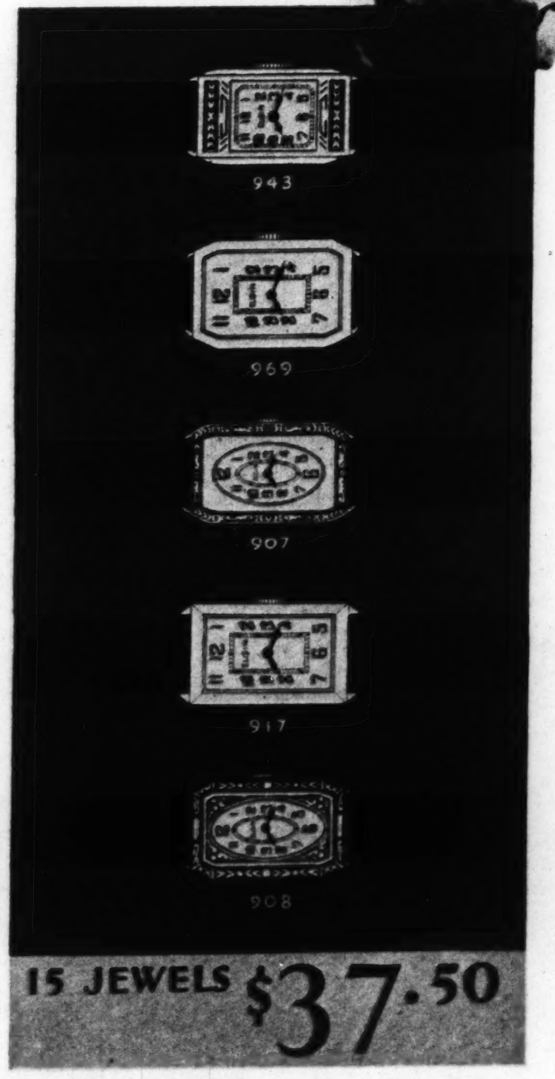
WASHING RUBIES IN BURMAH

Where Elgin timekeeping begins . . . scene in Burmah where rubies are mined by the natives. The ruby, like the sapphire, is a gem of amazing hardness and possesses great resistance to shock and wear. It is used in your Elgin to protect the pivot points and helps to give the watch the accuracy and long life for which it is noted.



THE FAMOUS RUSPOLI SAPPHIRE

It's bluer than blue . . . bluer than seas and skies and my lady's eyes . . . one of the finest sapphires in the world. 132 karats . . . yet without a single flaw. Found in Bengal by a poor man, a peddler of wooden spoons, came into the hands of the Ruspoli family, was owned by a German prince, and, in 1791, became one of the French Crown jewels. Today rests in the Jardin des Plantes of Paris.



15 JEWELS $37.50

THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS RUBY

The "Black Prince's" ruby now in the British Crown. Its value? . . . priceless! Taken by Pedro the Cruel of Castile from the Moorish chieftain Abu Said. Given by Pedro to the Black Prince for his aid in war. Later, in 1415, it glowed in the helmet of Henry V in the battle of Agincourt. And so on thru the English dynasty until this very day.

I NOTICED HIGH-JINKS EDDIE UP ABOVE SLINKING UPSTAIRS WITH A VERY SNEAKY LOOK AS I CAME IN JUST NOW.
HIS WIFE BORROWED MY EGG-BEATER THIS MORNING. HEAVENLY DAYS, DO YOU SUPPOSE THEY'RE GETTING READY FOR ANOTHER ALL-NIGHT PARTY?
SUCH CRUST! I KNEW THAT HANG-DOG LOOK MEANT SOMETHING. WELL, I GIVE HIM FAIR WARNING THAT HE'S MAKING A BIG MISTAKE.
SUCH PEOPLE! IMAGINE! TWO NOISY AFFAIRS IN A FEW MONTHS! DANCING—SINGING—RIGHT OVER OUR HEADS.
WHAT TIME IS IT NOW—ABOUT SEVEN? THOSE ROUGH AFFAIRS USUALLY START ABOUT EIGHT. WE HAVE AN HOUR TO THINK UP SOME WAY TO PROTECT OURSELVES.
I JUST REMEMBER THAT HIS OR HER BIRTHDAY, OR WEDDING ANNIVERSARY, OR SOME SUCH DAY, OCCURS ABOUT THIS TIME.
AH, THEY'RE OFF AT LAST. I HEAR THEM ARGUING ABOUT SOMETHING. PROBABLY ABOUT INVITING A FEW MORE LOWBROWS... WHAT WAS THAT HE SAID?
SH-H! SHE SAID.........THEY'RE BOTH TALKING AT ONCE NOW. HA, IMAGINE WHAT'S AHEAD OF US THIS EVENING.
TICK TICK
TOCK!
I WONDER WHAT TIME IT IS NOW? ABOUT EIGHT THIRTY?
THEY DIDN'T START THEIR LAST BIG PARTY UNTIL ABOUT NINE. THIRTY MINUTES TO WAIT.
THERE'S NINE STRIKING NOW.
I HEAR A MACHINE STOPPING IN FRONT. THAT'S THE GUESTS. I'M GOING OUT IN THE HALL AND MAKE SURE.
THERE'S ANOTHER MACHINE STOPPING..............NO, IT PASSED. SUCH A NIGHT ....I CAN'T SEE A THING.......I HEAR VOICES OH IF IT WAS A LITTLE LIGHTER IN FRONT OF THIS HOUSE.
I WENT OUT IN THE HALL TWICE LOOKING FOR YOU.
WHEN I RAN DOWNSTAIRS THE MACHINE STARTED AWAY THEY MAY HAVE KNOWN I WAS WATCHING THEM AND DECIDED TO COME IN THE REAR ENTRANCE.
NINE THIRTY! I'M SO SLEEPY THAT I CAN HARDLY KEEP AWAKE.
I'M TERRIBLY SLEEPY, TOO. FINE STUFF! I'LL BET THEY DON'T INTEND TO START THE PARTY UNTIL ABOUT TEN. WELL I'VE SHOWN ENOUGH PATIENCE FOR ONE EVENING. I'M GOING UP AND TALK COLD TURKEY TO HIM RIGHT NOW.
THERE'S ANOTHER CAR STOPPING.........IT'S GOING INTO OUR DRIVE. HA, IMAGINE SUCH NERVE. PARKING THEIR MACHINE IN FRONT OF OUR GARAGE SO WE COULDN'T GET OUR CAR OUT IF WE DECIDED TO.........NO, IT'S ONLY THOSE FOLKS NEXT-DOOR COMING HOME.
I HEARD HIM SHOUTING AT YOU. THEN A DOOR SLAMMING.
HE CAME TO THE DOOR IN HIS NIGHTGOWN AND CLAIMED THERE WASN'T TO BE ANY PARTY TONIGHT.
ARE YOU STILL AWAKE, GEORGE? IS THAT TWO OCLOCK STRIKING? THE IDEA OF THOSE PEOPLE LEADING US TO BELIEVE THEY WERE GOING TO HAVE A PARTY AND GETTING US SO EXCITED THAT WE CAN'T SLEEP.
I'VE BEEN THINKING....... THIS IS ANOTHER OF HIS FAST ONES. WELL, I'LL BE LOOKING FOR THE MILK WHEN HE PASSES OUR DOOR IN THE MORNING. AND GIVE HIM THE EXCUSE HE WANTS TO MAKE JUST ONE PASS AT ME. JUST ONE!

"THE MORE YOU EAT THE MORE YOU WANT"
WHEN IS A BABY NOT A BABY?
CANDY STORE
WHEN IT'S A LITTLE BARE!
SURE MAKE THE PANTS FIRST!
DO YOU KNOW HOW TO MAKE YOUR COAT AND VEST LAST

Here's a shiny

Five Dollar Gold Piece for you . . . if you'll send us a Wise-Crack we can use

Do you know any funny, rib-tickling wise-cracks? If you do, here's a chance to turn them into some real money

We want many hundreds of the smartest, funniest wise-cracks you've ever heard in your life. We want them to use in Cracker Jack cartoons.

Every Cracker Jack package from now on will have one of these wise-cracking cartoons of Sailor Jack and his dog Cracker printed on the side. When you think of the millions and millions of packages that are eaten, you can see that we're going to need lots of wise-cracks.

And, of course, we want the very best ones there are—so that's why we are making this big offer—Five Dollars in Gold for every single wise-crack that is sent in to us and that is accepted and used.

Here's the Wise-Cracking Idea!

Glance to the left and see the pictures of Sailor Jack swapping wise-cracks with his dog Cracker That's the kind of wise-cracks we want—one line for Cracker and another line for Jack.

You probably have some good, peppy wise-crack on tap right now that will tickle our funny bone If you have, you can turn it into gold by sending it in to us. The sooner you do this, the better; if you put it off, you might forget. And this offer closes May 30th, 1930

Good Old Cracker Jack

Cracker Jack is the original popcorn, peanut and molasses confection—"the more you eat—the more you want." So good and wholesome that Dad and Mother are glad to pass out nickels for that. They know it helps make husky boys and girls with sturdy arms and legs and red cheeks. And don't forget that there's a surprise for you in every package!

Come on Wise-Crackers—let's go!

THE CRACKER JACK CO.
Established 1872
Chicago and New York

"THE MORE YOU EAT—
THE MORE YOU WANT"

Directions for Wise-Crackers

Above are some sample Cracker Jack wise-cracks. Just two lines—Sailor Jack pops the question and his dog Cracker cracks the comeback. That's the kind we want.

Think over your best ones and send them along quick so you can get in on that bucket of gold pieces.

How to send in your Wise-Cracks

Each wise-crack you send in must be written plainly. Just cut out the side of the Cracker Jack package that has the Sailor Boy and his dog on it and write your wise-crack on the other side. None will be accepted unless submitted like this. You eat lots of Cracker Jack anyway and this method will simplify our handling of all the wise-cracks. In case more than one person sends in the same wise-crack and it is accepted and used, each one will receive a five dollar gold piece

IMPORTANT

Your name, address and age must be written plainly under your wise-crack. If you don't do this, how are we going to send you your Five Dollar Gold Piece?

Mail your wise-cracks to The Cracker Jack Wise-Crackers. The Cracker Jack Company Chicago, Illinois
